TO FEMALES in DELICATE HEALTH.

Dr. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, No. 7
Edinboro Street, Boston, is consulted daily
by all diseases incident to the female system.
Prolaps Uteri or Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other Menstrual derangements, are all treated on new pathological principles, and speedy relief guaranteed in a very few days. No invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledge no superior in the United States.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 6th, 1866.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

A HAPPY NEW YEAR. Perhaps our readers may think from the manner in which we appear before them, that our greeting is not from the heart—but a divided one. To correct any such impression, we would assure them that it is sincere—heartyly given, as we hope it will be received. That the return of peace will bring with it prosperity and its attendant blessings, is an era of better times. We feel under present appearances, that an apology is due our subscribers. The truth is, it was our intention, on the opening of the New Year, that the Patriot should appear in a new dress—for by the increasing favors from our advertising friends and others, it has outgrown its old one. Accordingly, new type and other materials had been procured from the foundry, for the change; and an order sent to New York for a press of larger size—on which to spread out the dimensions of the new dress. But the press did not arrive per agreement, to our disappointment; and the matter which was put in type, intended for this number, consumed so much time, that at the last moment, rather than break the chain in our weekly communications, and concluding that "a half loaf was better than no bread," we felt obliged to adopt as our only alternative our present course, and throw ourselves upon the indulgence of the reader.

"All's well that ends well."

And if our patrons will bear with us a little longer, we promise them that we shall soon be in a situation to make ample amends for all our shortcomings.

Advertisers will please accept the above for the non-appearance of many of their favors. It is all we have to offer. The truth is, we are in a terrible tight fix—never was worse cornered—but by another week we hope all things will be set right—and then all complaints will be cheerfully attended to.

FIRE. A small frame dwelling house, on Summer street, in this town, owned and occupied by Mr. Daniel Dinegan, was discovered to be on fire, about three o'clock, yesterday morning, and was entirely consumed, with its contents, a barn and a small barn belonging to an adjoining owner. The inmates were only aroused from their slumbers, and a sense of their danger, by the smoke and flames bursting into their apartments, in season to save their lives. Mr. Dinegan, in the excitement of the moment, had seized a trunk, containing $130 in money, a watch, and other valuable, which he was obliged to drop, and which were lost, to attend to the safety of his family. Every thing was swept away—not an article of furniture was saved; and in this situation, father, mother and children, were turned into the street, on a bleak, cold winter morning, with only what they had on their backs. It is a hard case, but more so, when it is recollected that this is the third time, within a few years, Mr. D. has suffered from a similar cause. The wind, at the time the fire broke out, was blowing brisk and freezing, from the northwest, and the engines, (the Niagara and Tiger), which were promptly on the spot, had to keep in constant motion, to prevent their machines from freezing up; but they rendered efficient services, and by their fiery energy checked the progress of the flames. The occupants of the surrounding buildings were for a season under some apprehensions, for the sparks and cinders flew in every direction; the next house below, tenanted by Messrs. Reed and French—the one to which the barn destroyed belonged, had its paint defaced, and its wood-work some what injured. This was the extent of the damages.

The fire probably was accidental.

The house only was covered by a small insurance at the Insurance Office in Dedham.

NEW YEAR'S TREE. Although we were not present we learn that there was a large gathering at the Hancock Street Church Monday evening. The tree we are told had a good yield and everybody seemed delighted. Music and recitations came first, reflecting credit on those taking part. One of the pieces recited was a touching story of a soldier at Andersonville, written for the Home Monthly. It was so admirably rendered as to bring up the Editor present, who evidently with "a brave business," turned the incident to account, by commending the Monthly to the patronage of those present. More than one hundred their names to him after the service.

Why want some of our young friends "read up" our Poetry columns, when preparing for their celebration, so as to give somebody a clever chance to advertise the Patriot?

THE LADIES' FAIR "AT BRAINTREE. We would call the attention of the reader to the "Ladies' Fair" which is to come off at the Town Hall, at BRAINTREE, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, of next week. The Fair is for a most praise worthy object—to raise means to aid in erecting a monument in commemoration of the patriotic services of those of her citizens who fell in battle during the late war. A tribute of respect to the living for the dead. To preserve the memories of her lamented heroes, that future generations may learn their noble deeds, and emulate their virtues. The Hall will be splendidly trimmed and decorated; and the other accompaniments customary on such occasions, will be on an extensive scale, and of a most attractive character. The Committee of Arrangements—Messrs. Hobart, French, Alcorn and Arnold, have the matter in hand, and will spare no exertion to make the exhibition one of unusual interest, and well worth a visit. BRAINTREE sends greeting to the patriotic sister towns; let it meet with a cheering response.

MINISTERIAL PRESENTATION. Rev. Nathaniel Hall, Dorchester, was presented on Christmas day, by several of his parishioners, with a sum teaching nearly $3000.

Notes from the life of a retiring Merchant.

Quincy, Dec. 30th, 1865.

The following brief sketch of the life of one of our most esteemed fellow-citizens, we cheerfully transfer to our columns. Mr. Briceley, it will be seen, has been before this community as a business man, for fifty years. And during that long period, by industry and perseverance, integrity, and the more ennobling virtues, has secured a handsome competency, and raised up a host of friends, whose best wishes he will carry with him into his retirement, and those upon whom his mantle has fallen.

At the close of this year, I retired from business. The new year, 1866, opens a new and different scene before me. As I have made the change, and given the situation which I held in my store to my grandson—I thought I would give a brief account of my first experience in business.

I remained at home, with my parents, on the Mount Wollaston farm, (which my father occupied at that time) until I arrived at the age of sixteen years. I then went to Boston, and lived with Mr. Samuel Bates, nephew of the late Stephen Bates. I remained with him a few months only—his place of business was on Broad street. He did not carry on a very extensive business, and I came to the conclusion that I should like more to do; for that reason alone, I left him. For a short season, my time was wholly unoccupied—But Providence smiled upon me. I found a situation at the South End, with Mr. Lemuel Packard, Jr.—and here I found plenty of work. Business was carried on to a great extent at the South End at that time. I remained with Mr. Packard nearly six years. In 1815—April 25th—my father bought the place where I now reside, of Mr. Eliza Adams, of Boston. On the first day of January, 1816, my father and myself commenced business together. We continued the connection until May 3, 1831, at which time I purchased of my father the whole estate, and all the stores contained. The store being very small and inconvenient, I concluded, in 1837, to build a new one; better adapted to my purposes. From the time I commenced business in Quincy, up to the present date, will be fifty years.

In closing, I wish to thank all my friends for their kindness toward me, during my sojourn here, and hoping to meet with them often, I wish them all a Happy New Year.

JOHN BRICELEY.

SCHOOL FESTIVAL. A Christmas—New Year's festival was held in the Washington Grammar School room, on the afternoon of last Monday, January 1st.

The room was most tastefully decorated with evergreen, the trimmings being of a very high order of excellence. All the Teachers of the several Washington Schools were present, and quite a large number of the friends of the school. The scholars of the Intermediate and First Primary Schools were marched through the room and given an ample opportunity to view the beautiful tree and its valuable fruiting. The tree, (the first tree that grew there) was beautifully laden with some four hundred presents, most of them being articles of utility, and quite a number of them of no little value. We think no one of the school was overlooked in the disposition of presents, while many a heart beat with gladness at the reception of needed and well-selected gifts from the hands of their friends.

Misses Amelia Mead, Louise Simpson, Lillie Starbuck and Nellie Hersey, and Masters Edie Souther, Frank Hayden and Henry Mudge, entertained the company with select readings and recitations, with credit to themselves.

The exercises in gymnastics were very fine, and the singing by the school was worthy of the musical genius of Quincy Point.

The Principal of the School, (Mr. C. W. Carter), was presented with a beautiful copy of Willis's poems and other valuable gifts, and the Assistant, (Miss D. A. French), was the recipient of well selected, useful and ornamental tokens of the friendship and esteem of her scholars.

Well chosen remarks were made by E. G. Pratt, Esq., and H. P. Smith, Esq., and caustic remarks by the Principal. The festival was pronounced by all present, a decided success—and will no doubt be renewed next year hence.

THE INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL. The Washington Intermediate School had a Christmas Tree on the afternoon of Tuesday last at their school room. The tree was laden with pleasing gifts for the members of the school, and the occasion was one of interest to teachers, scholars and parents. The school room was nicely trimmed, and every thing passed off pleasantly.

A Good Pig.

On the 13th of May, 1865, I purchased a pair of Pigs of Mr. Hail, Kidder Street, they then being just six weeks old. On the 22nd of Dec. they were killed, being eight months and fifteen days old. One of them dressed and was sold for three hundred and forty pounds.

The breed is a cross between the Chester and the Columbia County.

If any one has raised a better pig taking the age into consideration, I hope this will call out a report of it.

GEO. H. ARNOLD.

REAL ESTATE IN NORTH DISTRICT. The dwelling house recently erected by H. W. Blanchard, on Quincy Avenue, near Atlantic Station, has been sold to Mr. George W. Billings.

The cottage on Atlantic street, built some years ago by Col. Isaac H. Wright, has recently been purchased, improvements have been made about the premises, and it is now occupied by the owner.

Mr. E. H. Perkins, of Dorchester, has commenced a house on Walnut street, making the sixth built in that part of the town, since the commencement of the war.

Two gentlemen from Boston, owners of lots on Pitt street, are making arrangements to build early in the spring.

Every bank in the State has become a national institution with the exception of the North Bridgewater bank.

Quincy Charitable Society.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

We deem the following letter worthy of insertion in your columns, as exhibiting a generous thoughtfulness on the part of one of our absent townsmen, well worthy the imitation of those who remain at home. Let every man who has failed to become a member of the CHARITABLE SOCIETY, by paying the requisite fee ask himself whether he has done his duty by the Town's Suffering Poor.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28, 1865.

To the Treasurer of the Q. Charitable Socy.

"KIND FRIEND: I am inclined to the opinion that I did not pay my assessment a year ago. As it was due about the time of my getting ready, I might have forgotten it, I herewith enclose two dollars for last year and this. Please acknowledge the receipt, and inform me if I did or did not pay a year ago. I hope, as far as you are able, there will be none allowed to suffer for the wants of life during the winter that is approaching—as we live among a poor people, and in a country that brings forth abundantly and in regard to which, we can adopt the language of the Psalmist:

"Our lines have fallen on pleasant places—God has given us a goodly heritage."

"With my respects to the President, and other officers, and to all the members, I am, your most obedient servant,

"JOSEPH G. BRACKETT."

STATE GOVERNMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS FOR 1866. Messrs. B. B. Russell & Co., 55 Cornhill, Boston, have issued a copyright photograph under the above title, representing the State House in the centre, with portraits of Governor Alexander H. Bullock, Lt. Governor, William Claiborn, Secretary of State, Oliver Warner, Treasurer, Jacob H. Loring, Auditor, Henry S. Briggs, Attorney General, Chester L. Reed, artistically arranged around it—the whole forming a fine picture, and a happy group of intellectual faces. The design is tasteful, and the artistic execution of the highest finish. They are published in two styles—a smaller size, for albums, at 15 cents, and a larger, for framing, at 50 cents. Those who would like to obtain a correct and life-like representation of these distinguished personages for other purposes, can do so by addressing the publishers.

THE MALDEN MURDERER. In the case of Edward W. Green, the murderer of young Converse, teller of the Malden Bank which has been before the Executive Council for some time, it was decided by a yeas and nays vote, after a long debate Tuesday forenoon, not to commute his sentence to imprisonment for life. Six Councilors voted against commutation and three in favor. The matter therefore goes over to the new Council, the murderer in the meanwhile lying in jail.

TEMPERANCE meeting in the Town Hall next Tuesday evening. The usefulness of "Secret Temperance Societies" will be the subject for discussion; and the second number of the paper—the "Temperance Star" will be read. There ought to be a full house.

RE-ELECTION OF OFFICERS. At the regular annual meeting of the Stockholders of the National Mount Wollaston Bank, held on Tuesday last, the following were re-elected Directors for the year ensuing, viz: Wm. S. Perry, Lewis Bass, Joseph W. Robertson, Edward Turner, William S. Mott, Francis M. Johnson, John Q. Adams, Eleazar Frederick, Edwin B. Pratt.

At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Directors, Edward Turner, Esq., was unanimously re-elected President.

LOSS OF A FAVORITE HORSE. As a young man in the employ of Warner & Nash, was driving a horse yesterday, which had been in the possession of Mr. Briceley for over ten years, he stepped into a deep rut, breaking his leg, making it necessary to kill him.

Marriages.

In Milton, on the 1st inst., by Rev. A. K. Teele, Mr. George T. Russell to Miss Mary Blackman, all of Milton.

In Yarmouth Port, on the 25th ult., by Rev. V. Lincoln, Mr. Alonzo A. Nightingale, to Miss Anna C. Ryder, of Barnstable.

In Leominster, (Mass.) on the 31st ult., by Rev. William J. Butt, Corporal Frank G. Carter, to Miss Mattie Stevenson, all of that place.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 27th ult., Mrs. Margaret, wife of Mr. James Fury, aged 38 years and 2 months.

In Brighton, on the 30th ult., Mr. James Newcomb, formerly of this town, aged 65 years and 8 months.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Webster's Spelling book is in such great demand for the reconstruction of the South that American printers cannot supply the demand, and the publishers have sent to Europe to get it printed. Over one million copies have been sold since April, and orders are now one hundred thousand in advance of the supply.

Well! said a senator after he had heard read the message of the President, "if a man educated on a tailor's workbench can write such a document as that, of what use are universities and colleges?"

Some members of Congress are receiving $1,100 mileage this session.

The colored people of Richmond had a mass meeting in the African church on Monday, to celebrate the anniversary of their emancipation. In Petersburg the negroes celebrated the day by a grand procession, with banners and public speaking.

In clearing out the Mashpaw ice houses at Providence, R. I. a piece of ice was found which was housed 14 years ago.

It is asserted that not less than $750,000 of counterfeit five and one hundred dollar United States Treasury notes are at present in circulation. They are so well executed as almost to defy detection.

The number of postage stamps made by the National Bank Note Company for the year 1865, has been about four hundred millions. The number of three-cent stamps used is about one million per day. The stamps are printed, perforated, gummed and packed for twelve cents a thousand!

Seamens of the Alabama arrived in Washington on Friday. He is at present confined in the Penitentiary building, where the assassination conspirators were tried, but probably be placed in the Old Capitol prison. His trial will begin January 8th, in the Navy Department building.

It is stated that from two to three million dollars worth of boots and shoes have been imported into this country from Europe, within a few weeks, in consequence of the high price of those manufactured at home.

Edward F. Ketchum, the New York banker, and swindler, has been sentenced to the State Prison for four years and six months.

Boston was once the home of tea importers but New York now monopolizes the entire trade. Thirty million pounds, about a pound to each person, are annually imported into this country.

A seizure of about six hundred dollars worth of spices and brandies together with a team was made Monday last week, by the Custom House officer at Newport.

Two boys in Roxbury, Mass., got drunk on Sunday, and were left in an out of the way place by their companions, where they were found some time afterwards insensible from the cold.

Mrs. Mary Clay a lady 75 years of age, residing in Lexington, Me. has spun 515 skeins of fine woolen yarn during the past season, and is still at work.

General Grant was presented on New Year's Day with a carefully selected library, from fifty Boston gentlemen, headed by Hon. Samuel Hooper. The gift cost $5000.

Tom Thumb, having neglected to make a return of his income to the English commissioners, has been doomed to pay a tax on $60,000 a year.

The current price of hicks in New York for New Year's Day was $40 each, and they were scarce at that figure.

They are trying to find a young man in Chicago who is heir to $100,000. Several young ladies in other cities are looking for one just like him.

Philadelphia has appropriated $20,000 to maintain inspectors to see to the condition of the city as to cleanliness.

During the past twelve months 171 pedestrians were killed in New York by being run over by vehicles; 163 were drowned and 62 maimed or wounded so severely that death soon ensued.

It is proposed to propel the street cars on the Albany and West Troy track by the use of compressed air, to be supplied to a reservoir in each car from a great reservoir at each terminus. It is said that a car can carry enough compressed air to propel it ten miles at a proper rate of speed, and that it can be run at a cost of two dollars and a half per day.

The proprietor of a New York dining saloon made a Thanksgiving cake for the five Point men, weighing 400 pounds, and containing 120 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of flour, 70 pounds of butter, 60 pounds of fruit and 850 eggs. It is 9 feet long, 21 inches wide, and 10 inches thick.

The National Bank Note Co., during this year, has furnished Government with four hundred million postage stamps, of denominations ranging in value from one to ninety cents each. During the month of March last, one hundred and two millions nine hundred and twenty-six thousand six hundred and thirty stamps were delivered to the Government, representing in value three millions five hundred and seven thousand one hundred and ninety-six dollars.

A man recently separated from his wife because she used a pound of tea a week. He found he had liked to her with all the eloquence of a Cicero but without effect.

A man living in Atlanta, Ga., sent to a newspaper publisher the sum of $50,000 in gold and silver money, with the inquiry whether that would pay for a subscription to the paper for one month.

Five eclipses will take place in 1866, three of the sun and two of the moon. Two of them will be partly visible in Paris—one of the moon, March 30, and another of the sun, October 8.

Last year the stove trade of Troy was immense. Sixteen thousand tons of iron were sold, and one hundred and fifty thousand stoves were sent to market.

Mrs. Jennie Varney is now living in Ossipee, N. H., one hundred and two years old. Her mother lived to be one hundred and four.

A fat man in Paris sold his body to the surgeons for 1200 francs, went on a spree with the money, died, and was immediately cut up.

The Providence Bulletin gives a detailed account of the achievements of a hen, in the town of Warren, R. I., from the 28th of April last to the 23rd of November last. In that period the busy biddy laid seventy-six eggs, besides incubating twice, once bringing off five turkeys and three ducks, and the next time hatching eleven chickens. The money result of dame Partlett's labors was $26.37: her rations for the seven months cost $9, and the balance to profit was $17.37.

President Johnson, it is estimated, received about 3,000 "calls," on New Year's Day, in the blue room of the White House. Negroes were admitted to the reception for the first time.

Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, The Best and Safest Company IN THE UNITED STATES.

Why is it the best and safest? Because it has more than double the cash assets of any Life Insurance Company, and will earn more than any Company in this country for the policy holder.

Read, are you insured? If not please call upon the undersigned and take a policy, or leave your name and residence, and be waited upon there.

AN EXAMPLE!

Showing the working of a Policy of Life Insurance in

The Mutual Life Insurance Company,

OF NEW YORK.

Which has just been paid, as follows:—

The late Hon. DAVID PERKINS, of Bridgewater Mass., took out a Policy in 1854 for the benefit of his family for $5,000, upon which he paid annually $148.20. Previous to our last dividend in 1865, he had paid in all nine payments amounting to $1,333.80. The dividends added to his policy like the interest added to a Savings Bank book, were $1,661.05, being $327.25 more, than he had paid on his policy, making the worth of his policy at our last dividend $6,661.05. Still another payment will be due when we make our next dividend in 1866, which will exceed the two payments made since.

If the $148.20 paid annually in this case had been deposited in a Savings Bank paying 6 per cent. compound interest, the amount due the depositor after nine years would be only $1,953.39, against the present worth of this policy $6,661.05. Difference $4,707.66.

The above example proves that money placed in the MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. OF NEW YORK, earns far more and is safer than if deposited in our best Savings Bank, as the policy holder gets the advantage of the large surplus and assets of

LINES

Inscribed to Mr. and Mrs. Parker of New Haven, Conn., on the death of their only remaining son.

How lonely will seem the old dwelling
The house with its roof bending low,
The trees and the flowers and berries,
Where Merritt once wandered, you know.

How the eyes of the parents run over
With tears that are glistening like dew,
As they look on the chairs at the table
Once crowded, where now are but two.

I remember the words of his blessing,
When first I was spoken a bride,
How his spirit invoked love's caressing,
Whatever my feet may betide.

I remember it now, and I'm weeping,
In union with those who must mourn,
For the eyes that are closed in their sleeping,
Where the gaze that is fixed ne'er will turn.

But oh! stricken mother, remember,
Though the tears that are fast falling now,
You may look through life's opening vista,
Where glory encircles his brow.

Remember a rainbow of promise
Is set in the blue of the sky,
And the colors which shine in their beauty
Are made from the purest of dyes.

The sun that's eternal, shines ever,
And beams slant athwart the warm tear,
There's a light in the heavens forever,
And its glory—your promise is here.

Mrs. M. L. B. EWELL.
Quincy, Dec. 24th, 1865.

Scraps.

Cocoon Straps. Take Iceland moss two ounces, four poppy heads, four tablespoonful of barley, put in three pints of water; boil it down to two, and strain it. Add one pound of sugar. Dose, a tablespoonful whenever the cough is troublesome.

Another: Boil down thoroughwort to a thick syrup, and sweeten with molasses. This cures when other remedies fail.

A traveller relating his experience in the East Indies, alluded to the great number of servants employed by gentlemen in that country. To take care of my pipe, said he, I had four servants. Is it possible. Yes; it was the duty of the first to bring me the pipe; the second filled it; the third lighted it. And what did the fourth do. The fourth smoked it—I never could bear tobacco myself.

A Paris correspondent tells the following story:—A newly made doctor, practising in the suburbs of Paris, was called in by a small shopkeeper to see his child, suffering from a sudden illness. He gave a prescription, went away, and called again in two days after. The woman met him at the door wringing her hands, with her face bathed in tears. How is the child? Dead, was the agonized answer. Dead! what with? The mother gasped at weeping mother. Mon Dieu! thundered the doctor; wretched woman, you have killed your child. If you had only told me that it was the measles I could have prescribed for it directly.

A shrewd preacher, after an eloquent charity sermon, said to his hearers: I am afraid from the sympathy displayed in your countenances, that some of you may give too much. I caution you therefore, that you should be just before you are generous; and I wish you to understand that I desire no one who cannot pay his debts to put anything in the plate. The collection was a rare one.

Blessed are they that are deaf, for they never lend money nor listen to tedious stories.

Many persons confess their depravity, but defend their conduct. They are wrong in general, but right in particular.

A horse dealer, describing a used up horse, said he looked so "if he had been editing a daily newspaper."

Many years since an Eastern man, on his way to Boston, was stopped on the highway by a robber, and requested to hand over his money, or have his brains blown out. Oh, said the traveller, quietly, blow away; it is better to go to Boston without brains than without money.

A Dutchman's heart-rendering soliloquy is described thus:—"She loves Shon Mickle so petter as I, because he has got a couple tollars more as I has."

The reason why woman has her way so much oftener than man, is that both he and she are conscious that her way is the best.

He is happier who has little and with that little content, than he who has much with impatience for more.

If you would pass for more than your value, say little. It is easier to look wise than to talk wise.

Men often attempt, by the light of reason, to discover the mysteries of eternity. They might as well hold up a candle to see the stars.

Men often are not aware of what severe and unfruitful labor they are capable, until they have made trial of their strength.

In a country church-yard this epitaph may be seen:—"Here lies the body of James Robinson, and Ruth his wife," and underneath, "Their warfare is accomplished."

Those who feed on slander are always hungry.

Miscellaneous.

The Old Clock.

The sunset was piling its temples of fire and amethyst over the dark hills that seemed to touch the flaming West: the whippoorwill moaning its plaintive cadence on the ruinous fence beyond the old mill, was answered by the ripple of the stream in the sweet, dream-like repose of a summer twilight.

Ralph Vane had stood waiting at the moose stile for two long hours—waiting and watching in vain.

"She is coming at last—at last!" he muttered between his set teeth, as a slight rustling in the bushes struck his ear.

No—it was but a robin darting homeward to his nest, half terrified at being out so late, and once more the deep, peaceful quiet brooded over the silent meadows.

"It's too late," he said, as the village church spire chimed nine. "She will not come now, and I have the ineffable satisfaction of knowing that I am a fool. She never loved me—she never cared for me, else she would have come here to tell me good bye. It may be the last time she will ever look upon my face. Much she cares, pretty, deceiving little coquette—yet I fancied, blind block-head that I have been, that she loved me."

He dashed a suspicious drop of moisture from his eyelashes as he spoke, and plunged in the dense, fragrant woods, as if he would fain bring himself away from human ken.

"Such magnificent wild strawberries as I have found down in the pasture lot, mother. Only look!"

And Rachel Bensley held up her apron full of scarlet berries blushing through silver-green leaves.

She was a pretty, rosy girl, with shining black hair, and brown eyes, that had the velvet softness of a gazelle's—a rustic beauty, whose sun bonnet was tied as coquettishly under her chin, as if it had been a French chip hat that had cost forty dollars.

"Put them down daughter," said Mrs. Bensley. Widow Moore has been here, and what do you think she says?"

"I don't know."

"She says that Ralph Vane has enlisted and gone off to the wars. He left the village last night."

Rachel sat down, the rosy bloom dying out of her cheeks, and leaving a ghastly pallor behind.

"Mother," she wailed, "do you believe that it is true?"

"I am afraid so, daughter. Do not fret—he isn't worth it, to leave you in this sort of way—you that he was as good as engaged to! Oh, Rachel, I couldn't have believed it!"

Rachel laid aside her bonnet, and began mechanically to punch the green stems from her strawberries, but she said no more. From that moment she never mentioned Ralph Vane's name; all the tears she shed, were wept in secret.

And father Bensley, leaning against the porch pillar, drew a long breath of relief.

"She don't take it very hard, after all," he muttered, "I'm glad it's well over. Ralph Vane never would have made a good husband for her."

Three years passed away, and Captain Vane was walking up a crowded city street absorbed in his own meditations, when suddenly he stopped.

"Now what was it brought the wide old kitchen at Farmer Bensley's so suddenly to my mind just then," he thought. "I could take my oath I saw the old clock, just as it used to stand above the chintz covered settee."

And—hallo! there it is!

There it was—ticking monotonously away in the window of a dingy, little second-rate pawnbroker's establishment, on the corner where two narrow streets met.

Following the first impulse of the moment, he opened the door and went in.

"What is the price of that old fashioned clock in the window?" he asked.

"That clock?" said the Jewish-looking individual in attendance.

"Well, you can have that clock cheap bein' there's somethin' ails the striking apparatus, and it was such a shabby old thing we didn't care to have it overhauled. Two dollars for that clock is sayin' pretty fair."

"I should think so," observed Captain Vane, "as it cost no more than that when new. However, I will take it—for the sake of old times," he murmured to himself.

"Yes sir; I'll do it up directly."

"By the way, where did you get it?" he asked; with an affection of carelessness which he by no means felt.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Jan. 13th, 1866.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

OUR SITUATION. The prospect now is, that we shall be able to carry out our contemplated improvements in the course of next week. We are only waiting the press, and that we learn is on its way.

COLD WEATHER. Those sanguine mortals who were congratulating themselves, from certain unfailing signs, that we were to have a remarkably mild winter, were brought to sorrow and disappointment, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, of last week, and Sunday and Monday of this week. The weather, with but few exceptions, had been unusually pleasant, up to that time; but here, Nature, in one of her freaks, reversed the order of things. The thermometer began rapidly to fall, and by Monday had reached a point, which it was not safe to contemplate only over a good fire. It is said to be the coldest snap experienced for sixty years. It was accompanied by a drifting snow-storm, and appears to have extended with more or less severity, over a large portion of the country. At Washington, on Monday morning, the thermometer was a number of degrees below zero. On Sunday, in consequence of the storm and the extreme cold, there were no afternoon services at our churches.

PICK-POCKETS. Boston has not improved much in this respect, notwithstanding her new police regulation; her reformation is not to be effected in a day; strangers should use caution when they have occasion to mix with her population. One of our citizens, Mr. Charles P. Tirrell, had business which called him to the city, on Saturday last; and while in the act of entering the cars, at the Old Colony Depot, Kneeland street, on his return trip, a genteel dressed person, approached, and accosted him, in a most friendly and courteous manner—"Old gentleman take care of yourself!" Mr. T. thought he had no occasion for such advice, and paid no attention to it at the time—but almost immediately after, on feeling in his pocket, for his wallet, containing five dollars, he found it gone, and with it, his quondam friend and counsellor; whom he supposes in his apparent anxiety for the safety of his person, had taken the opportunity to relieve him of his money. Mr. Tirrell had prudently taken with him from home, only what money he would require for his immediate use—otherwise he might have had greater cause of complaint.

This Depot seems to have become the headquarters of a nest of pickpockets. Since preparing the above, we have heard of other cases of their dexterous art. Mr. Jacob Hersey, of the Point, had his pockets picked, recently, at the same place, of fifteen dollars; and other of our citizens have been bled in a similar manner. Let the Directors of the road, for their own sake and the public safety, attend to the matter.

THE LATE FIRE. We are glad to perceive that the sympathies of the community are being awakened in behalf of Mr. Dinegan, who was so great a sufferer at the late fire on Friday morning last. This is as it should be. By this calamity, Mr. D. lost almost every thing—house, furniture, money, and even clothing. Mr. Dinegan is a hard working man—has a large family to support—was one of the veterans of the late war—and if any one has a claim on our bounty—to the support and encouragement of a liberal community—no more worthy object can be found.

SALES OF REAL ESTATE. There appears to be numerous sales of real estate in this place of late. Quite a number of houses have been purchased by H. H. Faxon, Esq., those we have heard of are situated as follows, viz:—

House in Maple Place; house on Edward's Hill; house at Point Holes; house on Kidder Street; house at Braintree Neck.

APPOINTMENTS. John W. Thomas High Sheriff of this county, entered upon his fourth term of official service on the 3d inst. Sheriff Thomas has appointed the following Deputies who have been duly qualified, A. B. Endicott, of Dedham; George W. White, Jr., of Weymouth; Rufus C. Wood, of Canton; William H. Warren, of Randolph; Washington M. French, of Quincy; John J. Merrill, of Roxbury; John Robie, of Dorchester; John D. Bradlee, of Milton; John B. Ingalls, of Wrentham; V. R. Coombs, of West Medway; Alexander Fairbanks, of Medway.

NATIONAL GRANITE BANK. At a meeting of the Stockholders, on the 9th inst., the following gentlemen were elected directors for the ensuing year.

Charles Marsh, Jesse Buntin, Josiah Brigham, Charles R. Mitchell,
Daniel Baxter, Edwin S. Bradford,
James Torrey, John D. Wincher.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors Mr. Charles Marsh, was re-elected President.

Our Weymouth readers will find two interesting articles from their place on our first page.

South Weymouth, Jan. 10, 1866.

The inhabitants of "China" discard improvements; here, there is no occasion for a patent office; they are an agricultural people, yet their implements are three thousand years behind advanced civilization. Old cories live and die, content on the achievements inherited from their sires. The men of mark, and the autocrat of thought, are progressive—burst off original ideas and bides the sequence. Such have been the master spirits, in the world's drama, since Titus made Jerusalem tremble and fall with his one horse "battering ram." Hannibal, the Carthaginian Field Marshal, in crossing the Alps and beleaguering Imperial Rome, executed a "dodge" never contemplated by the sages of his haughty realm. Martin Luther, in questioning the infallibility of the Holiness the Pope, and in annihilating the cories of Saint Peter's Vice Regent, unheeded the admonitions of learned savants, and spurred the trodden paths of old profound theologians. Lord Admiral Nelson, became the lion of naval warfare, by exploding old rules of combination, and substituting, rapidly of evolution, concentration and dash; Robert Fulton astonished the natives and all mankind, by inaugurating the first flank movement with steam—propelling a boat up the Hudson River! frightening the old Dutch Knickerbockers into an idea that Beitzebub was unchained, and final accounts not far off Dr. Franklin, when he grappled with fork lightning, and handled the sulphur flashes of light with steel ribbons, jumped over all prior essays on electricity; left in abeyance, promulgated science, and the research of favorite professors. Henry Wilson, the "Natick Cobler," by New Hampshire presumption and vulgar back-bone, has, against Court usage, knocked hereditary succession, from high, elective position, in this Commonwealth, by consenting to have his sub name used as United States Senator, in competition with first families, and Harvard University classical scholars. General Benjamin Butler did not heed Scott's military code, when he gave orders for the glorious Mass. 7th Regiment to march through Baltimore and succor Washington, against Maryland's semi-forgotten Governor and frightened demurer; or in connecting the salt-petre gunboat magazine, for the conservation and capture of Fort Fisher; the boldest and grandest scheme projected during the rebellion—only for West Point negative agencies, in the closing finale.

In this vein of soliloquy, our imagination becomes fixed upon a gentleman, who has performed herculean labor, still looks young; who proverbially executes whatever he undertakes; never reverses the engine till head quarter station is reached; who in matters of choice roadsters is esteemed an expert; who, when seen on business thoroughfares, reins a steed, whose proud, elastic steps, would indicate that Professor Carey had been whispering ambition and the art of portraiture in the animal's ear, and that the component part of his nourishment, were oats, crackers, sponge-cake and eggs—with carriage and harness to correspond; who for some fifteen years has been proprietor of a lively stable in one of the prettiest and most flourishing villages of this Commonwealth; his management thereof, close application to duties, kind regard to the wants and comforts of patrons, secured extensive and remunerative trade, and hosts of friends, who believe in the Napoleonic idea of progress; thus acting, we find him, a year or two since, disposing of his best estate at auction, at a fair margin over original outlays; with the dawn of A. D. 1866—Presto! the veteran Marshal of the whip reappears at the old stand—Captain, General, and Executive Officer of the best appointed Livery Establishment south-east of Boston; new harness, new bachelors, rockaways, chaises, charmingly beautiful sleighs, superb mounted harnesses, Russia fur robes, etc.

At this juncture, having business at Napoleon, and proffered transit thither, in the easiest and swiftest turnouts we ever remember to have been in a "dead-head" in, with grateful, heartfelt emotion, we have the honor to introduce our friend and right-hand companion:—

WASHINGTON M. FRENCH, ESQ.,
Deputy Sheriff for the County of Norfolk,
Deputy French in stature, is about five feet eight inches—age apparently forty-one years; in person—robust, muscular and erect; figure and expression, reflecting in sculptural phraseology, a picture approaching that of George Sennott, Esq., the distinguished legal advocate at the Boston Bar—as seen in the artist's studio, on Tremont Row.

Mr. F. is a gentleman in deportment, bland and attentive to customers—punctiliously exact and honorable in business transactions; justly and meritorily esteemed as a citizen. Success to his energy and perseverance.
Our Photographs will continue.

KEOKUCK.

ATTEMPT TO ROB A POST OFFICE. On Thursday night of last week an attempt was made to break and enter the post office at Mattapan, Dorchester. The noise of the thieves awakened Mr. McCondy, the Post-Master, who pursued and caught them.

The name of Messrs. Geo. W. BENTLEY & Co., Nos. 1 & 2 Holmes' Block, Haymarket Square, and from 93 to 99 Friend St. Boston, may have attracted the attention of our readers, having appeared frequently in our columns. They are among the most extensive manufacturers and dealers of Furniture in this country, and such are their facilities that very few houses are able to compete with them. We recommend their card to the attention of dealers in their line.

A NEW IDEA. The Quincy Railroad Company have recently obtained, from the Selectmen of Quincy and Dorchester, commissions as Special Police, for their Conductors for the better preservation of order in their Horse Cars. Appropriate badges will soon appear.

NATIONAL SAILORS' FAIR. The following is the final statement of the receipts and expenditures of this Fair:

Total amount of cash received	$274,236 84
Expenditures	24,716 88

Net amount transferred to Wm. Perkins, Esq., Treasurer of the National Sailors' Home $249,519 96

A HAPPY THOUGHT. It is stated that His Excellency Governor Andrew has procured the erection of a monument in the cemetery of Dedham, over the remains of the soldiers who died in camp at Readville. The shaft is of plain granite, the names of the deceased volunteers being inscribed on tablets thereon.

DANCING AND CALISTHENICS. Mr. W. E. Greene, of New Bedford, an experienced artist in his profession, proposes (it will be seen by a card which appears in another column of our paper to-day) to open a school at the Hancock House, when sufficient encouragement is given—for instruction in dancing and calisthenics—or the science of motion and elegant deportment. Mr. Greene's method of teaching is claimed to be entirely new—one peculiarly his own—which has the advantage over the old system, of enabling the scholar to make more rapid and thorough progress. The school will be composed of two classes—one for adults, and the other for minors of a certain age.

Dr. Channing was an enthusiastic admirer of this branch of education—and thus beautifully alludes to the subject:

"This exercise is among the most healthful. The body as well as the mind feels its gladdening influence. No amusement seems more to have a foundation in our nature. The animation of youth naturally overflows in harmonious movements. The true idea of dancing, entitles it to favor. Its end is to realize perfect grace in motion; and who does not know that a sense of the graceful is one of the higher qualities of our nature."

A CARD.

The undersigned takes this opportunity to tender his grateful acknowledgments to those of his fellow-citizens and members of the Fire Department, who so promptly came to his aid, and whose noble exertions were so freely exerted to save his property from the devouring element, on Friday morning last; also, to those sympathizing neighbors who threw open their houses to give shelter and protection to his homeless family. Their God-like deeds will ever be held in grateful remembrance.

I A CARD.

The undersigned takes this method of expressing their heartfelt thanks to the Members of the Hook & Ladder, Niagara and Tiger Engine Companies of Quincy, for their timely aid, and extraordinary exertions in saving our property from the devouring element, on the morning of the 5th inst. Also, to such of the citizens, who so kindly and promptly rendered us their valuable services, and for the many kindnesses which we received from our neighbors and friends. We most heartily thank you all.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The Treasury department is preparing plates for a new issue of fractional currency of 50, 25 and 10 cent designs, entirely original, and the notes will be nearly oval in form.

A diamond pin, containing thirty diamonds and worth many hundred dollars, was found at Bangor, Me., the other day, in a lot of tags imported from Smyrna.

The Liberator of last week contains the valedictory of Wm. Lloyd Garrison, who announces that this is the last number, the paper having been published thirty-five years. He says the object for which the Liberator was commenced has been gloriously consummated.

There appears to be considerable difficulty at the mint in putting on coins the motto "In God we Trust." The officers are afraid that everybody will read it "In Gold we Trust," which is much nearer the fact.

The latest Boston notion is a "paper hat" company, which is now forming. Waterproof paper hats are to be made for from eight to twenty-five cents.

A fire occurred in Philadelphia on Jan. 2d, destroying property to the value of $1,000,000. It was the fifteenth anniversary of an immense fire on the same spot.

The "restoration" of twenty lighthouses destroyed during the rebellion, is reported.

The foreign crops have been unusually good during the past season, wheat is now selling in France for less than one dollar per bushel, and it commands only about one dollar and nine cents in Great Britain.

The Chinese, who are firm believers in foreordination, when their houses or property may chance to take fire, squat themselves complacently on the ground, and with limbs skinned, gaze upon the flames—deeming it useless to attempt extinguishing them.

The Springfield Republican says in the winter of 1855 there were eight carrier boys employed to distribute that paper in Springfield. Three of these boys are now cashiers of banks in or near Springfield.

President Johnson was a lucky man on New Year's day. Somebody in Stamford, Conn., sent him a turkey which weighed 47 pounds.

The Supreme Court of this State has decided that towns have no right to raise money by tax to reimburse individuals for money paid to procure substitutes during the war.

AN ARTIFICIAL SNOW STORM. The intensity of the cold in New York, Monday morning, was demonstrated by a very singular phenomenon. It was a snow storm formed by steam. At the Fulton Ferry house a pipe of the heating apparatus carried the exhausted steam into the air; and the end of the pipe pointed upward, and the force with which the steam issued caused it to ascend thirty or forty feet. While in the air it was not only condensed but congealed, and came down in beautiful flakes of snow. A somewhat singular instance was recently reported to have occurred at a ball-room in Russia.

A COOL PROPOSITION. The Concord Bank robbers, who are doubtless in some foreign country beyond the reach of extradition treaties, have offered through some third party to give up the stolen United States securities (amounting to some three hundred thousand dollars,) upon the receipt of forty thousand dollars.

Cacciola's Hair Life restores Gray Hair to its original color, removes Dandruff and all impurities, and preserves the hair from premature death. Containing nothing injurious, it is unsurpassed for dressing the hair, promoting a luxuriant growth, and leaving it soft and glossy. For Sale by all Druggists. Price, one dollar a bottle. DANCING AND CALISTHENICS.

MR. W. E. GREENE.

OF New Bedford, respectfully informs the citizens of Quincy, that he will commence Two CLASSES at the

HANCOCK HOUSE,

As follows, (if sufficient encouragement is given.)
A JUVENILE CLASS for instruction in Dancing and Calisthenics will be formed Thursday Afternoon, Jan. 18 at 2 o'clock.

An ADULT CLASS, for instruction in all the Round Dances and Fashionable Quadrilles will be formed in the evening of the same day.

Jan. 18, at 7 o'clock.

TERMS.—Juveniles, $4.00; Adults: Ladies, 4.00; Gentlemen, $5.00.

Those wishing to join either of the classes are requested to be present at the first Session or send in their names in the adult class, fifty scholars will be required to ensure success.

N. B.—Mr. Greene's method of teaching is entirely new, and children attending his schools not only learn to dance, but acquire an elegant deportment, which certainly is a great accomplishment and ought to be a part of the education of every child. They will also be properly cared for, in regard to which parents may rest assured.

Children taken from 6 to 12 or 14 years of age.

Mr. Greene has no Public Assemblies in connection with his schools, although if it is the wish of the members of the school to invite their friends to dance with them from the close of the school until 12 o'clock he will not object, but will do all he can to make it pleasant and agreeable for them, but no throwing open the doors to the public.

Mr. Greene is bound to keep up the respectability of dancing, the most popular amusement and healthful exercise in the World without carried to excess, besides being very beneficial to the general appearance.

MANUFACTURERS AND PROPRIETORS OF THE CELEBRATED
MACHINE-GRAINED
Chamber Furniture.

We are prepared to offer to dealers and others in want of Painted Chamber Furniture an entirely new and novel article in that line. Our work is done by a Patent Machine. By this invention the actual veins and fibres of the natural grains are molded
from the real wood, from which is impressed
a perfect fac-simile of the original, thus reproducing upon any painted or bare wood surface
a greater variety of grains, with more rapidity
and with natural and more artistic beauty, than can possibly be created by the most skillful hand in any of the old modes known. It copies nature exactly. It grains in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsome and more durable set of Furniture, and at as low a price as can be bought in the city. Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. Those in want would do well to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

Dedicated to Mr. & Mrs. Jos. Hayden, Jr.
On the death of their children, LONOVICHES and JOSEPH HAYDEN, who died Dec.
22d, 1865, aged respectively
11 and 5 years.

Weep, ye bereaved ones, from whose heartstrings these flowers have faded; for thus, perchance, may your sight become clearer to discern the glories of immortality! Weep, for thus did the Master, at the grave of one he loved! Weep, but oh, not for the bright and blessed ones united by sorrow, unaccompanied by sin. Weep, not for the beatified spirits in heaven—but weep rather for yourselves, that your heavy hearts may thus find relief!
Pure and blameless were their lives—patient and happy their closing scenes.

Without one murmur! dearest Father,
They yield their treasures up to Thee;
And joy, that in Thy love forever
From pain, from sickness, they are free.

Few summer's suns have come and waned,
Calling the blossoms into birth.
Since death first snatched the golden chain,
That bound those parent's love to earth.

Two darling girls—sweet, precious babes,
Death's messenger then bore away;
In two short weeks, both forms were laid,
To moulder in the silent clay.

But when their spirits soared above,
God graciously did impart,
The tenderest mercies of His love,
To heal their wounded hearts.

To them He sent more little buds,
To chain their love, in hours of gloom,
And hush them live for joys above,
Beyond the darkness of the tomb.

But, death alas! has called again,
And plucked another's dart,
Into the midst of that bright band
And plucked two cherished hearts.

The first-born and the youngest son,
Two angels in one brief day,
Pure emblems of thy heavenly home,
Serenely in one casket lay.

Now together they rest, in love's fond embrace,
And sweetly they will sleep side by side;
Those hearts so truly united on earth,
Gentle death could not cruelly divide.

The oldest was far too frail, too fair,
To travel o'er life's rough sea,
Too tender the storms of earth to bear,
Too gentle his spirit soared to Thee.

We stood beside his dying couch,
With pain we watched his parting breath;
Yet when the light of life went out,
We could not wish him back to earth.

Escaped from his lips in his sufferings severe, Yet seemed glad when the hour of death would draw nigh,
And with his winged spirits a happier sphere

With a look of sweet peace on his dear patient face,
Where the angel of suffering had left its deep trace;
To the parents and loved ones, who wept by his side,
He smiled his last farewell—then gently died.

But to the pet, no heart had e'er deemed Death was so near, and so soon would bring Tie shroud and pall, for one who seemed
A picture of health, and lovely as spring.

His life was like the sweet May flowers,
Like them, he could not stay;
He came, he smiled, and suffered too,
And then he passed away.

His sweet voice is hushed, his bright eyes are closed,
And his home will know him no more;
But yet how sweet, in his placid repose,
To think all his sufferings are o'er.

The smiling seasons of the year,
When winter's chilling storms are o'er,
Whisper again, with light and bloom,
But those who mourn, return no more.

From God, from God, to earth they came,
To Him all souls return;
His smiles like stars of silver flame,
O'er all their pathway burn.

The happy birds will sweetly sing,
The flowers brightly bloom,
The stars, with eyes that never dim,
Will watch their peaceful tomb.

Until the Almighty Father's voice,
Shall read to a gloomy sky,
Then all His children will rejoice,
For death is but a night.

Food father, stricken mother, a happy band,
Will soon welcome you to that better land,
And lovely brothers tread that straight narrow road,
And be blessed forever in the presence of God.

To the aged grand-parents now kind Father draw near,
Oblivion the sorrows, the

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

Fair in Braintree.

The debt of gratitude and honor the country owes its defenders in the great struggle for national existence, is no where more deeply felt than in old Braintree—over forty of whose citizens have fallen in the service of their country. To commemorate the deeds of these men, and constantly to keep their names in grateful remembrance, was deemed a sacred duty; and accordingly measures were early taken into consideration for the erection of a monument which should be an honor to the town as well as to her fallen heroes. Messrs. F. A. Hobart, H. Abercrombie, E. W. Arnold, Asa French and L. W. Hobart, were appointed a Committee to initiate such proceedings as might be deemed proper in the case; and their deliberations resulted in a Fair—which, through their exertions has been a most complete success. The Town Hall was tastefully decorated with appropriate inscriptions; Chinese lanterns, streamers and flags; while midway up the Hall, were recorded on painted monuments, the names of Braintree's departed soldiers.

The Fancy Tables presented a tempting display of articles of every variety and description; curiosities from the four quarters of the globe; wax flowers, jewelry, silver plate, wearing apparel, toys, needle work and elegant furniture; such a combination of the useful and ornamental, as to prove attractive to the most fastidious, and leave no taste ungratified.

Meanwhile, the wants of the "inner man" were carefully attended to, and no pains spared to please the constant throng of visitors who came early and went away late, but neither fasting nor thirsting. Refreshments of a substantial character were served out in the room below, while those of a lighter nature, as pies and cake, confectionery and ice creams, on separate tables, invited attention in the Hall itself.

Throughout every Fair night of the week—Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the attendance was undiminished—each night affording new attractions. The Braintree Glee Club, Messrs. J. M. Stevens, George H. Howard, M. A. Perkins, J. M. French and D. W. Howard, volunteered their services as vocalists. Mr. E. W. Arnold presided at the piano, and Professors Crane and Gomez, on the cornet and guitar, respectively favored the audience with exhibitions of their skill.

On Thursday evening the "Two Bazzards" was enacted with such success that it was repeated, by request of the audience, on Friday evening.

Several valuable prizes were drawn during the Fair; among which, were silver ice pickers, by R. E. Morrison, Charles Hayden and J. E. Holbrook; an easy chair by E. A. Wilde; a handsome silver service by A. Southworth and H. Abercrombie; China tea set by Mrs. John Bowditch, and an elegant lake of pond lilies by J. C. Daggett, Stephen Morse, Jr., an elegant clock.

On the last evening, such articles as remained unsold, were all disposed of at public auction.

The net proceeds of this Fair, have been about eleven hundred dollars; a sum by no means inconsiderable toward the erection of the monument. Fair week has been an era of genuine enjoyment and good fellowship. The arrangements have been faultless—and no sectarian or party spirit has been shown; for the cause has united all conflicting interests, and commanded universal sympathy.

A POPULAR LECTURER. We understand that Rev. Edwin Thompson, of the State Temperance Alliance is to lecture in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening next. Mr. Thompson is a well known and popular Temperance lecturer, and never fails to draw a house where he is known. He is famous for his anecdotes, and all who would like to enjoy a hearty laugh for an evening, can be accommodated by listening to the amusing and pertinent stories which enter largely into his lectures.

NEW CHURCH ENTERPRISE. We learn that our Baptist friends at the Point have secured the Hall over D. H. Bills' store for religious services on week day evenings. It was dedicated last Wednesday. It is not unlikely that a church may in time be formed. The kindest feeling prevails towards the Methodist Society with which the movers of this new enterprise have hitherto been connected.

LECTURE ON HUNGARY. Rev. Stephen Krassitzky delivered a lecture of thrilling interest on Tuesday evening last to our citizens. Owing to the weather and walking the attendance was small, and he is expected to speak again a week from to-morrow in some of our churches. This Hungarian exile is highly educated and belonged to a wealthy family of Magyars but lost property, home and liberty, for the truth's sake. His lectures are of great interest to all.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, JAN. 18, 1866.

The State Legislature is now fully organized, and the Committees have been announced. The Speaker has paid a deserved compliment to your respected Representative, by placing Mr. Adams on the Joint Standing Judiciary Committee, usually in point of rank, the highest Legislative Committee. We predict for Mr. Adams a successful and honorable career as a public man. The popular branch of the Legislature will not be found wanting in talents the present session. Among the prominent members of the House, are Messrs. Doane of Orleans, Doctor Loring of Salem, Wakefield of Dedham, Colonel Thomson of Boston, Palfrey of Salem, Kimball of Boston, Bowerman of Pittsfield, with many others whose names stand as Chairmen of Committees. The presiding officers, who are beginners in their business, are fully answering the expectations of their friends. The most important topics for the "Great General Court" to consider during the session, will be, Aid to soldiers and sailors and families of the slain; the matter of Rate of Interest; Prosecutions under the Liquor Law, and Questions of Labor. The last, or proposed Eight Hours' System, when seriously considered, will be found to have but few advocates in its favor—as it could not comply with the agricultural and mechanical interests of our community. The best system for compensation for labor, is to pay the employee by the hour, with the right of working as few or many hours per day as the laborer may elect.

The proceedings of Congress are watched with much interest throughout the country; more particularly the action on the great question of "Reconstruction" or restoration. We have great confidence in President Johnson, and believe he will be found true and faithful to the union party of the country that gave their votes for him. The plan of restoration, if it may be called a plan, began with Abraham Lincoln. It began the moment the rebellion ended. To restore the late insurgent States to the Union just as soon as they give evidence of their loyalty or submission to the authority of the National Government. The abolition of slavery in all the States is forever settled by Constitutional amendment. No involuntary servitude exists; all men, irrespective of color or caste are free. The perfection of this plan of restoration or consolidation, is not only to make all persons free as to bondage, but equal as to the right of property, and the right of suffrage to all who can read or write. In the admission of the late insurgent States to the Union—these conditions should be required by Congress before their Representatives should be admitted; and the South should be continued under military rule if it takes ten years, until these terms of admission are complied with. This is what I consider the true plan of reconstruction. But more anon.

LECTURE. The third lecture of the course under the auspices of the Lodge of Good Templars will be given in the Universalist Church, on Sunday, (to-morrow evening), by Rev. J. P. Terry, of South Weymouth.

SUBJECT: The traffic in intoxicating drinks, its nature and effects, and the best means of suppressing it.

THE BARNSTABLE PATRIOT. The venerable editor and founder of this paper, S. B. Pinney, Esq. after thirty-five years as a successful publisher, has retired from the charge, retaining his position, however, as editor, and has been succeeded in the business department, by Messrs. F. B. Goss and T. W. Pinney.—(a chip we presume of the old block.) The new firm gives good promise for the future; under their management the Patriot has come out in a new dress, presenting a very neat and business-like appearance; with a fair, bold type—that "he who runs may read."

WE are pleased with these indications of the prosperity of our neighbors.

OUR old and valued Boston Correspondent has once more commenced writing for the Patriot. The first of a series will be found in to-day's paper, which will undoubtedly be read with much interest. His articles always comprise a world of good things in a nut shell.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the Paymaster General of the Army, shows that during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865, that the sum actually disbursed, and in process of disbursement at the end thereof, was $430,024, 946.37. Nearly $100,000,000 have been disbursed since that time. About $570,000,000 of this gigantic sum has been paid to disbanded troops, mustered out of service.

THE BOSTON ALMANAC for 1866, has the Constitution of the United States; Great Events of the past year; Illustrated Sketches of Boston and its environs, with many fine engravings; Map of Boston, with the Horse and Steam Railroads and new Wards in illustrated print; Constitution of Massachusetts; Population, Voters, and Property of each City and Town in Massachusetts; National, State, County, City and Transportation Registers; Calendar and Memoranda pages; Weather Record, etc.

Price 50 cents, mailed postpaid. Issued by George Coolidge, 3 Milk street, Boston.

Soldiers' Monument.

It may be that the idea which I now suggest has been already sufficiently submitted to your readers through your columns. If so, I have not seen it. I know that many of our people are very familiar with it. At any rate, I will ask if any beginning has been made to organize a movement to secure some sufficient memorial of our soldiers? If anything has been done, can you tell us what it is? Nothing seems to me more clear than that the Town should soon take the preliminary steps to erect some impressive and enduring monument to the memory of the men of Quincy who have died for the Union.

It should be worthy of the crisis it will commemorate—and a fitting tribute to the immortal deeds of those brave men. It should stand at some centre of the daily walks of men, not in a retired cemetery. To answer the fullest consideration of these and many other questions, and the most careful preparation of all that is requisite for an adequate monument, why should we not now be moving to obtain the consideration of the people to this question at March meeting?—Q.

UNIVERSALIST LEEVE. We learn that Wednesday evening, Jan. 31st, is the time appointed for holding the annual festival given by the Universalist society of this town. All necessary arrangements are being made to have a good time, and full particulars will be given next week.

WE have received from our Representative, John Q. Adams, Esq., a valuable State document for which he will please accept our thanks. Such favors are received with pleasure and we hope to be kindly remembered.

WANT OF SNOW. The farmers of New Hampshire and Vermont are anxiously waiting for a fall of snow. There are many jobs which they require snow to carry on, and not the least important is the hauling of wood, which on account of the absence of snow has advanced very recently a dollar a cord.

DAILY EVENING COMMERCIAL. The first number of this new daily, or the Boston Courier, under a new head, was received on Monday last. It contains all the latest news, besides a large amount of miscellaneous matter including a story each day for the ladies. It is edited by Joseph B. Morse, Esq., and is one of the most independent sheets published in Boston.

"The Old Man Eloquent."

John Quincy Adams was often known by the above name after his eloquent speeches on the floor of Congress in favor of the right of petition. It is well occasionally to refresh the memory with the knowledge of the deeds of one who has done so much for his country and mankind, as Mr. Adams. Joshua R. Giddings, in the article written for the Liberty Bell, in 1847, on the Progress of Free Principles in Congress, makes the following allusion to the labors of Mr. Adams:—

"The Executive at the late session of Congress, by aid of his Cabinet endeavored to persuade that body to appropriate fifty thousand dollars as a compensation to the Spanish slave-merchants professing to own the human cargo on board the Amistad when she landed at New London. The Secretary of State sent a written communication to the Committee on 'Ways and Means' urging the appropriation. He also appealed in person at the Capitol and exerted his influence with the personal and political friends in favor of those piratical dealers in human flesh. When the question came up for discussion the letter of the Secretary was read at the Clerk's table and Mr. Adams rose to expose its misrepresentations. Feeble and trembling with age his voice was so weak that he could make himself heard only by those near him; yet it was no sooner announced by the Chairman than members from all parts of the house gathered around and after listening to him some ten minutes, less than thirty were willing to vote for the measure, and when it came into the house on the call of yeas and nays it was rejected by a majority of four to one. I do not expect to see another attempt in Congress to legislate for the direct support of Slavery. I have not time to speak of the suppression of the right of petition, and of the manner in which it was regained. The labors of Mr. Adams were crowned with triumph. The right of petition was regained after eight years of unremitting toil. These facts distinctly mark the progress of free principle in the councils of our nation."

It is said that the rice crop on the southern coast last year amounts to little or nothing. The Savannah river, where formerly 800,000 bushels were raised, there were ten thousand. On the Alabama, where six hundred thousand were raised, six thousand.

Parker's Pectoral Pastilles give immediate relief in all cases of Coughs, Colds and affections of the chest and lungs, and restore to the system a normal tone. They contain no opium nor any thing deleterious, and are wonderful in the efficacy with which they effect the cure of all diseases of the throat. For sale by all Druggists. Price 25 cents a box—Depot, 72 William Street, New York. Jan 13, 1866.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

George W. Day, of Chelsea, Mass., the inventor of a machine for shoes, which drives the shoe thread like pegs, making a good imitation of pegged work, has sold his interest for $200,000, and is to receive a per centage on every pair of boots made by the process.

Eighty general officers were mustered out out by an order issued recently from the War Department. Some of these officers have done excellent service, but the country having ceased to call for them, they should now return to civil life as gracefully as the privates have done who fought as long and as bravely for their country, as though they were stars and bars instead of handling the musket.

One of the largest farmers in the United States is Mr. Bidwell, of California, the Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture in the House of Representatives. He owns 56,000 acres of land, and last year his wheat crop was 38,000 bushels.

A couple in Litchfield county, Ct., had lived together for ten years supporting themselves married. Difficulties having arisen applied to the court for a divorce. Upon investigation it was found out that they had never been legally married. Like sensible people they gave up the idea of a divorce and were married.

The Canada farmers along the border have sent a large number of cattle into Vermont in anticipation of the termination of the reciprocity treaty. In the vicinity of Derby all the farmyards are completely filled with cattle awaiting sale and shipment to Brighton.

A novel race took place between ice-boats on the Hudson. The winner made eight miles in ten minutes.

The North lost by the war, 270,000 men. The South lost by the war, 225,000 men.

According to the statement of a Tennessee member of Congress, a majority of the marriages are between ex-secession ladies and northern emigrants.

An iron street railway has been invented in New York, to be supported on pillars of cast-iron, wrought iron, 17 feet high; one track to be on each side the roadway. The propelling power is to be supplied by a dummy engine, which is to be voiceless and sparkless. A light staircase at one corner of each street will afford the requisite facility for reaching and quitting the cars.

The estimates of the Lighthouse Board for the completion of repairs to lighthouses damaged during the rebellion call for one hundred and fifty thousand dollars more, making a sum total of three hundred thousand dollars which the rebellion cost us in the single year.

The fire insurance companies of New York city suffered heavier losses last year, than for many years past. In 1864 the loss was $28,000,000 in round numbers; in 1865 over $45,000,000.

It is contemplated to build a poorhouse in each county in Virginia for the negroes, compelling them to bear the burden of the expense.

Authentic information has been received from the planning States showing that vigorous efforts are being made to produce a cotton crop the coming year.

Of the 9000 post offices in the disloyal States, about 2000 have been re-opened. Nearly 300 have received postmistresses, not because they were more loyal, but because they could take the oath that they had not borne arms against their country.

The New York Herald reports that during the past year 183 railroad accidents occurred; 345 persons were killed and 1427 injured. In 1864, 401 were killed, and 1486 injured.

The skating park in Allegheny City, Pa., is probably the finest in the country. It comprises seven acres, with clear ice, and a half mile race course, with buildings and a reception-room for ladies. The buildings alone cost $10,000.

It is estimated that on Wednesday ten thousand persons dispersed themselves upon the ice of the Central Park ponds in New York.

A Chicago clergyman missed his stockings on Christmas morning, and after a long search found one on each horn of a new milch cow, which had been presented to him by his parishioners, and ornamented in this way to indicate that it was a Christmas gift.

The Old Colony and Fall River railroad earned $1,209,058 during the year ending November 30, of which $812,328 was from passengers, and $396,770 for freight. The expenses of working the road were $644,471, and the dividends paid—8 per cent—amounted to 303,966. The number of passengers carried was 1,832,590.

The New York state bank at Albany has paid 31 per cent, in dividends in the last eighteen months.

John Seaver of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, has completed his task of walking one hundred miles in one hundred hours, on a wire, and thinks he has done an astonishing feat.

Considerable care is manifested in the Southern States for the safe keeping of the rebel battle flags as souvenirs.

Simon Draper is said to have made a pleasant $500,000 from the New York Collectorship in the year he held it.

The Chicago people are mystified. Two figures of a man's hand came through a hydraunt on Lake street, on Tuesday, and nobody knows the original owner.

Hon. Amos Kendall has erected a house of worship for a Baptist Church in Washington, D. C., at a cost of $60,000 and generously donated it to the church. Rev. Mr. Howlett formerly of Trenton, N. J. is the Pastor.

EXHIBITION AND SOCIAL DANCE. As the term of the juvenile school which Professor Walker has had under his instruction for some months past is about to close, he proposes on that occasion to present his youthful proteges to the public in a social dance, at the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening, January 30. The exhibition will be one of rare attractions—the fashionable dances of the day, with many new ones will be introduced, full of grace and motion, which will be sustained by the class with ease and elegance, seldom before witnessed in Quincy. See advertisement.

There will be a Chowder served up at the Mariposa Saloon, this evening.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN FOR 1866. The best paper in the United States for Mechanics, Inventors and Manufacturers, is the Scientific American. It is the largest in size, and has by far the widest circulation of any other paper of its class in the country. It is published weekly. Each number contains sixteen pages, with numerous illustrations. The numbers for a year make two volumes of 416 pages each. It also contains a full account of all the principal inventions and discoveries of the day. Also, valuable illustrated articles upon Tools and Machinery used in Workshops, Manufactories, Steam and Mechanical Engineering, Wood, Cotton, Chemical, Petroleum, and all other manufacturing and producing interests. Also, Firearms, war implements, ordnance, war vessels, Railway machinery, electric chemical and mathematical apparatus, wood and lumber machinery, hydraulic, oil and water pumps, water-wheels, etc.; household horticultural and farm implements—this latter department being very full and of great value to Farmers and Gardeners. Articles embracing every department of Popular Science which everybody can understand, and which everybody likes to read.

Also, Reports of Scientific Societies, at home and abroad; Patent-Law Decisions and Discussions, Practical Recipes, etc. It also contains an Official List of all the Patent Claims, a special feature of great value to Inventors and owners of patents.

The publishers also act as agents for procuring Patents for new inventions.

A New Volume of the Scientific American commences January 1.

PACIFIC HOTEL,
170, 172, 174, 176, Greenwich St., (ONE SQUARE WEST OF BROADWAY.)
Between Courtlandt and Dry Streets,
NEW YORK.
JOHN PATTEN, Jr., Proprietor

THE Pacific Hotel, is well and widely known to the traveling public. Its location is especially desirable to merchants and business men; it is close proximity to the business part of the City—is on the highway of Southern and Western travel—and adjacent to all the principal Railroad and Steamboat depots.

The Pacific has liberal accommodations for over 900 guests; it is well furnished, and possesses every modern improvement for the comfort and entertainment of its inmates. The rooms are spacious and well ventilated; provided with gas and water; the attendance is prompt and respectful; and the table is generously provided with every delicacy of the season.

The proprietor, who, for the past few years, has been the leader in new, safe, profitable, and intends to identify himself thoroughly with the interests of his house. With long experience as a hotel keeper, he trusts, by moderate charges and a liberal policy, to maintain the favorable reputation of the Pacific Hotel.

N. B. To prevent overcharge by Hackmen, the coaches of the Hotel are owned by the proprietor.

Manhood; How Lost, How Restored.
A new edition of Dr. Cullen's celebrated Essay on the Radical Cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHOEA, or seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents. The celebrated author in this admirable essay clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife—pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, can cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post paid, on the receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps.

HELMHOLD'S BUCHU.

THE ONLY KNOWN REMEDY FOR

DIABETES, IRRITATION OF THE NECK OF THE BLADDER, INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, CATARRH OF THE BLADDER, STRANGURY OR PAINFUL URINATING.

For these diseases it is truly a sovereign remedy, and one which cannot be sold in its price. A single dose has been known to relieve the most urgent symptoms.

Are you troubled with that distressing pain in the small of the back and through the hips? A teaspoonful a day of Helmhold's Buchu will relieve you.

Physicians and Others

PLEASE NOTICE.

I make no secret of ingredients. Helmhold's Extract Buchu is composed of Buchu, Cubebs and Juniper Berries, selected with great care, prepared in pure and according to rules of PHARMACY AND CHEMISTRY.

These ingredients are known as the most valuable Diuretics afforded.

A DIURETIC

Is that which acts upon the kidneys.

Helmhold's Extract Buchu

ACTS GENTLY.

Is pleasant in taste and odor, free from all injurious properties, and immediate in its actions.

FOR THE SATISFACTION OF ALL.

See Medical Properties contained in Dispensary of the U. S., of which the following is a correct copy:

"BUCHU.—Its odor is strong, diffusive and somewhat aromatic, its taste bitterish, and analogous to that of mint. It is given chiefly in complaints of the Urinary Organs, such as Gravel, Chronic Catarrh of the Bladder, Morbid Irritation of the Bladder and Urethra, Diseases of the Prostate, and Retention or the Incontinence of Urine, from a loss of tone in the parts concerned in its evacuation. It has also been recommended in Dyspepsia, Chronic Rheumatism, Cutaneous Affections and Dropsy."

LARGEST

MANUFACTURING CHEMIST

IN THE WORLD.

I am acquainted with H. T. Helmhold; he occupied the drug store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise.

Wm. WEIGHTMAN,
(Firm of Powers & Weightman.)
Manufacturing Chemist
Ninth and Brown Streets, Philadelphia.

[From the Phila. Evening Bulletin, March 10th.]

We are gratified to hear of the continued success, in New York, of our townsman, Mr. H. T. Helmhold, Druggist. His store, next to the Metropolitan Hotel, is 28 feet front, 230 feet deep, and five stories in height. It is certainly a grand establishment, and speaks favorably of the merit of his articles. He retains his Office and Laboratory in this city, which are also model establishments of their class.

The proprietor has been induced to make this statement from the fact that his remedies, although advertised, are

GENUINE PREPARATIONS,

And knowing that the intelligent refrain from using anything pertaining to Quackery or the Patent Medicine order—most of which are prepared by self-styled Doctors, who are too ignorant to read a physician's simplest prescription, much less competent to prepare pharmaceutical preparations.

THESE PARTIES RESORT

To various means of effecting sales, such as copying parts of advertisements of popular remedies, and finishing with certificates.

The Science of Medicine stands SIMPLE PURE and MAJESTIC—having Faith for its Basis, Induction for its Pillar, Truth alone for its Capital.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

Health is most important; and the afflicted should not use an advertised medicine, or any remedy, unless its contents or ingredients are known to others besides the manufacturer, or until they are satisfied of the qualifications of the party so offering.

Chamber Furniture.

We are prepared to offer to dealers and others in want of Painted Chamber Furniture an entirely new and novel article in that line. Our work is done by a Patent Machine. By this invention the actual veins and fibres of the natural grains are molded from the real wood, from which is impressed a perfect fine-simile of the original, thus reproducing upon any painted or bare wood surface a greater variety of grains, with more rapidity and with natural and more artistic beauty, than can possibly be created by the most skillful hand in any of the old modes known. It copies nature exactly. It grains in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsomer and more durable set of Furniture, and at as low a price as can be bought in the city. Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. Those in want would do well to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

THE STORM. Most of our exchanges have more or less to say about the storm. Under these circumstances perhaps it may not be amiss in us to add our experience. It commenced here early Thursday morning—too early for us to take notes—and continued to snow moderately during the morning hours, until about 11 o'clock, when it increased in violence, making it difficult for pedestrians, who were not firm on their understandings, to breast its fury. In the afternoon it somewhat mollified in its temper, showing indications of turning to rain. Considerable snow fell—causing a temporary blockade of our thoroughfares. The Horse Cars, in consequence, changed their mode of locomotion, from wheels to runners; the Old Colony kept on the even tenor of its ways. On Thursday night the storm underwent another change—for on Friday morning it was snowing as hard as ever. But by noon it had cleared off; leaving between four and six inches of snow, and some very good sleighing.

BIOGRAPHY. The biography of our late fellow-townsmen, — the young and gifted Morton—to be found on the first page of our paper to-day, no doubt will be read with intense interest, and awaken anew, sympathies of condolence for the bereaved parents and relatives. It is a truthful picture of the life and services of the lamented dead—drawn by a friendly hand, who was familiar with his early and more mature life, and who had almost daily opportunities to appreciate the ennobling qualities of his mind. By the young especially, this biography should be read and pondered over; as it furnishes an example for their future guidance, every way worthy their imitation.

SAD ACCIDENT. As Mr. W. Quincy Torrey, was engaged raising ice on an inclined plane, at the ice house of Jacob F. Eaton, Esq., on Monday last, the ice was thrown off the track,—it fell on Mr. Torrey, breaking both bones of the right leg just above the ankle. Medical assistance was promptly rendered, through Dr. Gilbert, and he is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances. The situation of Mr. Torrey was a case demanding sympathy of the community, and accordingly, a paper was drawn up and circulated by Deputy Sheriff French, and in a very short time one hundred and twenty-five dollars was realized. We learn that the paper was presented to some of our wealthiest citizens, who declined; this may arise from a delicacy of having their names appear in such a manner; for the object is one which certainly appeals to the benevolence of all classes.

UNIVERSALIST LEVEE. The Nineteenth Annual Festival of this Society,—as will be seen by their card in another column,—takes place at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening next, January 31. These Levees—under the liberal management and excellent taste with which they have heretofore been conducted, have made them highly popular with our people,—as the approving response which they have received from the community in former years, bear ample testimony. They are of that class of social gatherings, which have an harmonizing effect,—by removing the icy barriers of sectional prejudice, and uniting all on the broad platform of universal brotherhood and benevolence. Where young and old may profitably pass a pleasant hour in the enjoyment of rational amusements, and the cultivation of more lasting ties of friendship.

The entertainments for the evening, like those on former occasions, will be varied, and of an interesting character; Speaking, Singing, etc., including a patriotic Drama, of no small merit, with a strong cast. A beautiful Tableau representing the Saviours of our Country, a happy idea, which must be duly honored.

THE HANCOCK GLEE CLUB.—a social institution,—which has carried a most enviable distinction as a musical choir since its organization, will be present.

MR. GALEN BOWDITCH, JR.—a new star in the musical firmament,—has also volunteered his services, and will entertain the audience in a chaste, pathetic, and laugh provoking song. The refreshments will draw largely on the bounties of Nature—vintages to tempt the appetite, and the more substantial, to refresh the inner man.

The bill presented is most excellent, and if every thing proves propitious, we predict an old-fashioned "turn out."

TEMPERANCE LECTURES. Rev. J. P. Torrey of South Weymouth gave an able and earnest discourse on Temperance, Sabbath evening, in the Universalist Church. He showed the evils of License Laws, and answered the common objections raised against Prohibition.

Tuesday evening, Rev. Mr. Thompson of the State Alliance, entertained an audience at the Town Hall in his own peculiar, humorous style, making not a few telling points and giving numerous incidents which have occurred during his long service as a Temperance lecturer.

Q. S. S. A.

At a regular meeting of the QUINCY SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION, held at Barker's Hall, January 11th, 1866, the subject for discussion was

"The Relation of Public Amusements to the Public Morals."

The subject was discussed in an able and interesting manner by the members present, and various opinions were expressed. Some thought that Public Amusements as they are now carried on, are detrimental to the Public Morals of a community; that dancing, cards, the theatre, &c., exercise a pernicious influence upon the people generally, and that a more deleterious effect proceeds from the excesses to which these amusements are carried, than would arise from the total abolishment of the same.

Others thought that amusements which are not sinful in themselves, are beneficial to the community; that because there are frequent abuses and excesses of the original idea, it does not decide it to be in the wrong, since there is nothing which may not be perverted, or used in a manner entirely different from the original intention; that the public morals would be strengthened, not by discarding amusements altogether, but by seeking to give them the sympathy and co-operation of the best minds in the country, thereby raising them to their proper level.

The Directors in the department of Public Affairs gave their Report, which contained articles, original and selected, upon the following subjects:

"The Nation's Dead," "Death of the Old Year," "Punishment of Criminals," "Barbarism," "Reconstruction," "The New Year," "The Rebellion in Jamaica," "The New Year," "A Swiss Mother's Gift to the New York Sanitary Fair," "The Freedmen."

The subject assigned for discussion at the next meeting, is,

"THE PUNISHMENT OF CRIMINALS."

H. A. French, Recording Secretary.

FREEDMEN'S COMMISSION. Members of the Commission are desired to meet at the house of Rev. S. T. Aldrich, near the junction of Sea and Canal streets, next Tuesday evening, at 7 1-2 o'clock. The Soliciting Committee are specially desired to be present.

DISMISSAL. Rev. J. P. Lane was dismissed on Tuesday last from the pastorate of the Congregational Church, East Weymouth, and recommended as a faithful and able minister. The Council strongly condemned the practice of Refilling, and expressed the hope that this and other objectionable methods of raising money might "give place to direct appeals to men's love for Christian truth, the church, and for Him who is its Head."

STATE VALUATION. The report of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, on the assessed valuation of the cities and towns, shows that the total taxable property in 1865 was $991,841,901, of which $605,761,946 was real and $386,079,955 personal estate.—The number of polls taxed was 287,655; dwelling-houses, 188,005; horses, 89,750; cows, 145,801; sheep, 160,907; acres of land, 1,431,554. The increase in value of real estate from the previous year is $28,463,690; of personal estate, $61,495,108. The number of sheep has been decreased by over 8,000; cows, 9,000; and horses, 2,000. The amount of state, county and municipal taxes last year was $16,800,332.07, over four million dollars more than the previous year. All the counties except Franklin have increased their valuation.

THE WORK OF A SINGLE CHURCH. It was stated Sunday morning by the pastor, that the First Parish in Dorchester, (Rev. Mr. Hall's) had contributed during the war to the relief of the soldiers, in supplies and money, upwards of twenty-five thousand dollars. The money was liberally given as often as asked for, and under the care of the ladies, the clothing and other articles were carefully prepared and judiciously distributed.

THE LADY'S FRIEND. The February number of this beautiful Magazine opens with a touching steel engraving, entitled, "News From the War,"—a very expressive engraving indeed.

The large colored Double Steel Fashion Plate for this number is as usual refined and elegant; the distinguishing traits of the Fashion of the Lady's Friend. The Music is "Near Thee," the words by Charles Swain. Among the literature we note "Elise Radner," by S. Annie Frost; "Love Folger," a story by August Bell; "The Hidden Bridal Gift," by Aunt Alice; "Rachel Dana's Legacy," by H. A. Heydon; "Stories of our Village," by Beatrice Colonna; "Faithful Unto Death," by Harris Byrne; New Publications, Receipts, the Fashions, &c., &c.

DEATH OF AN AUTHOR. Miss Fredricka Bremer, so long known as a novelist of a high order, is dead. She was a native of Abo in Finland, but spent a part of her earlier days in Sweden and Norway.

Our readers will find some very interesting articles on our first page, which are deserving of a careful perusal.

TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT. This gallant Regiment, the last with one exception, in the United States service, arrived in Boston on Wednesday morning last, where they were provided with a collation by the city. They were then sent to Gallop's Island to be mustered out and paid off. They will come up to the city to-day and be received by the New England Guards and other military organizations. Next week we will furnish our readers a complete list of all Quincy Boys who have served in this gallant corps.

SURGICAL OPERATION. Mr. Daniel K. Flint, of this town, had the fore-finger of his left hand amputated on Monday last, by Dr. Cabot, of Boston. Mr. Flint has been a sufferer for two years from a troublesome felon which made the amputation necessary, and which disabled him from following his trade. He is a worthy man—has a large family dependent upon him for support—and any token of the public's sympathy to keep the wolf from the door at this inclement season, no doubt would be received with gratitude.

THE RIGHT OF A WOMAN REGULARLY ORDAINED TO SOLEMNIZE MARRIAGE.—There has been of late considerable discussion in the community where the Rev. Miss Olympia Brown resides, and especially in the church at Weymouth Landing, over which she is settled, as to whether, under the present statute regulations, she can legally solemnize marriage. The General Statutes provide that "marriage may be solemnized by any minister of the gospel ordained according to the usage of his denomination," and continually makes use of the pronoun "he" whenever any reference is made to the word "minister." It was the continued use of the masculine pronoun, which occasioned the doubt in the minds of some as to the legal capacity of Miss Brown to solemnize marriage. The question is of much importance, inasmuch as, if we are correctly informed, she has already officiated in one or two occasions. An order was accordingly introduced into the House of Representatives last week, by which the committee on the judiciary was instructed to consider whether any legislation is necessary upon the subject. That committee have now reported that no legislation is necessary, being unanimously of opinion, that a woman regularly ordained can, under our statutes legally solemnize marriage.

POSTPONED. The Exhibition of Prof. Walker's Juvenile Class has been postponed to Feb. 13th, as will be seen by our advertising columns.

MR. OZIAS POPE. We were pleased to see the old and familiar countenance of Mr. Pope in the street once more after his late illness. Mr. P. has never enjoyed sound health since his misfortune some years ago, which came very near depriving him of life. Mr. Pope has always been an industrious and hard working man—who earned his living by the sweat of his brow; and although provident of his means, was not able to lay anything by for his old age. His friends should not suffer him to pine in want, when the infirmities of age are disabling him to provide for himself.

SHOES MADE BY STEAM. Almost all the shoes made at Haverhill are made by steam, and every part of the business is carried on independent of the rest. One shoe turns out heels and stiffenings, another, uppers, in another, sole leather is cut, and finally the goods are made up by steam power exclusively. A number of new establishments have been lately started, worked by steam power entirely.

Marriages.

In this town, on the 24th ult., by the Rev. E. P. Thwing, Mr. John A. Davis, to Miss Ellen E. Ricker.

In Boston, on the 3d inst., Mr. William Hardwick, of this town, to Mrs. Mary A. Wells, of Boston.

In Boston, on the 21st inst., Mr. William H. Hennessey of South Boston, to Miss Mary E. Donahoe of this town.

In Boston, on the 23d inst., by Rev. R. S. Stone, D. D., Mr. Edward Potter, Jr., to Miss Annie M., daughter of Caleb Stetson, Esq.

In Epping, (N. H.) on the 22d inst., by Rev. Nathaniel Goldsmith, Mr. Joseph Garland, of E. to Mrs. Ann E. Pickering, formerly of this town.

The happy couple have our best wishes for their future welfare and happiness. The fair bride having chosen from Nature's garden a Garland to cherish, as a life's nosegay—and having entwined around it the tendrils of her heart's purest affections, may its fragrance and vigor be preserved, to perfume her future pathway—under the smiles of a kind Providence—with earth's choicest blessings.

Secretary McCulloch opposes the project of equalization of bounties, on the ground of the inability of the Treasury to meet the enormous drain contemplated.

The Richmond papers want the Virginia Legislature to pension the crippled rebel soldiers.

The whole number of barrels of mackerel inspected in the State last year was 256,796 1-8 against 274,357 1-4 in 1864, showing a decrease of over 50,000 from the return of 1863. While the number of barrels caught have fallen off the quality of the catch has improved.

Libby prison is now a grocery store.

An ice bridge was formed on Sunday morning above Niagara Falls, extending three miles down the rapids. It is the largest one for many years.

A large number of vessels have been chartered to bring bamboo from Jamaica to New York for the manufacture of paper.—Paper so high that bamboo has been experimented upon and is found a cheap and excellent article.

A young man in Milford, named Metcalf, attempted to shoot himself on the door steps of his unsympathizing fair one on the night of the 16th inst. He got a comrade to load the pistol, and after packing his valuables to be sent to his father, and disposing of his effects generally, sending $50 to his lady love, &c., committed the rash act, but as his comrade had sense enough for both he left the bullet out of the pistol, and the only damage done was a burnt waist coat.

Benjamin Phinney, a wealthy farmer at Rockport, Illinois, was recently poisoned to death with strychnine by his fifth wife, a pretty girl, whom he married six weeks ago.

They have a child at Staunton, Va., which at seven weeks old, weighed only a pound and a half.

The government has stored in what was the Armory Square Hospital at Washington, 450,000 pairs army shoes, one room full of boots, 70,000 jackets, 150,000 shirts, 60,000 pants, 80,000 overcoats, 35,000 axes, 25,000 shovels, 40,000 shelter tents, 75,000 knapsacks, and similar immense quantities of other articles of clothing and camp equipage. The whole is valued at about $15,000,000.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided that simply grinding rubarb, jalap, opium and drugs of that character, does not subject them to manufacturing taxes, if nothing has been added to or subtracted from them.

A comparison of the statements of the public debt, as given at the close of the month of August, and the close of December, exhibits a decrease of $41,000,000.

A man apparently in great distress called at an undertaker's warehouse in New York, recently, and selected a coffin worth $25, which he directed to be sent to a certain house, tendering in payment a $100 bill. Without suspicion the sum of $75 was given him in change. It was soon after discovered that the $100 bill was counterfeit, and that a coffin was not yet required at the house designated by the impostor.

A negro is advertised for sale at auction in Kentucky in February next.

Chicago has the largest candy manufactory west of New York. It makes three tons of confectionery every day.

THE HOME MONTHLY, for January, has two pages of choice Music; a racy sketch of Western Life, by one of the editors; three Serials, giving sprightly and interesting accounts of European Life and Eastern Travel; an original Story by Sarah J. Foster; Poetry by Lucy Lecom—with a well selected variety of Religious and Literary Articles. A Steel Plate and Six Engravings embellish the number. We are glad to know of its increasing circulation—believing it to be a Magazine of genuine merit and worthy a place in every home.

A COURT UNDER ARREST. The Sampson (N. C.) county Court arrested a negro on the charge of drawing a pistol on a white man, and sentenced him to be sold into servitude. Major Wickersham, of the Freedmen's Bureau, ordered the Court and all parties concerned to be placed under arrest.

TOWN SEAL FOR DORCHESTER. A new seal will be presented to the town of Dorchester on the occasion of the next town meeting, of which we have the following description:

Upon the rim, Dorchester, 1630; the year the town was settled. Upon the scroll, Pietate, Liberis, Industria, signifying Piety, Literature, Industry. Upon the top of the shield, a triple tower, from the seal of old Dorchester, England, from which place many of the early settlers of the town came. Upon the shield, a church, school house, a mill, upon the bank of a stream, and a sun rising over distant hills, allegorical of the first church in this town (a small thatched roof building) being that used by the first organized church in the colony of Massachusetts Bay, now the church of the First Parish, in Dorchester, Rev. N. Hall, pastor; of the first school-house built in Dorchester, being for the use of the first free school in the world, and of the first mill, built upon the bank of Neponset river, Dorchester, it being the first mill built upon the continent of America. The sun rising over the Blue Hills is allegorical of the rise of Piety, Literature and Industry, represented upon the seal.

See Medical Properties contained in Dispensary of the U. S., of which the following is a correct copy: "Buchu.—Its odor is strong, diffusive and somewhat aromatic, its taste bitterish, and analogous to that of mint. It is given chiefly in complaints of the Urinary Organs, such as Gravel, Chronic Catarrh of the Bladder, Mucous Irritation of the Bladder and Urethra, Diseases of the Prostate, and Retention or the Incontinence of Urine, from a loss of tone in the parts concerned in its evacuation. It has also been recommended in Dyspepsia, Chronic Rheumatism, Cutaneous Affections and Dropsy."

MANUFACTURING CHEMIST

IN THE WORLD.

I am acquainted with H. T. Helmhold; he occupies the drug store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise. Wm. WRIGHTMAN, (Firm of Powers & Wrightman.) Manufacturing Chemist Ninth and Brown Streets, Philadelphia.

[From the Phila. Evening Bulletin, March 10th.] We are gratified to hear of the continued success, in New York, of our townsman, Mr. H. T. Helmhold, Druggist. His store, next to the Metropolitan Hotel, is 25 feet front, 230 feet deep, and five stories in height. It is certainly a grand establishment, and speaks favorably of the merit of his articles. He retains his Office and Laboratory in this city, which are also model establishments of their class.

The proprietor has been induced to make this statement from the fact that his remedies, although advertised, are

GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

And knowing that the intelligent refrain from using anything pertaining to Quackery or the Patent Medicine order—most of which are prepared by self-styled Doctors, who are too ignorant to read a physician's simplest prescription, much less competent to prepare pharmaceutical preparations.

THESE PARTIES RESORT

To various means of effecting sales, such as copying parts of advertisements of popular remedies, and finishing with certificates. The Science of Medicine stands SIMPLE PURE and MAJESTIC—having Fact for its Basis, Induction for its Pillar, Truth alone for its Capital.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

Health is most important; and the afflicted should not use an advertised medicine, or any remedy, unless its contents or ingredients are known to others besides the manufacturer, or until they are satisfied of the qualifications of the party so offering.

THE Pacific Hotel, is well and widely known to the traveling public. The location is especially suitable to merchants and business men; it is in close proximity to the business part of the City—is on the highway of Southern and Western travel—and adjacent to all the principal Railroad and Steamboat depots.

The Pacific has liberal accommodations for over 300 guests; it is well furnished, and possesses every modern improvement for the comfort and entertainment of its inmates. The rooms are spacious and well ventilated; provided with gas and water; the attendance is prompt and respectful; and the table is generously provided with every delicacy of the season.

The subscriber, who, for the past few years, has been the lessee, is now sole proprietor, and intends to identify himself thoroughly with the interests of his house. With long experience as a hotel keeper, he trusts, by moderate charges and a liberal policy, to maintain the favorable reputation of the Pacific Hotel.

JUST published, a new edition of Dr. C. Verwell's Celebrated Essay on the Radical Cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHOEA, or seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

[?] Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents. The celebrated author in this admirable essay clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife—pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post paid, on the receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps.

Chamber Furniture.

WE are prepared to offer to dealers and others in want of Painted Chamber Furniture an entirely new and novel article in that line. Our work is done by a Patent Machine. By this invention the actual veins and fibres of the natural grains are molded from the real wood, from which is impressed a perfect fac-simile of the original, thus reproducing upon any painted or bare wood surface a greater variety of grains, with more rapidity and with natural and more artistic beauty, than can possibly be created by the most skillful hand in any of the old modes known. It copies nature exactly. It grains in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsomer and more durable set of Furniture, and at as low a price as can be bought in the city. Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. Those in want would do well to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

OUR LETTER A Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world-wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Gusing, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in classic and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and cheapest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

Let us Make the Best of it.

Life is but a fleeting dream, Care destroys the zest of it; Swift it glideth like a stream— Mind you make the best of it! Talk not of your weary woes, Troubles, or the rest of it; If we have but brief repose, Let us make the best of it.

If your friend has got a heart, There is something fine in him, Cast away his darker part, Cling to what's divine in him, Friendship is our best relief, Make no heartless jest of it; It will brighten every grief, If we make the best of it.

Happiness despises state; 'Tis no sage experiment, Simply that the wise and great May have joy and merriment; Rank is not its spell refined, Money's not the test of it, But a calm contented mind, That will make the best of it.

Trusting in the Power above, Which, sustaining all of us In one common bond of love, Bindeth great and small of us, Whatsoever may befall— Sorrows or the rest of it— We shall overcome them all, If we make the best of it.

Scraps.

JELLY OF CODLIVER OIL. M. Dufour-mante proposes the following recipe for preparing a jelly of this disagreeable medicine. Take of codliver oil, 30 grammes; isinglass, 2 grammes; water, a sufficient quantity to dissolve the isinglass. When the latter is dissolved, add the oil gradually, stirring constantly, aromatising it at the same time with nutmeg or other oil, 4 drops. A large tablespoonful is a dose.

The life-preservers most frequently used on the battle-field are long legs.

How long Eve, the first woman lived, we do not know. It is a curious fact that in Sacred History, the age, death and burial of only one woman, Sarah the wife of Abraham, is distinctly noted. Woman's age ever since, appears not to have been a subject for history or discussion.

Tom is a bright boy, and very much attached to his mother. The other day his father came home in a bad humor. And was scolding and finding fault with things generally. Little Tom sat and listened until he thought it necessary to interfere in behalf of his mother, when, looking up at his father he said in a decided tone: "If you did not like her ways what did you marry her for?"

Nothing teaches patience like a garden. You may go around and watch the opening bud from day to day; but it takes its own time, and you cannot urge it on faster than it will. If forced, it is only torn to pieces. All the best results of a garden, like those of life, are slowly but regularly progressive.

A minister who had been reproving one of his elders for over-indulgence, observed a cow go down to a stream, take a drink, and then turn away. "There," said he to his offending elder, "is an example for you; the cow has quenched its thirst, and has retired." "Yes," replied the elder, "that is very true. But suppose another cow had come to the other side of the stream, and said, 'Here's to you,' there's no saying how long they might have gone on."

Miscellaneous.

The Hypochondriac.

From one of the Paris exchanges the following graphic and interesting sketch has been translated, which shows how vitally important is presence of mind to the professional man.

A young Spaniard of a wealthy and respectable family of Cape Verde, arrived in Paris a few months since, accompanied by his mother. The moment they had descended from their post-chaise they inquired the address of the celebrated Dr. Orfila; having ascertained it, they proceeded directly to his house, and were fortunate enough to find him at home.

Doctor, said the young man, our ancestors were I believe, compatriots; it is, however your European reputation that has attracted us hither, and that induced us to take so long a voyage in order to consult you.

The Doctor, whilst listening to the son, directed his attention to the mother, whose sunken eye and pallid features bespoke intense suffering.

Fortunately, not, interrupted the young Spaniard, it is for me.

The mother suppressed a sigh, and furtively wiped away a tear with her pocket handkerchief.

Ah! for you! said the doctor, in a tone of astonishment, for the young man appeared to be in the enjoyment of perfect health. Let's see, sir; give me the details of your malady. I am all attention.

Doctor, said the son, you see before you the most miserable being on earth. I am afflicted with three infirmities, which debar me from the enjoyment of those pleasures to which my age and my fortune entitle me; these infirmities causes me to tremble in the presence of a woman, and to shun the society of my own sex; my pride as a Spaniard and a gentleman being in my continual apprehension of some affront either in love or friendship. Judge, Doctor, of my position.

Dr. Orfila bent forward his head, and extended his arms, as if awaiting some further explanation ere he could answer.

The mother crossed her hands and raised her eyes to heaven in the attitude of prayer. Here is my first infirmity, continued the young Spaniard, placing his forefinger on his nose; this, I have been told, may be easily cured by a new operation, recently invented by a Paris practitioner; and I am ready to submit to any thing.

The Doctor looked at the young man's nose; its fine aquiline outline and perfect chiselling might serve as a study for an artist.

Truly, said the Doctor, so conspicuous a deformity must render you very unhappy. It is enough to do so, indeed, said the Doctor. Your nose struck me the moment you entered the room—

You see, Doctor, that I am right! Certainly, sir. What a pity, thought I, that the countenance of that young man should be disgraced by such an unnatural deformity.

That's what every one thinks, Doctor. Let us come now to the other infirmities, said the Doctor, with imitable sang froid. Examine my cheeks and chin, Doctor.

I have examined them. What do you see? Nothing. Precisely so, Doctor. Nothing!—no beard, not even the lightest down! No indication of my sex! If I wish to marry, what man would give me his daughter?

No man! you are right, sir. Doctor, I have employed for the second infirmity a remedy which a friend had prescribed for me. I shave twice a day with the best English razors.

And has it succeeded? Not at all, Doctor. Astonishing!

You see, mother, said the young man, turning to the lady, that the Doctor does me full justice, and does not treat me as a madman, like my uncle and cousin.

Your uncle and cousin must themselves be mad, said the Doctor. As soon as you entered I exclaimed to myself—what a fine young man, and what a pity he has not a handsome beard, such as is worn by dandies of the present day! but let us pass to the third infirmity.

You have not already observed it, Doctor. Why—yes—I thought—I discovered—a certain—

A certain what?

A—something exceedingly shocking in— In my carriage. There is a striking defect there. So well there may be. I—half frightfully—my left foot is four inches shorter than my right.

O, that is evident at first sight, said the Doctor. What a pity, thought I, that so handsome a young man should be lame.

You understand me, Doctor, that with these three infirmities life is intolerable to me. Intolerable indeed it must be.

It is for this I came to you, said the young man, crossing his hands devoutly, as if before some holy image, to you, god of the medical art, to implore of you life. I am told you are in possession of secrets so wonderful that they cure what has hitherto been considered incurable. Take pity on my condition, make me live the life of other men, and all my fortune is at your service.

The poor mother shook her head in despair and wept.

Sir, said the Doctor, I have been so fortunate as to cure even greater infirmities than yours. If I find you a submissive and courageous patient I—

O, interrupted the Spaniard, cut my flesh as if it were marble, I shall not utter a complaint—not a sigh shall escape me.

Souther & Monroe. Opposite the Maine Depot, Boston. MANUFACTURERS AND PROPRIETORS OF THE CELEBRATED MACHINE GRAINED Chamber Furniture.

WE are prepared to offer to dealers and others in want of Pained Chamber Furniture an entirely new and novel article in that line. Our work is done by a Patent Machine. By this invention the actual veins and fibres of the natural grains are molded from the real wood, from which is impressed a perfect fac-simile of the original, thus reproducing upon any painted or bare wood surface a greater variety of grains, with more rapidity and with natural and more artistic beauty, than can possibly be created by the most skillful hand in any of the old modes known. It copies nature exactly. It grains in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsome and more durable set of Furniture, and at as low a price as can be bought in the city. Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. Those in want would do well to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

The Singer SEWING MACHINES.

OUR LETTER A Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world-wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Gauging, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

Send for a PAMPHLET.

Let us Make the Best of it.

Life is but a fleeting dream, Care destroys the zest of it; Swift it glideth like a stream— Mind you make the best of it! Talk not of your weary woes, Troubles, or the rest of it; If we have but brief repose, Let us make the best of it.

If your friend has got a heart, There is something fine in him, Cast away his darker part, Cling to what's divine in him, Friendship is our best relief,— Make no heartless jest of it; It will brighten every grief, If we make the best of it.

Happiness despises state; 'Tis no sage experiment, Simply that the wise and great May have joy and merriment; Rank is not its spell refined; Money's not the test of it, But a calm contented mind, That will make the best of it.

Trusting in the Power above, Which, sustaining all of us In one common bond of love, Bindeth great and small of us, Whatsoever may befall— Sorrows or the rest of it— We shall overcome them all, If we make the best of it.

Scraps.

JELLY OF CODLIVER OIL. M. Dufour-mante proposes the following recipe for preparing a jelly of this disagreeable medicine. Take of codliver oil, 30 grammes; isinglass, 2 grammes; water, a sufficient quantity to dissolve the isinglass. When the latter is dissolved, add the oil gradually, stirring constantly, aromatising it at the same time with nutmeg or other oil, 4 drops. A large tablespoonful is a dose.

The life-preservers most frequently used on the battle-field are long legs.

How long Eve, the first woman lived, we do not know. It is a curious fact that in Sacred History, the age, death and burial of only one woman, Sarah the wife of Abraham, is distinctly noted. Woman's age ever since, appears not to have been a subject for history or discussion.

Tom is a bright boy, and very much attached to his mother. The other day his father came home in a bad humor. And was scolding and finding fault with things generally. Little Tom sat and listened until he thought it necessary to interfere in behalf of his mother, when, looking up at his father he said in a decided tone: "If you did not like her ways what did you marry her for?"

I need scarcely add that the weather cleared up at once and the storm was over.

But suppose another cow had come to the other side of the stream, and said, 'Here's to you,' there's no saying how long they might have gone on."

Miscellaneous.

The Hypochondriac.

From one of the Paris exchanges the following graphic and interesting sketch has been translated, which shows how vitally important is presence of mind to the professional man.

A young Spaniard of a wealthy and respectable family of Cape Verde, arrived in Paris a few months since, accompanied by his mother. The moment they had descended from their post-chaise they inquired the address of the celebrated Dr. Orfila; having ascertained it, they proceeded directly to his house, and were fortunate enough to find him at home.

Doctor, said the young man, our ancestors were I believe, compatriots; it is, however your European reputation that has attracted us hither, and that induced us to take so long a voyage in order to consult you.

The Doctor, whilst listening to the son, directed his attention to the mother, whose sunken eye and pallid features bespoke intense suffering.

Fortunately, not, interrupted the young Spaniard, it is for me.

The mother suppressed a sigh, and furtively wiped away a tear with her pocket handkerchief.

Ah! for you! said the doctor, in a tone of astonishment, for the young man appeared to be in the enjoyment of perfect health. Let's see, sir; give me the details of your malady. I am all attention.

Doctor, said the son, you see before you the most miserable being on earth. I am afflicted with three infirmities, which debar me from the enjoyment of those pleasures to which my age and my fortune entitle me; these infirmities causes me to tremble in the presence of a woman, and to shun the society of my own sex; my pride as a Spaniard and a gentleman being in my continual apprehension of some affront either in love or friendship. Judge, Doctor, of my position.

Dr. Orfila bent forward his head, and extended his arms, as if awaiting some further explanation ere he could answer.

Here is my first infirmity, continued the young Spaniard, placing his forefinger on his nose; this, I have been told, may be easily cured by a new operation, recently invented by a Paris practitioner; and I am ready to submit to any thing.

The Doctor looked at the young man's nose; its fine aquiline outline and perfect chiselling might serve as a study for an artist.

Truly, said the Doctor, so conspicuous a deformity must render you very unhappy. It is enough to do so, indeed, said the Doctor. Your nose struck me the moment you entered the room—

You see, Doctor, that I am right!

Certainly, sir. What a pity, thought I, that the countenance of that young man should be disfigured by such an unnatural deformity.

That's what every one thinks, Doctor.

Let us come now to the other infirmities, said the Doctor, with immitable sang froid. Examine my cheeks and chin, Doctor.

I have examined them.

What do you see?

Nothing.

Precisely so, Doctor. Nothing!—no beard, not even the lightest down! Nondication of my sex! If I wish to marry, what man would give me his daughter?

No man! you are right, sir.

Doctor, I have employed for the second infirmity a remedy which a friend had prescribed for me. I shave twice a day with the best English razors.

And has it succeeded?

Not at all, Doctor.

Astonishing!

You see, mother, said the young man, turning to the lady, that the Doctor does me full justice, and does not treat me as a madman, like my uncle and cousin.

Your uncle and cousin must themselves be mad, said the Doctor. As soon as you entered I exclaimed to myself—what a fine young man, and what a pity he has not a handsome beard, such as is worn by dandies of the present day! but let us pass to the third infirmity.

You have not already observed it, Doctor.

Why—yes—I thought—I discovered—a certain—

A certain what?

A—something exceedingly shocking in—

In my carriage. There is a striking defect there. So well there may be. I—half frightfully—my left foot is four inches shorter than my right.

O, that is evident at first sight, said the Doctor. What a pity, thought I, that so handsome a young man should be lame.

You understand me, Doctor, that with these three infirmities life is intolerable to me. Intolerable indeed it must be.

It is for this I came to you, said the young man, crossing his hands devoutly, as if before some holy image, to you, god of the medical art, to implore of you life. I am told you are in possession of secrets so wonderful that they cure what has hitherto been considered incurable. Take pity on my condition, make me live the life of other men, and all my fortune is at your service.

The poor mother shook her head in despair and wept.

Sir, said the Doctor, I have been so fortunate as to cure even greater infirmities than yours. If I find you a submissive and courageous patient I—

O, interrupted the Spaniard, cut my flesh as if it were marble, I shall not utter a complaint—not a sigh shall escape me.

We shall proceed, then, to the operation.

The mother opened her eyes and gazed steadily at Dr. Orfila, who said to her: Madam you may stay; make your mind easy—I shall spare your maternal tenderness as much as possible. I shall etherize your son, and the operation will be accomplished without pain.

At these words the Doctor arranged on the table a formidable array of surgical instruments, and having made the young Spaniard recline on a couch, he administered ether to him. When certain that his patient had become insensible, he touched his nose with several instruments, and pretended to deposit something on a silver plate. The first operation achieved, he fastened a heavy weight to the left foot, making all the while as much noise and clanking of irons as he possibly could. The mother watched the Doctor's proceedings, without understanding the meaning of all the surgical manoeuvring.

Madam, said the Doctor, in a low voice, in three seconds the influence of ether will cease—your son will recover the use of his faculties. At a sign from me you must cast yourself into his arms, exclaiming: "My son you are cured."

This was done as directed.

The Doctor also embraced the young man saying to him "Walk."

The Spaniard disengaged his left foot from its iron trammels, and walked up and down the room.

The Doctor and the mother clasped their hands.

Do you suffer? asked the Doctor in the most natural tone imaginable.

Hardly at all, answered the young man, his face as radiant as a seraph's.

And now, said the Doctor, showing him some shapeless particles on a salver, now look at your face in the mirror—here is what I have taken from you—at present you have the mode of an Indian Bacchus.

What an astonishing operation, cried the mother, who now began to comprehend the enigmas; and she thanked the Doctor in the most grateful terms, whilst she held the mirror to her son.

The young man looked at himself in the glass with an air of a Narcissus. Had he been alone, he would have embraced himself.

Doctor, said the mother, who at last understood the ruse, accept on account, and especially as a token of my gratitude, this ring, in which are set three of the finest diamonds of Hyderabad.

I accept it with pleasure, answered the Doctor; adding in a low voice, on condition, Madam, that you permit me to return it to you.

This pretended present had a powerful effect on the young man, and completed his cure.

We have a third infirmity to treat, said the Doctor. I wish to give you the most beautiful black moustache that ever graced the lips of a Christian.

Take this flask, said the Doctor, and bathe your face every morning with the wonderful liquid it contains. Above all, be sure not to shave for two weeks from to-day, and at the expiration of that time, you will resemble one of Titan's portraits. I shall expect to see you in two weeks.

The Spaniard was about to cast himself at the Doctor's feet, but was restrained by a benevolent hand.

My illustrious benefactor, said he, I have but a few days to spend in Paris. I am impatient to return to my native country, where now, thanks to you, I may without shame marry Donna Theresa Figueroa.

Very well, said the Doctor, marry as soon as you please. I authorize you to do so, and you may trust me.

The sileus were most touching; the Doctor secretly returned the ring to which he felt he had no claim, and he declined a hundred thousand francs which the imaginary invalid offered him on account.

When I cure a patient, said the Doctor, I accept a fee, but when I restore life, I take nothing—I am repaid.

Never was a freak of the imagination, engendered beneath a tropical sun, more adroitly or more promptly cured. The Doctor has within a few days received a letter from the young Spaniard announcing his marriage, his joy, his happiness, and the radical cure of his triple malady.

Imagination, says the Doctor, is like the lance of Achilles—it wounds and it heals. But it is necessary to know how to wield the lance—there lies the difficulty!

WEALTH.

Excessive wealth is neither glory nor happiness. The cold and sordid wretch who thinks only of himself—who draws his head within his shell, and puts it out only for the purpose of lucre and ostentation—who looks upon his fellow creatures not only without sympathy, but with arrogance and insolence, as if they were made to be his vassals, and he was made their lord—as if they were made for no other purpose than for his aggrandizement. Such a man may be rich; but trust us he can never be happy nor virtuous nor great.

Consoling.

In a village hard by, where ministers are not so plenty as in larger places, Squire F—, a Justice of the Peace, a man of good common sense and sterling integrity, remarkable for bluntness rather than blandness of manner, and whose literary attainments extended to the writing of his name, was called on by a colored family to make a few remarks at the funeral of their son, in the absence of the clergyman of the place. The weeping friends were seated about the room, when he arose and said—"It's pretty bad; but if I was you I wouldn't take on so. It's all for the best. 'Spose he'd lived and grown to be a fat, healthy boy—why, he'd never been nothing but a nigger anyhow."

Precise Bore.

Avoid in conversation all singularity of accuracy. One of the bores of society is the talker who is always setting you right; who, when you report from the paper that ten thousand men fell in some battle, tells you that it was nine hundred and ninety-nine; who when you describe your walk as two miles out and back, assures you that it lacked half a furlong of it. Truth does not consist in minute accuracy of detail, but in conveying a right impression; and there are vague ways of speaking that are truer than strict fact would be. When the Psalmist said—"Rivers of waters run down my eyes, because men keep not the law," he did not state the fact, but he stated a truth deeper than fact, and also truer.

The Climax.

A teacher in a western town in Canada, while making the first visit to his "constituents," came into conversation with an old "Vermont" lady, who had taken up her residence in the "backwoods." Of course the school and former teachers came in for criticism; and the old lady speaking of his predecessor, asked:—Wa'al, master, what do you think he learnt the schollars? Couldn't say, ma'am. Pray what did he teach? Wa'al, he told 'em that this 'ere airth was round, and went around; and all that sort of thing. Now, mester, what do you think of such stuff? Don't you think he was an ignorant feller? Unwilling to come under the category of the ignorant, the teacher evasively remarked:—It really did seem strange, but still, there are many learned men who teach these things. Wa'al, says she, if the airth is round, and goes round, what holds it up? O, these learned men say that it goes around the sun, and that the sun holds it up by virtue of the law of attraction. The old lady lowered her specs, and, by way of climax, responded:—Wa'al, if these high larnt men sez the sun holds up the airth, I should like to know what holds the airth up when the sun goes down!

"Coming Back."

What a world of comfort there is in these two words, when they signify the return of those we love. "He is coming back," says the wife of the patriot soldier, who has fought the good fight valiantly, and received an honorable discharge. Kisses the letter that brings the happy tidings; she weeps tears of joy over its kind and tender words; who sleeps with it under her pillow, and by the virtue of the amulet, sees with sealed eyes her hero, crowned with laurels, spreading to her outstretched arms; and when awakened by the rapture of the visioned meeting, whispers to herself, "Well, well, he is coming back; it will be all true to-morrow." The coming back of children from school, of friends from distant lands, and of husbands, fathers, brothers, sisters, from visits of pleasure or of business, to the expectant hearts at home—all, all are delightful.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Feb. 3d, 1866.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

Good News. The press has arrived. Yes, the press which we have looked for so anxiously, and for which you have waited so patiently, arrived on Thursday. We intend to put it together on Monday next, and if we meet with good success, we shall issue the Patriot next week enlarged and more improved.

Statistics. We intend to publish next week the list of Marriages in Quincy last year; to be followed by Deaths, Births, and such other items of this stamp that we shall be able to gather.

The Universalist Levee at the Town Hall. On Wednesday evening, was more than a success—it was a perfect jam; the spacious room was filled to overflowing; it seemed as if our whole population were there—there were over one thousand; the old Wigwam never shone with more brilliancy, or had a larger, more animated, or happier assemblage within its walls. The arrangements were perfect, in good taste, and were carried out strictly to the letter; the best of order prevailed. The Address of Rev. Mr. Aldrich, at the opening of the meeting, was brief, but effective, breathing love, friendship, and a cordial welcome to all. The remarks by Rev. Mr. Davis, which followed, were spicy, well seasoned with humor, and offered in a spirit of congratulation. The Hancock Glee Club, won golden opinions on the occasion; their solos, glees and songs, were full of inspiring music—especially their "Comic Song," sung in comic costume, which brought down the house in uproarious bursts of mirth and laughter. The Solos by Mr. Bowditch were also finely executed—and made an impression—his star is rising. The Drama came in for a large share of applause—many of the characters were admirably personified. The Tableau had a pleasing effect, and was one of the many interesting features of the evening's entertainments. After the close of the Drama, dancing was introduced, and a happy circle formed, who danced themselves into the dawn of another morning. The 19th Annual Festival of the Society, was an old fashioned Universalist banquet—universally appreciated, and universally to be remembered.

Temperance Lectures. The Quincy Temperance Society will hold their next meeting in Lyceum Hall, next Tuesday evening. The third number of the "Temperance Star" will be read, and the whole subject of temperance legislation will come up for discussion, the principal topics being the Jury Bill and Metropolitan Police Bill.

Rev. Mr. Aldrich will give the fourth lecture of the course under the auspices of the Lodge of good Templars in Mr. Thwing's Church next Sunday evening.

Fire. On Saturday evening last, about half past nine o'clock, a fire was discovered in the barn of Joseph W. Robinson, Esq., on Cross street, West District, which was consumed, with a quantity of hay, two carriages, etc., etc. It was supposed to be the work of an incendiary. We learn that it was insured.

Sleighting. We have fine sleighing, and excellent opportunities to enjoy it. A clear, bracing air, and beautiful moonlight evenings, with teams, such as may be found at the stables of Messrs. French and Hall, makes the amusement a perfect luxury.

The Law of Gravity was beautifully illustrated to us on Thursday evening last, while removing the frame of a large iron press from the sidewalk to the second story. If Newton first caught the idea of the divine law, that all matter is attracted to the centre, by a falling apple, we were impressed with a similar notion, (only with a weightier argument,) when we endeavored, with the assistance of three men, two of whom, the lever power of a fall, and much sage counsel, to overcome the tenacity of the principle in the ponderous body, in order to raise it from its recumbent position outside, to a place in our apartments above, for future convenience and use, and the public accommodation.

Connubial. We received yesterday morning from our old friend and former townsman, Joseph G. Brackett, Esq., a marriage, which will be found under the appropriate head, and also, the following interesting lines:

"I send you a marriage notice for the Patriot. This makes three ladies that I think were born in our good Old Town, that have been married here within the last six months, namely: Miss Susie B. Cook, Mrs. Anna (Rose) Robie, and Miss Esther A. Clapp.

Veteran Missionary. Thomas Thwing, now on his thirtieth year of labor as City Missionary in Boston, has printed a report of the labors performed in 1865. Although 74 years of age, he is able to do something daily for the poor. Twenty-four religious services, nine hundred and fifty visits, and six thousand tracts distributed are among the items. Incidents of labor are mentioned, illustrative of a missionary's life in a large city like Boston.

Photographic Miniatures—No. 11.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, JAN. 31, 1866.

When by sharp contests, a politician gains official position over a distinguished opponent, friends and the public press are wont to ascribe such triumph to 'personal popularity'—A clever remark, covering an amazing idea, as applied to public men. There is a wide gulf between sensational popularity, and vital, positive popularity.

John Hancock was beloved, on account of his generous impulses, genial disposition and whole-soul devotion to the welfare of the masses. The people believed in him, their billows of approbation wafted him on—on—ever gathering volume and acclaim, till, in manhood's prime, in gubernatorial robes, and in the zenith of fame, the hand of the Most High beckoned him to a seat in realms of eternal light; his was intrinsic, orthodox, personal popularity.

Henry J. Gardner, through curious combinations and questionable bed-fellows—with a host which no man could number, and as invincible as old Napoleon's Imperial Guard, one clear autumnal morning, came down upon the haughty Whig party, with more effective broadsides than Admiral Farragut ever poured against rebel batteries; producing a hors de combat paralleled only by Pharoah's great rout of foot and dragons in the Red Sea; elected Governor of Massachusetts, for three years, was enveloped in popular refrain of Hosanna and Hallelujah, such as never before was known in "all Israel." When lo! a little cloud appeared—the lamp of the dark lantern flickers in the distance; the "Bobbin Boy," with spur and charger, enters the arena. The "Iron Man" consents to stand fire; the people roll up a majority for N. P. Banks—his Governor of Massachusetts. The official prestige of Henry J. Gardner goes like chaff before the whirlwind. This illustrates sensational popularity; which, like all unnatural stimulants, when thrust in large doses into the human stomach, reacts in nausea, terminates in exhaustion, and culminates in remorse of conscience.

Norfolk County can marshal a formidable troop of professed politicians; they understand to a charm how to manufacture popular opinion, by measuring the quantity of head-wind, necessary to move the big wheel, so essential in working primary caucuses for delegates to Municipal, County and State Conventions. Nevertheless, their well-laid plans are sometimes foiled at the polls, by the authors of their own creation—the sovereign people.—One of the most responsible trusts in Norfolk County is held by a gentleman, whom the dominant party have again and again courted off their ticket; the people believe in him—the ballot box tests his "personal popularity." There is yet another gentleman who never is managing and calculating the chance of office,—but the people are constantly after him to repose trust; whatever duties he assumes, he acquits himself modestly; has no important airs, nor Solon-wise squints, when approached by his fellows. If he officiates as Chairman of Selectmen, he graces the post and fills it complete. If he is Representative to General Court, he goes in for business; gives a wide berth to blabbing members—and, at the end of the session, pleasantly mingles with his townsmen, without aping the cock turkey, because he had seen the State House. If a magistrate, would so temper mercy with moderation, that the erring brother, with a contrite spirit and melting heart, would honor the Judge and love the man; if placed in trust of County finances, would exercise the same excellent judgment and caution, he would bring into requisition in his private transactions.

In this reverie, we attain an altitude as towering as Milton's "Blue Hills;" perch at its granite base—contemplate the feasibility of tunneling the same, that the Bridgewater and Randolph, might in transit of merchandise, with a hole through this mountain, reach Boston seventeen minutes earlier than on Fall River route. Certainly it would seem fair that Eastern Massachusetts, should have the privilege of looking up in the vaults of Blue Hills a few million of dollars, by way of experiment, with "General Haupt" as Engineer, and friend Bird as State Engineer on the western brink, analyzing for quartz porridge!

With all deference, we now have the honor to introduce
HON. CHARLES ENDICOTT, of Canton.
Member of State Senate, Chairman of Horse Railroad, Bridges, Canals, &c.
Mr. Endicott so much resembles Governor William Sprague of Rhode Island, that we deem it superfluous at this time to delineate. Suffice it to say, that United States Senator Sprague, is about the size of General Banks, and one of the finest looking gentlemen in the National Senate. His election to the Senate of the United States, was a success owing to "personal popularity." Mr. Endicott's success and honors issue from the same source. So note it be.

Our Photographs will continue.

KEOKUCK.

Snow. One who has made the subject, as he says, one of observation during the past forty-five years, says that the absence of dampness in the soil is the reason why we have had so little snow this season. A wet soil has a tendency, he says, to attract rain and snow which a dry one has not.

For the Patriot.
Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, FEB. 1, 1866.

January has closed, having been a very dull month for business. All signs indicate a great financial crisis, and hence the caution and hesitancy that pervade the business community here. A revolution is going on in a special manner with the dry goods market. Prices have made a heavy turn downward, and they bid fair to go much lower during the present month. Country trade has been very dull, and the unsettled condition of the South, limits the trade of the North to the Southern cities. Production is going on; imports continue, and the market increased by supply rather than lessened. It is known here that the supply of gold in the country is ample for all real wants. The premium on gold has touched its highest point for the present year, and with the decline in the price of merchant dize, gold must take a sure descending scale.

We have good sleighing here, and this healthy exercise seems well improved by the lovers of pleasure. Livery stable keepers are reaping a rich harvest, and well they may, for the prices of carriage hire in Boston are enormous.

The daily special despatches from Washington are received with much interest by all classes, inasmuch as the action of Congress has a direct bearing on business enterprise. One important matter seems settled, that we are to have no change in government taxes the present year.

The National House of Representatives almost daily in a Committee of the Whole, have, under consideration the President's Message. The debates show that there is a wide difference between President Johnson and many of his political party on the matter of reconstruction; but all aiming at one great end, the establishment forever of the Union on the basis of freedom and equality to every man, woman and child of our land. In a conversation which took place between a distinguished Senator and the President a few days since; the latter stated, that he doubted the propriety of making any further amendments to the Constitution; propositions to this effect were becoming too numerous. They had a tendency, in his view, to diminish the dignity and prestige attached to the Constitution of the country, and to lessen the respect and confidence of the people in their great charter of freedom. If, however, amendments are to be made to the Constitution, changing the basis of representation and taxation, and he did not deem them at all necessary at the present time, he knew of none better than a simple proposition embraced in a few lines, making in each State the number of qualified voters the basis of representation, and the value of property the base of taxation. On one point the President was strong in his opinion, that the agitation of the negro suffrage question in the District of Columbia at the present time, was the mere entering wedge to the question throughout the States; was ill-timed, uncalculated, and calculated to do great harm. He believed it would engender enmity, contention and strife between them, which would result in great injury to both, and the certain extermination of the negro population. These views are not in accordance with what are termed the radical opinions of a portion, but not a majority, of Congressional men. We yield to no man in deference to the Federal Constitution. It was ordained in good faith by our Fathers nearly four-score years ago. But we believe with Thomas Jefferson that every generation has a right to revise the frame of its organic government. Time changes all things—and with it the exigencies of a community, the wants of a nation.—The period seems to have arrived, when the President of the United States should be chosen direct from the people, as Representatives are elected, and not by that miserable machinery the electoral colleges. The country demands national uniformity in the right of suffrage. The qualifications of voters in national elections, to be prescribed by Congress, and not the States; placing representation on the principles of political justice. It should be established by organic law that no State has a right to secede. The tenure of the National Judiciary should be limited to a term of years, and not for life; and Congress should have vested the power to levy duties on exports as well as imports. These amendments to the Constitution would form a more perfect Union, enlarge the scope of humanity, and impart equality to all in the widest sense.

D. H. THURSTON & Co. These extensive cracker bakers, located at No. 46 Elm street, Cambridgeport, are largely engaged in the manufacture of all kinds of crackers, which are put up in barrels, half barrels, tin boxes and cartons, for shipping purposes, and they can be transported without the least detriment to the materials. Their Wine, Butter, and Milk Crackers are a superior article, and are extensively used by the first families of New England. Their toast crackers are a perfect luxury, and a great auxiliary to a good family breakfast. Any orders addressed to Thurston & Co., will be promptly executed, and all articles designed for transportation will be carefully and securely packed. Their Ginger Snaps melt like butter in the mouth, and children cry for them.

Lectures. The course of lectures now being delivered at the Meeting House at Quincy Point was most happily inaugurated on Thursday evening, by the Rev. Geo. Bowler of Roxbury, who as "Isma'il Ibn Abdallah" in full Turkish costume addressed the audience upon "Life in the Orient." This gentleman by a sojourn of some length in Turkey has made himself familiar with Turkish life, and manners, and seizing upon salient points, by a series of short but graphic sketches, with the aid of the dress to which his figure and complexion gave significance, he was enabled to place before his hearers the Turk himself.

For nearly two hours he held the undivided attention of his audience conveying at the same time both pleasure and instruction.

An evening of interest and profit awaits those who may have the good fortune of hearing this really fine lecture, and commitments will do well in securing the services of Mr. Bowler. The next lecture of the course will be on Tuesday next week by the Rev. William S. Studley of the Tremont Street Methodist Church in Boston, on "Grumbling."

Sad Casualty. As Mr. B. D. Vining of South Weymouth, well known to the boot shoe and leather trade, was removing a load of wood from his lot on a sled, Saturday afternoon, the 27th ult., by some supposed collision with the trees beside the path, he was thrown from his sled, the runner of the sled passing about one-half its length over his body, when the sled became entangled in a tree, stopping the horse with the load, consisting of about two feet of oak wood, resting full upon his chest. He left his home about 4 o'clock P. M., and not returning, friends went in search of him about 8 o'clock, and found him in the position above described. Life was extinct and the body stiffened. He leaves a wife to mourn his loss, and the community has lost one of its most active, useful and esteemed members.

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.—The Constitutional Amendment passed by the United States House of Representatives on Wednesday last, by a vote of 140 to 46, is in the words following:—

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, two-thirds of both houses concurring, that the following article be proposed to the legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three-fourths of said legislatures, shall be valid as a part of the Constitution:—

"ARTICLE.—Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed, provided that whenever the elective franchise shall be denied or abridged in any State on account of race or color, all therein, of such race or color, shall be excluded from the basis of representation."

Messrs. Elliot and Baldwin, of Massachusetts, voted against the amendment. It will at once go up to the Senate, and many are confident it will be concurred in there, by the requisite vote of two-thirds.

INTERNAL REVENUE PENALTIES. The fines, penalties and forfeitures collected in internal revenue cases for the six months last past, amount to $640,000.

GLEASON'S LITERARY COMPANION. This valuable Literary Weekly commenced a new volume January 1st, 1866, in grand style, with new type, new heading, and an entire new dress throughout. The "LITERARY COMPANION" is an elegant, moral and refined miscellaneous Family Journal. Its columns are devoted to Poetic Literature, Wit and Humor, Prose and Pictorial Gems. An unrivalled corps of the best writers and artists have been engaged for the coming year, and several new and popular features will be introduced. Among which will be a page of Natural History illustrated; a page of illustrations from the Bible, numerous engravings, beginning with the Creation of the World; also winter evening amusements with engravings, illustrated Rebus, &c., &c. In size the "Literary Companion," is some fifteen hundred square inches, forming a mammoth weekly of sixteen octavo pages, and containing nearly twice as much reading matter and of a more refined character than any other weekly paper. No money or pains will be spared in order to render "GLEASON'S ILLUSTRATED LITERARY COMPANION" for 1866 the handsomest and best weekly paper ever produced in the United States. Terms, 1 subscriber, one year, $3; 4 subscribers, $10; 10 subscribers, one year, $20; and one gratis to the letter of a club of ten. Sample copies will be sent on receipt of 5 cents. Address F. Gleason, 22 Summer Street Boston, Mass.

Parker's Pectoral Pastilles give immediate relief in all cases of Coughs, Colds and Affections of the chest and lungs, and restores to Singers and Speakers, a clearness of voice. They contain no opium nor any thing deleterious, and are wonderful in the efficacy with which they effect the cure of all diseases of the throat. For sale by all Druggists. Price 25 cents a box.— Depot, 72 William Street, New York. Jan. 13, 1866.

Summary of Intelligence.

For Boots and Shoes at your own prices, go to Curtis's for the next 30 days. See advertisement.

The expenses of Plymouth County for 1865 were $32,513, and the receipts, $48,013.

The New York Bible Society since it was instituted in 1824, has circulated nearly two millions of volumes.

They are finding in Vermont quarries, such excellent specimens of purely white marble that a foreign demand for it is springing up.

In the last twelve years there have been 5372 lives lost by steamboat accidents in this country.

The citizens of Barre, Mass., have voted $7000 for the erection of a soldiers' monument.

The internal revenue from pianos is enormous. Steinway alone, during the month of November paid in $611 62.

From drawings in the Egyptian tombs, and from objects found in them, it appears that glass-blowers abounded in Egypt 2000 years B. C.

No fewer than 1500 Freemasons held a meeting in Paris in honor of those masons who had died during the year. President Lincoln King Leopold, and Marshal Magnan were mentioned among the deceased Freemasons.

Two smart boys in Waterbury, Conn., twelve years old each, have started a local newspaper. They do the editing, composition and presswork themselves and sell their own paper on the street. The sheet measures seven inches by nine.

There are two hundred and sixty-two millions of national bank money in circulation.

There is a scarcity of water in all the ponds in Massachusetts.

A carefully taken census shows that Washington has $23,000 colored residents.

As many as one million pounds of paper are yearly manufactured from firewood by one company at Gottenburg.

Fermented liquors and wines contain indole, but milk is richer in that substance than wine. The proportion of indole in milk is in the inverse ratio of the quantity yielded. Eggs also contain indole, a fowl's egg weighing 50 grains, contains more indole than a quart of cow's milk.

There will be no full moon this month, and the same will be the case in February 1865.

The price of butter in various places has declined to forty cents. Many farmers who looked forward to the receipt of sixty cents for it, and who refused forty eight, are constrained to sell at the first named prices.

Mr. Adams has been elected Honorary Fellow of the London Society of Antiquaries, in place of Mr. Everett. This is an honor rather grudgingly conferred, and therefore more highly prized than most similar honors are. The other Americans who are honorary fellows are, we believe, Messrs. George Ticknor, Jared Sparks, Nathaniel B. Shurtleff, George Bancroft, Robert C. Winthrop, Joseph R. Rogers, and John Lothrop Motley.

A CARD.—The Committee on Entertainment for the Universalist Levee would tender their warmest thanks to the Hancock Glee Club for their earnest and praise-worthy aid (as a Club and also individually) in our late Entertainment. The public approbation lavished so freely upon them, is well merited; and we offer our warmest congratulations for their decided success, in all good faith—and as an assurance that we have not and shall not forget their kindly assistance—volunteering when we first commenced our preparations for our Levee. Perhaps in the days coming, we may be enabled to prove we appreciate your services—and by timely help show, that when needed, we will not be found wanting. Per order of Chairman,

Are you Lame, Crippled, or Deformed? OR Have you, or your neighbors, a boy or girl who labor with contracted limbs, or curved spine, or crooked feet, or weak or paralyzed limbs, or ankles, or who are entirely helpless, or who are obliged to creep, or to walk with crutches, or whose limbs are shortened, or crooked, or drawn up, or who walk on the toes, or whose ankles roll over or turn inward, or who have crooked knees from white swelling, or scrofula, or who limp from hip difficulties? To save such from a life of misery, will you not write a letter giving the prominent points of the case, and receive in return, free of charge, a circular, which may be the means of saving them? It is addressed Dr. J. P. MANN, 23 West 41st Street, N. Y.

STAMMERING AND STUTTERING permanently cured by BATES' PATENT APPLIANCE. They received a Medal at the last London Exhibition. For pamphlet and Drawings describing the same, address H. C. L. MEARS, 27 West 23d St., N. Y. Box 5, 076.

THE ONLY KNOWN REMEDY FOR DIABETES, IRRITATION OF THE NECK OF THE BLADDER, INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, CATARRH OF THE BLADDER, STRANGURY OR PAINFUL URINATING.

For these diseases, it is truly a sovereign remedy, and too much cannot be said in its praise. A single dose has been known to relieve the most urgent symptoms.

Are you troubled with that distressing pain in the small of the back and through the hips? A teaspoonful a day of Helmholt's Buchu will relieve you.

Physicians and Others PLEASE NOTICE.

I make no secret of ingredients. Helmholt's Extract Buchu is composed of Buchu, Cubeb, and Juniper Berries, selected with great care, prepared in vacuo and according to rules of PHARMACY AND CHEMISTRY.

These ingredients are known as the most valuable Diuretics aforesaid.

A DIURETIC Is that which acts upon the kidneys. Helmholt's Extract Buchu ACTS GENTLY.

Is pleasant in taste and odor, free from all injurious properties, and immediate in its actions. FOR THE SATISFACTION OF ALL, See Medical Properties contained in Dispensatory of the U. S., of which the following is a correct copy: "Buchu—Its odor is strong, diffusive and somewhat aromatic, its taste bitterish, and analogous to that of mint. It is given chiefly in complaints of the Urinary Organs, such as Gravel, Chronic Catarrh of the Bladder, Morbid Irritation of the Bladder and Urethra, Diseases of the Prostate, and Retention or the Incontinence of Urine, from a loss of tone in the parts concerned in its excretion. It has also been recommended in Dyspepsia, Chronic Rheumatism, Cutaneous Affections and Dropsy."

I am acquainted with H. T. Helmholt; he occupied the drug store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise. Wm. WRIGHTMAN, (Firm of Powers & Wrightman, Manufacturing Chemists, Ninth and Broad Streets, Philadelphia.)

[From the Phila. Evening Bulletin, March 10th.] We are gratified to hear of the continued success, in New York, of our townsman, Mr. H. T. Helmholt, Druggist. His store, next to the Metropolitan Hotel, is 25 feet front, 230 feet deep, and five stories in height. It is certainly a grand establishment, and speaks favorably of the merit of his articles. He retains his Office and Laboratory in this city, which are also model establishments of their class.

The proprietor has been induced to make this statement from the fact that his remedies, although advertised, are

GENUINE PREPARATIONS, And knowing that the intelligent refrain from using anything pertaining to Quackery or the Patent Medicine order—most of which are prepared by self-styled Doctors, who are too ignorant to read a physician's simplest prescription, much less competent to prepare pharmaceutical preparations.

THESE PARTIES RESORT To various means of effecting sales, such as copying parts of advertisements of popular remedies, and finishing with certificates.

The Science of Medicine stands SIMPLE PURE AND MAJESTIC—having Fact for its Basis, Induction for its Pillars, Truth alone for its Capital.

A WORD OF CAUTION. Health is most important; and the afflicted should not use an advertised medicine, or any remedy, unless its contents or ingredients are known to others besides the manufacturer, or until they are satisfied of the qualifications of the party so offering.

VINELAND. FARM AND FRUIT LANDS, in a mild and healthy climate, thirty miles south of Philadelphia by Railroad, in New Jersey, on the same line of latitude as Baltimore, Md.

The soil is rich and productive, varying from a clay to a sandy loam, suitable for Wheat, Grass, Corn, Tobacco, Fruits and Vegetables. This is a great fruit country. Five hundred Vineyards and Orchards have been planted out by experienced fruit-growers. Grapes, Peaches, Pears, &c., produce immense profits. Vineland is already one of the most beautiful places in the United States. The entire territory, consisting of fifty square miles of land, is laid out upon a general system of improvements. The land is only sold to actual settlers with provision for public redemption. The place, on account of its great beauty, as well as other advantages, has become the resort of people of taste. It has increased five thousand people within the past 3 years. Churches, Stores, Schools, Academies, Societies of Art and Learning, and other elements of refinement and culture have been introduced. Hundreds of people are constantly settling. Hundreds of new houses are being constructed. Price of Farm land, twenty acres and upward, $25 per acre. Five and ten acre, and Village lots for sale.

Fruits and Veg 2 tables ripen earlier in this district than in any other locality north of Norfolk, Va. Improved places for sale.

Openings for all kinds of business, Lumber yards, Manufactories, Foundries, Stores, and the like; and Steam Power, with room, can be rented.

For persons who desire mild winters, a healthy climate, and a good soil, in a country beautifully improved, abounding in fruits, and possessing all other social privileges, in the heart of civilization, this is a worthy of a visit.

Letters answered and the Vineland Rural, a paper giving full information, and containing Reports of Solon Robinson, sent to applicants. Address CHAS. K. LANDIS, Vineland, P. O., Landis Township, New Jersey.

From Report of Solon Robinson, Agricultural Editor of "The Tribune": "It is one of the most extensive fertile tracts, in an almost level position and suitable condition for pleasant farming that we know of this side of the Western Prairie."

New Store! New Goods! The Subscribers having entered into co-partnership under the firm of J. F. & J. N. Poetry.

ALONE.

Alone, all alone. In this wide world so bleak,
The sad orphan cries as the tears trickle down;
Alone, all alone, no friend who can speak
A word to dispel adversity's frown.

Alone, all alone. The wanderer feels,
As he lays himself down at the foot of the sun,
And the thought of his home, o'er his tired brain steals,
And he prays for the hour when his travels are done.

Alone, all alone. The old man oft sighs,
As he thinks of the friends that in youth
were so gay,
One by one they have passed from the earth to the skies.

And he cares not how soon he may pass the same way.

Alone, not alone. Thank God for the thought,
That the friends of our youth do visit us still,
To cheer our sad moments with agony fraught,
To whisper obedience to His mighty will.

Alone, not alone. God's angels are nigh,
The mother keeps watch o'er her child as of old,
The friends of the aged, though lost to their eye,

Yet wait but to welcome them home to their fold.

Alone, not alone. For God's every where,
Though man in his weakness, may never see
His throne,
But Heaven may show us, better than here,
That on Earth we surely have not been alone.

JOHN J. GLOVER.

Quincy, Jan. 25th, 1866.

Interesting Selections.

CELERY SAUCE. Pick and wash two heads of celery, cut them into pieces an inch long, and stew them in a pint of water and a teaspoonful of salt, until the celery is tender. Rub a large tablespoonful of butter with a spoonful of flour well together; stir this into a pint of cream, and put in the celery and let it boil up once. Serve hot, with boiled poultry.

WEBSTER CAKE. One cup of butter, three of sugar, five of flour, two eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, spice to the taste—mix with sour milk to the right consistency.

GOODNESS. Did it ever strike you that goodness is not only a beautiful thing, but the beautiful thing—by far the most beautiful thing in the world? So that nothing is to be compared for value with goodness; that riches, honor, power, pleasure, learning, the whole world and all in it, are not worth having in comparison with being good, even though he were never to be rewarded for it; believe, even though he were never to be punished for it; and, in a word, goodness is the only thing worth loving, and badness the only thing worth hating.

GIVE A MAN A CHANCE. A wide-awake minister who found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before he had fairly commenced, suddenly stopped and exclaimed, "Brethren, this isn't fair;
it isn't giving a man half a chance. Wait till I get along a piece, and then if I ain't worth listening to, go to sleep; but don't before I get commenced; give a man a chance."

A facetious writer thus describes the "Sea side" hat:—"Sea side hats are made by whitewashing old hoop skirts, standing them out to dry and sitting down on them quick. An old suspender over the top completes the novelty. When out of date they will make excellent parasols for young ducks."

A wag says it is folly to expect a girl to love a man whom everybody speaks well of. Get up a persecution, and her affections will cling so fast that a dozen guardians can't remove them.

A good story is told of a country gentleman who, for the first time heard an Episcopal Bishop preach. He had read much of the aristocracy of the church, and when he returned home he was asked if the people were stuck up.—
"Pshaw! no," replied he; "why the minister preached in his shirt sleeves."

Of present fame little, and of future less; the praises that we receive after we are buried, like the posies that are strewn over our grave, may be gratifying to the living, but they are nothing to the dead; the dead are gone, either to a place where they hear them not, or where, if they do, they will despise them. The way to fame is like the way to heaven—through much tribulation.

Miscellany.

THE JUVENILE DELINQUENT.

A SLY, ragged little urchin was Jacob Jones, and somewhat of a termagant was his mother, Mrs. Abby Jones.

Jacob's father was what is called a "soft kind of a man," that is, he worked all day, handed in his wages in the evening to his wife, remained dumb while she rated him for his short comings, smoked and dozed away his evenings,
and took no interest in anything earthly except his little Jake. It must be owned the child was bright and intelligent enough,
and as he was continually doing mischief,
his father thought that such another boy could no where be found.

If Jake slipped a penny slyly in his pocket, or abstracted sugar from the sugar bowl, his father laughed at the dexterity of the little rascal. If Jake broke any of the crockery in his mother's closet, his father thought it a good joke when he heard the boy telling her it was the big black cat; and if threatened with punishment, it was the funniest thing in the world, to see him creep on all fours and hide under the bed.

O, a smart boy was Jake Jones! he could imitate the cries of the newsboys—show how the big boys boxed—cry "fire," and run after the engines—dodge from under the horses' hoofs at a military parade—hang on the end of a cart, or the step of an omnibus—and last, though not least, could recite a piece.

This latter accomplishment had been taught our hero in return for a pocketful of marbles, given by him to a playfellow who, more fortunate than himself, went daily to a public school.

Like many doating parents, Peter Jones, was fond of displaying his son's acquirements, and whenever a friend dropped in of an evening, there was little room for conversation until Jake had first been shown off.

"Here, Jake, let Mr. Grouty hear the extra." "Ere's the extra Tri-bune, got the rival of the steamer Hi-bur-ne-ha," shouts Jake at the top of his voice, and so on, until the names of nearly all the dailies and weeklies are thundered into neighbor Grouty's ear.

Jake is decidedly literary, for he knows the names of the most popular papers; as to their contents, they are about as familiar to him, as is the spirit of the authors to those who content themselves with reading the title-page.

After the ex-trees, comes cries of "fire—fire—fire," and so on through the whole round of noises until the piece? and here
Jake shines in all his glory.

"Now take your finger out of your mouth—that's a good boy, hold up your head—now make a bow."

Jake kicks back one bare foot, twitches down his head by an uncombed tuft projecting over his forehead, drops his arms, spreads his fingers, and begins:

"You'd scarce ex-pect one on my age."
"Not quite so loud, sonny," says the delighted Peter. The boy's voice was raised almost to a scream.

"To speak in public on the stage," whispered Jake.

"That's a little too low; don't you think so Grouty? try again, sonny."

"And where's the man but four foot high,
"Can—no, could—could—"
"What's the matter now, Jake?"
"I'm forgot this line."

"Well, never mind, give us the rest!"
"And if I chance to fall below Dim-o-thanes or Ci-co-o."

That's it, that's it, said the parent of young Hopeful, rubbing his hands, and gazing admirably on sonny, "go on me boy."

Obedient to the paternal command "me boy," did go on to the end of the sublime effusion, and neighbor Grouty, as in duty bound, expressed himself highly pleased with the performance, while at the same time he was wishing in his heart,
"that Peter Jones wouldn't make such a fool of himself, bothering people so with the noise of that young scamp."

Well was it for old Grouty, that "sonny" had not learned to read, or even to spell, as Peter would have insisted on Jake's showing his proficiency in both,
with permission to slip the hard words;
above all, well was it that the prodigy did not learn "rhetoric," for in such a case
the whole multiplication table, from twice one is two, down to twelve times twelve is one hundred and forty-four would have been repeated for the neighbor's edification.

Shown off by his father, ear-boxed by his mother, who would not send him to school, because she "see no good in larnin," and besides she "wanted Jake to do her errands"—this was all the boy's training at home, and the rest was learned in the street; can we wonder then, if he had barely an intuitive perception of the difference between right and wrong.

When Jake's father died, the eight year old boy cried as if his heart would break, for he knew there would be no one to protect him from the angry violence of his mother. Of this he had feeling proof, when a night or two after his father's funeral, he begged his mother, "not to go in Mrs. Glib's room, and leave him all alone."

"Why, shan't I go in Mrs. Glib's room, youngster? What do you want with me here, and you in bed?"

"O, don't go mother, don't put out the light," sobbed the boy.

"I jist will go, and I jist will put out the light; there ain't no use of wasting the candle, when I'm not here to see by it."

"Mother, I'm afraid."

"Fraid of what, I'd like to know?"

"Joe Smink says, that father's ghost will come back, and haunt us, and I'm afraid o' ghosts, I am."

"Let me ketch Joe Smink a tellin' you such trash again. Lay down, lay down,
I say—don't you hear me! lay down."

And with a violent shaking, and a smart application of the palm of her hand, Mrs.
Jones thrust the terrified boy beneath the bedclothes, and went to gossip with Mrs.
Charity Glib.

Harder and harder grew the life of poor Jake. His mother said he must earn his own living, for he was well nigh on to nine years old, and could carry on wood, and do chores as well as anybody, and for her part she couldn't afford, to support him in idleness. For this harsh usage, Jake solaced himself by reserving pennies out of the sixpences he earned occasionally, and filling his pockets from the cupboard, whenever he found what he thought a "good chance."

Mrs. Glib, the bosom crony of Mrs.
Jones, was a notable housewife in her way, and knew how to make gingerbread, and pickles, and sweetmeats, to use her own elegant phraseology, "dog cheap."

One afternoon, as widow Jones was taking an early dish of tea with her friend, and trying to shed tears to the memory of "poor dear Peter," Mrs. Glib sought to make the disconsolate Abby forget her grief in the pleasures of the table.

"Do take some of these nice pears,
dear, I only done them up this mornin'
see—this little bit."

"O, you're always so good, Charity;
I didn't think when I sot down, I could eat a mouthful; but you're always got somethin' nicer than enny body else."

"Take a little more gingerbread, deary, it won't hurt you. Now what do you think that ere pot o' pears cost?" said Glib, pointing to a huge red earthen jar that stood in a corner.

"I don't know, I'm sure. While poor dear Peter was alive, he never aint more than enough to keep body and soul together, and I never thought o' sich a thing as havin' sweetmeats; not but that I am fond on 'em, and would like to make some if I could."

"Well now, I'll tell you how to go to work cheap, so that they'll cost you next to nothin'; I'll show you how to bile 'em too, and I'll lend you my kittle, and then deary, you can have some to eat jist whenever you want 'em."

"O, you're so good, Charity; how my poor dear Peter, would like to have some sweetmeats I'd made myself."

Perhaps the widow meant, if poor dear
Peter were living, he might like to taste her preserves, but it is somewhat questionable, if poor dear Peter, dead, would care for sweetmeats at all. At any rate the pears, and not only the pears, but some plums were "biled," and to keep them safe from that little wretch, Jake, were put on the topmost shelf of the cupboard, so near the ceiling, that his mother thought them fairly out of his reach.

For days did Jake eye the mysterious jars, and wonder what they contained.
Once he ventured to ask his mother, and received the satisfactory reply, "It's none
o' your business."

This set him thinking more and more, till at last the suspicion dawned upon his mind, that the "red pots" put away so high, must be filled with sweetmeats! How the urchin's mouth watered, and how he watched an opportunity to gratify his curiosity, and taste the forbidden fruit.

"I can take some, and mother won't find it out," soliloquized he; "if she does she'll beat me to death. Well, I don't care; if she gives me another thrashin', I'll run away, so I will. Yes, I'll run away, and get Joe Smink to let me help him sell newspapers."

One eventful day, Jake was left alone in the room with orders not to stir, nor touch a thing during his mother's absence.
He sat for a while drumming his feet upon the floor, and trying very hard to keep himself upon the stool, where he had been told to remain. But it would not do; the temptation became stronger and stronger, until he finally arose, and stole softly to the cupboard. He looked up—there stood the red pots tightly covered—he measured the distance with his eye, and planned the best way to reach the top. He climbed a chair, stood tiptoe on its back, and elongating his body in a remarkable manner, like little Johnny Horne—

"With his finger and thumb
He pulled out a plum."

This one taste but whetted his appetite for more of the dainties; and while his hand was making another dive, he lost his balance—the chair slid from under his feet, and, like the unfortunate babe in his wind-rocked cradle, down came Jakey, and sweetmeats, and all! In the midst of his consternation his mother returned, and what a sight she beheld! Her sweetmeats that "she sot so much store by" on "following their own sweet will" upon the untidy floor. Collaring the boy with one hand, Mrs. Jones made free use of the other, while every blow drove deeper into her son's heart, the determination to leave his home.

Let no parent while in a passion, ever correct a child. Such correction but rouses up bitter feelings of anger and defiance;
it but hardens and makes rebellious the heart which a gentle admonition might soften and subdue.

That night, and many a long night after,
did Mrs. Jones look in vain for her child.

The morning after Jacob left his mother,
he met Joe Smink, with a bundle of newspapers under his arm, and he forthwith made an appeal to the generosity of that worthy. But Joe was selfish, unwilling to share his profits with another, and after one or two unsuccessful attempts to rouse his benevolence Jake left him.

"They'm all hard-hearted, so they am,"
said the hungry boy, as he turned away.
Wandering about the streets and wharves, begging, and sometimes appropriating to himself small articles for which he did not beg—for poor Jake had not been taught that one part of his duty towards his neighbor was to "keep his hands from picking and stealing"—hiding himself at night under a stoop, or creeping into some covered wagon. It was thus the boy lived for weeks in the heart of the populous city.

He would frequently stand and look at children in the street, boys with gay clothes, smart hats, and tasseled canes;
and little girls, miniature women, like stage puppets bedizened with finery and made ridiculous by the vanity of their elaborate, and then he would sink into some corner, ashamed of his tattered appearance, and cherishing no amiable feelings to the pampered youngsters who passed him by.

At last, Jake, with four or five other juvenile delinquents found themselves and their rags clutched in the strong arm of the law.

Within the walls of the house of refuge, for the first time since the death of his father, did the boy hear a kind word.

He never told that he had a mother;
and when a mild, benevolent looking man went seeking for a boy who might be useful in the country, he selected Jake.

The outcast went cheerfully with his new friend, and found at last a protector and a home.

O, blessed and God-like benevolence,
how thy warm tones sink down and melt the frozen heart—how thy kind looks beam back like reflected sunbeams from the face which had grown hard and rigid in its outlines of woe and want—how thy touch of brotherhood thrills through every nerve, and opens the sealed fountain of grateful tears! Kind words, charitable thoughts, benevolent deeds, ye are the three crowning graces of humanity!

Jake's master was a man-loving, God-fearing man, who, without possessing that morbid sentiment and spurious philanthropy which exalts a criminal into a hero, looked upon all his fellow-creatures as members of one great family, and sought by patience, by kindness, by long-suffering, to win the erring and sinful back to the paths of virtue and peace.

For a while the good man feared that his exertions with regard to Jacob would be of no avail. The seed appeared to fall on stony ground; but as the constant dripping of the water-drops wears away the rock, so did line upon line and precept upon precept imprint themselves upon the boy's heart.

Dear, kind, man-loving, God-fearing, Mr. Garrison! To your benevolent heart; to your faith in humanity; to your patience with the untaught, homeless boy; to your endeavors to follow in the footsteps of Him who seemed not to sit with publicans and sinners, is owing this scene of earthly happiness! For you, and such as you, in the blessed Heaven is laid up a great reward!

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, FEB. 10, 1866.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

TO READERS AND PATRONS.

It is with great pleasure, kind friends, after several weeks of trials and disappointments, to be able to present to you to-day, the Patriot enlarged in its dimensions, improved in its appearance, and we hope also in its general intellectual aspect. Our object in making this enlargement, is to render the Patriot of more interest and value to its readers. The great increase of our advertising custom has of late compelled us to encroach on that part of the paper usually occupied by editorial and miscellaneous matter, and in order to avoid such encroachment, we have not unduly been obliged to omit numerous advertisements which should have been inserted. In more than one instance we have had three columns of these standing in type, for which we could not find room in the paper, and although our customers have made no complaint of us, for they knew we did the best for them that circumstances would permit, we are anxious to prevent, as far as possible, the recurrence of such difficulties.

The only necessary to the enlargement, in a pecuniary point, bears quite heavily upon us, and from present indications—the exorbitant prices asked for printing paper—our expenses must be quite large for some time to come; but for past encouragement, we are in hopes ultimately to see some good, not only to ourselves, but to our readers, and the town itself.

The Patriot, is one of the oldest papers in this vicinity. It was started in eighteen hundred and thirty-seven and continued under the guiding hands of its founder until near the middle of the fifteenth volume, when it was purchased by Messrs. Thayer & White, who enlarged its size and improved its appearance, but we are sorry to say at the cost of their pockets, and in less than two years, resold it to its former editor, who continued its publication until his death. At that time it fell to our lot, and we have endeavored to keep it ever onward and upward.

LECTURES AT THE POINT. The second of the course of Lectures at the Point was given on Tuesday evening last by Rev. William S. Studley, of Boston, according to announcement.

The house was well filled, and the expectations of the audience as to the ability of the speaker, both as lecturer and orator, were fully realized.

While the right of fair and charitable criticism was recognized, and its exercise approved, the sayings and spirit of the captious critic and "grumbler" were so exposed, as to make the hearers say in their hearts—"from grumblers" and grumbling, deliver us.

The recitations were finely given, and the illustrations of fault finding with the doctor and minister for whatever he omitted or committed—wrong, either way, and the allusions to the great and good man who have gone before, upon whom "treason and malice have done their worst"; these were central points in the discourse. We dare not if we would say anything unfavorable of the lecture for fear of bringing ourselves within reach of the lecturer's shafts.

He told us so, and we accept his statement.

The popularity and success of Mr. Studley as a preacher are well attested by the very complimentary card which he has received from one of our large Western cities.

The third lecture will be delivered on next Thursday evening by Professor C. Sharp, of Rochester, and will be illustrated by interesting chemical experiments.

A conference meeting of delegates from the different churches belonging to the "Plymouth and Bay Association," will be held in First Church, Quincy, Tuesday, 14th inst, at 11 o'clock, A. M. The meeting is open to all who may desire to attend. Its chief purpose is to consider methods of raising the Association's portion of the American Unitarian Fund. Addresses are expected from Rev. Mr. Hale, Secretary of the National Council, and Rev. Mr. Lowe, Secretary of the A. U. A.

FATAL ACCIDENT. A derrick at the Granite Railway Company's works in this town, fell upon a man named John Lawrence, on Tuesday last, and almost instantly killed him. He was forty years of age and leaves a widow.

JUNOS. Messrs. Benjamin Newcomb and Charles L. Pierce have been drawn as Jurors from this town to serve in the Supreme Judicial Court at Dedham.

THE 24TH REGIMENT.

This gallant Regiment, the last but one from the old Bay State to return from the field of victory, arrived in Boston on the 24th ult.—from whence they were sent to Gallops Island, where they were paid off, and finally discharged on Saturday, the 27th. The Regiment left Readville, December 9, 1861, and shared in the following engagements: Roanoke Island, Newbern, (N. C.) Tranter's Creek, Kinston, (N. C.) White Hall and Goldboro, (N. C.) James Island, (S. C.) Morris' Island, Rifle Pits before Fort Wagner, Green Valley, Drury's Bluff, Ware Bottom Church, Deep Bottom, Deep Run, Siege of Petersburg, Four Mile Run Church, and three engagements at Darbytown Road.

PROGRESSOR WALKER'S card of invitation to his exhibition on Tuesday next, should not be forgotten. This promises to be one of the most brilliant entertainments of the season.

BOSTON CORRESPONDENCE.

BOSTON, FEB. 8, 1866.
The State Legislature is now under good headway for the business of the Session. Petitions pour in daily on various topics; more especially for a prominent one now are that it will be favorably considered. The meetings of the Senate and House are at two o'clock, p. m., daily, except Saturdays. This gives the Committees a chance to work at least a part of each day. Some time since, Mr. Adams of Quincy, submitted an important order in the House, which was adopted and went to the Judiciary Committee, to consider the expediency of permitting persons accused of crime to testify in their trials. It is well known that in civil actions both plaintiff and defendant can testify in lawsuits. The law works very satisfactory, and we see no reason why it should not be applied to the criminal code. His Excellency, Governor Bullock, who is emphatically the people's Governor, and not of a political party, by his urbane demeanor and strict attention to all business that comes before him, commands a large share of confidence and respect from all branches of the State Government. Lieutenant Governor Claflin wears his honors well. He is favorably known as a highly respected merchant in the leather trade of our city. We may have occasion to speak hereafter of other prominent officials of the State House.

There is no want of interest in the public mind as to the proceedings of the Thirty-Ninth Congress at Washington. The House has during the week been discussing the merits of the Freedmen's Bureau Bill, and many members have taken the entire hour privileged to them in speech making. The speech of General Rosseau of Kentucky in particular, was in bitter opposition to the bill, declaring it an outrage on the Constitution, and disavowed to the American Congress. He maintained that under its operation all law would be swept away in Kentucky. He insisted on the admission of all loyal Southern men to Congress, and denounced those members opposed to it as no better than original secessionists. He regarded the course of extreme action in the House as intended to prevent a restoration of the Union, and by their action to dissolve the Union, that the Republican party may survive. He was followed on the same side by Mr. Marshall, of Illinois, and Kitter, of Kentucky, whose remarks were bitter and caustic in the extreme. Mr. Hubbard of Connecticut advocated the measure. The act if passed would be satisfactory to every one; it would ever be under the control of Congress, and subject to amendment or repeal. In reply to Mr. Marshall, he said there was authority in the Constitution for the passage of the bill, for to Congress was given the power to pass all proper laws, to carry out the provisions of the Constitution which include the public welfare. If we understand the principle of the Freedmen's Bureau Bill, by national appropriation, its object is to diffuse education in the Southern States, establishing free schools for all who attend them, white or black. To make the masses educated and intelligent; by laying the broad foundation for the cultivation of those cardinal virtues, sobriety, integrity and industry. It is a mission of love, charity and educational intelligence to the South. The act of the good Samaritan named in Holy Writ was not more noble or philanthropic. Enlightening the negro, will make him more worthy of the great boon of freedom, and in the end, equalize the right of suffrage at the ballot box. There are now one hundred and thirty-six schools in the South for the education of Freedmen. The Freedmen's Bureau Bill proposes that Congress should appropriate three millions of dollars for the purchase of sites for schools and suitable lands; and also set apart a portion of the public domain for their use. Upon the universal spread of education in the South, depends in great measure the solving of the social problem. The great speech of Hon. Charles Sumner, delivered in the U. S. Senate on Monday, appeared in the supplement to the Boston Journal on Tuesday evening, occupying nearly fifteen columns of the supplement. It is in opposition to the Constitutional Amendment now under consideration by the Senate. This he regards as a compromise of wrong. The speech is masterly, and logically profound; a great effort to establish by organic law, liberty and equality to all. He contends that the ballot is a school-master, peacemaker and protector to all, and advocates with great eloquence universal suffrage. He takes the true Democratic ground—that the future good and glory of the nation are only to be sought and found in equal rights to all.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY. This season is approaching. Our fancy shops are well supplied with a large assortment of the pathetic and sentimental little missiles to carry on the work. We expect to hear of numerous devotees made to the shrine of Cupid.

THE ST. PATRICK'S SOCIETY. The Annual Levee of this Society, held at the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, was, as usual, well attended; there were about eighty couple present, and a most harmonious and social evening was past.

Secretary Seward appeared on the floor of the house of Representatives on Friday last week, for the first time since the attempt on his life.

A gentleman paid $300 for a special train to take him from Boston to Portland last Saturday, to catch the English steamer. The steamer did not sail till next morning and he might have saved his money by waiting for the regular train.

QUINCY FREEDMEN'S COMMISSION. The next meeting will take place on Thursday, February 15th, at 7 1/2 o'clock, p. m., at Mr. William F. Whitney's. The Soliciting Committee are requested to be present.

QUINCY ALBUM QUILT.

The following letter has been handed us by Mrs. Woodbury, (formerly Miss Minnie Morton,) to whom it is addressed, for publication. Though it fully explains itself yet it may not be out of place to state, that the Quilt was made by the ladies of Quincy some three years ago and was sent with other articles, for the benefit of our sick and disabled soldiers.

During the continuance of the war and from its very commencement, the Quincy Ladies Soldiers' Aid Association, have been constantly and unrelentingly employed in making and transmitting to the hospitals and camps such articles as were needed for the comfort of our soldiers. They have expended about five thousand dollars for materials which has been mostly made up by their own fair hands. The money contributed by the liberality of our citizens has fallen upon no unfruitful soil and the ladies have given to it that power of doing great good by distributing it where its benefits have been fully felt. As many ladies contributed to the making of the Quilt we annex the letter above alluded to, and it may be interesting to them to know something of its history after leaving Quincy.

Washington, (D. C.) Dec. 13th 1865.
MISS MINNIE MORTON.

During a lengthy illness in a Hospital near "Camp Distribution, Va." the dullness of the long summer days was greatly relieved by an "Album Quilt" made in 1863, by the ladies of your place. As I read over the names which graced the centre of each block I used to wonder if the fair makers would like to hear what had become of their works and decided that as it had done so much toward doing away with the disagreeable incidents connected with hospital life, I would at some future time write one of the fair donors in order that they might know that their work had accomplished its end, and strengthened the heart of at least one soldier, kindling anew within his breast that patriotism which at first led him forth in the service of his country.

Near the left corner of the Quilt as it lay upon my bed appeared the name "Minnie Morton" and I decided that the envelope which enclosed my thanks to the young ladies of Quincy should bear the name. Some one has asked "what's in a name?" to me there is much, and yours has become so firmly fixed in my mind that it brings back my old resolution formed before the close of the war, and which circumstances up to the present time have prevented my carrying out. But it may be that news from the "Quincy Album Quilt" may not be wholly unwelcome even at this late date, not less so perhaps that the recollection of the good it has done, has not faded from the memory of at least one soldier. I am now out of the army and have chosen this city for my home; and having obtained possession of the quilt shall retain it as a souvenir from the ladies of your town. Very truly yours,
F. E. CORBETT.

STOVES.

Read before the QUINCY SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION, Thursday evening, November 30th, 1865.

In the old times houses were cold, but they were well ventilated. The grand old open chimney, holding its roaring and cheerful fire, carried off with its strong draft, all bad air, and left the atmosphere of the house pure and fit to breathe. The close stove allows no such ventilation, and the air in our rooms becomes very quickly vitiated. Colds, coughs, and all sorts of maladies result. Hour after hour will people, otherwise sensible, sit with doors and windows shut, round one of these black demons. They save fuel it is true. They send out abundance of heat; but death lurks in their innermost recesses, and sends his pestilential darts around.

Nor do we know of any system of ventilation by which an apartment thus heated may be kept pure.

Our only word for the close stoves is—banishment.

And put in their place either:
1st. The open stove, or grate. You will have to burn more fuel, but you will have less sickness; and the habit that conduces most to health will always prove the most economical in the end.

Or, 2d. The furnace, which improperly set and managed, is only another of death's ministers; but properly set and managed, is one of the best methods of heating a house that can be devised.

The furnace takes the pure cold air from out-of-doors, draws it through the long air-box, heats it, restores to it, by evaporation from the vessel of water, the moisture which it loses by contact with the hot iron, and continually pours it, still pure and fit to breathe, into the rooms with which it is connected. Even without a visible system of ventilation, the air that has been breathed must make its escape somewhere, as good air is always rushing up from the register. Neglect the water vessel and the air-box, or either of them, or allow the iron of the furnace-pot to become red hot, or suffer the mercury in your rooms to rise above sixty-eight or seventy degrees Fahrenheit, and you may as well tear down your furnace at once; it will work it wisely, and you can hardly find a pleasanter or a healthier heat.

If you are rich enough, then open all your doors, diffuse a gentle furnace heat throughout your house, and then have open fires in as many rooms as you please. You will find it a very profitable investment of your money.

New potatoes, peas, lettuce and radishes have made their appearance in the markets of Charleston and Savannah.

PHOTOGRAPHIC MINIATURES.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, FEB. 6, 1866.

During the administration of Governor

Strong—our fifty years ago—a militia captain was an important and marked personage.

A Justice of the Peace was deemed a kind of Vice Roy of the Supreme Judicial Court, supported, by the people,

as competent to sit in the "judgment

hall" as Pontius Pilate; issuing decisions and sentences irrevocable as those of the Medes and Persians, and hurling off capitulations with a force and meaning as implied by Herod in the Roman Centurion, demanding the head of John the Baptist in a charger. Fifty years ago the office was nominal hereditary. Such was then the prestige of "Squire," that in the matter of Selection and Representatives to General Court, personal popularity usually preponderated in the royal line; the magistrate's star was ever in the ascendancy. Availability then being enveloped in dignity; side issues being an ample field, and Church Deacons once elected to the State House, was interpreted letters patent to an annual claim to a seat

there for a generation, till the incumbent's days were numbered up to the standard of the "most likely young men in the precinct." Before leaving the Lower House, the belated patriarch would whisper

thanks of condolence to the Commissioner-in-Chief, and very accidentally find their son or son-in-law commissioned as

Justice of the Peace, and if the estate of the retiring members of the Lower

House was estimated at two thousand pounds, they generally would reach the proverbial being hoisted into the Senate

Chamber, and there remain till the ripe age of three-score-and-ten; unless performance a jar had occurred in "Congregational usage"—or the bulk of their property had vanished in the futile attempt to bestow a liberal education upon heirs presumptive, whose townsmen never rated their mental observatory a whit more substantial or lucid, than a first class noncompos mentis! Again, fifty years ago

"Squire's" sons had official precedence at village levees, deacons' concerts, and pastor's calls. If any well-to-do churchmen had lovely girls, these sprigs of nobility would melt around them with marvellous fervor, such as mamma would echo amen to; the climax, meaning house warming, and the sequel, grand children.

Fifty years ago, if a district school was taught by a student of Yale or Amherst—

and Pa was "solid," he was sought after

by the "Squire" as a boarder—and dand-ed attendance to by a charming daughter, wonderfully willing to sweep rooms, attend chamber fires, and serve at the table.

Touching all the while, the key-note,

which, by-and-by the student with melodious pathos, chants, as—"Dear wife,"

These customs of fifty years ago, are fast receding from New England society.—

Democratic ideas have played school master all around us. Justices of the Peace, having concurrent jurisdiction with the Superior Court, are appointed not with absolute reference to family tradition;

indeed, Governor Morton created some from decidedly plebeian stock. Governor

Boutwell measured them off as rapid as he would bonnet ribbons. Governor

Gardner was more efficient in their issue, than B. F. Hall was in drafting resolutions for the national salvation of all—

"God's footstool." Governor Banks, in the goodness of his heart, finished the catalogue with a perfect shower of "Justices."

We believe that Weymouth has her share of magistrates; we are quite satisfied with the Constitutional amendment of mass-making; it is imperative on those who vote and are eligible to office to be able to read and write—a mountain of wisdom in that dark lantern scheme.

We suljoin a list of the magistrates of Weymouth. Don't be startled readers.

We are a law-loving and abiding town;

but in case of a fuss—a sudden indec, we have a judicial frontage corresponding with our position, as a town of eight thousand people, and second to none in business in Norfolk County.

WIND THE CLOCK.

Warden, wind the clock again;
Mighty years are going on,
Through the shadow and the dream,
And the happy-hearted dawn,
Wind again, wind again,
Fifty hundred years are gone.
Tough the harvest and the need,
Weary June and d-d May,
Grow the new year from the old,
Grow the new year from the old,
Wind again, wind again,
Who can keep the years at bay?
Four-and twenty conjures
Lie in wait on land and sea,
Pleading down the startled ship,
Bad-embroidering the tree
Wind again, wind again,
We have neither ship nor tree.
Four-and twenty kings to come
Up the never vacant stair,
Four-and twenty dead go down;
Follow sacred song and prayer,
Wind again, wind again,
Warden, why delaying there?
To his interrupted dream
Comes the long entreated day,
What are lesser words to him?
Sweet pursuing voices say,
Warden, wind, wind again,
Up the ever golden way.
Other hands will wind the clock
While the froggy years go on,
Never nothing need or name
Nor the rupture of the dawn.
Wind again, wind again,
Ere the given year be gone.

Farmers' Department.

WINTER THE TIME TO THINK.

Winter is the time for farmers to think—spring, summer and fall to work; and the three latter seasons' labor will be to little profit if the time of the first shall have been mispent. All the plans of the next season's operations should be laid and well considered during the winter. All improvements, designs for new operations, all the work to be done, should then be considered and prepared for; so that, when the time for work arrives, he will have nothing to do but to "go ahead." Then he has no time to think; but if he has been wise during the winter, he will have no need of it. It is a painful sight to look at in spring, when all nature is in an ecstasy of delight, to see a farmer flying about "like a hen with her head cut off," trying to do a thousand things at once, not knowing which to do first, running here and there in search of rusty implements, some of which require repairs, some can't be found, the plowing season passing away, the planting season rapidly advancing, and he not prepared for anything.

FACTS WORTH REMEMBERING.

It is worth while for all farmers, everywhere, to remember that thorough culture is better than three mortgages on their farm.
That an offensive war against weeds is five times less expensive than a defensive one.
That good fences always pay better than lawsuits with neighbors.
That hay is a great deal cheaper made in the summer, than purchased in the winter.
That more stock perish from famine than founder.
That a horse who lays his ears back and looks lightning when any one approaches him, is vicious—don't buy him.
That scurrying the feed of fattening hogs, is a waste of grain.
That over-fed fowls won't lay eggs.
That educating children is money lent at a hundred per cent.
That one evening spent at home in study, is more profitable than ten in lounging about country taverns.
That cows should always be milked regularly, and clean.
That it is the duty of every man to take some good, reliable, entertaining paper, and—pay for it promptly—of course.

Anecdotes.

"Look here, ma! said a young lady who had commenced taking lessons in painting of an eminent artist. "See my painting; can you tell what it is?"
Ma, after looking at it for some time, answered:
"Well, it is either a cow or a roscud—I am sure I can't tell which."
An impertinent fellow was met by a gentleman whom he had insulted, who observed that he owed him a good drubbing.
"Never mind sir," said the fellow, "I'll forgive you the debt."
"Ah, dear doctor, how is my wife, today?" The doctor shook his head and said: "You must prepare for the worst."
"What," said the husband, "do you think she is likely to get over it?"
"My boy, might I inquire where Merrit & Printz's drug-store is?"
"Very respectfully."—Certainly, sir—Old gent, (after waiting awhile).—Well, sir, where is it?"
"Urchin—Haven't the least idea, your honor."

VINELAND.

FARM AND FRUIT LANDS, in a rich and productive, varying from a clay to a sandy loam, suitable for Wheat, Grass, Corn, Tobacco, Fruits and Vegetables. There is a great fruit country. Five hundred Vineyards and Orchards have been planted out by experienced fruit growers. Grapes, Peaches, Pears, &c., produce immense profits. Vineland is already one of the most beautiful places in the United States. The entire territory, consisting of fifty square miles of land, is laid out upon a general system of improvements. The land is only sold to actual settlers with provision for public advertisement. The place, on account of its great beauty, as well as other advantages, has become the resort of people of taste. It has increased five thousand people within the past three years. Churches, Schools, Academies, Societies of Art and Learning, and other elements of refinement and culture have been introduced. Hundreds of people are constantly settling. Hundreds of new houses are being constructed. Price of Farm land, twenty acres and upward, $25 per acre. Five and ten acre, and village lots for sale.

Openings for all kinds of business, Lumber yards, Manufactures, Foundries, Stores, and the like; and Steam Power, with room, can be rented.

For persons who desire mild winters, a healthy climate, and a good soil, in a country luxuriantly improved, abounding in fruits, and possessing all other social privileges, in the heart of civilization, it is worth a visit.

Letters addressed to the Vineland Rural, a paper giving full information, and containing Reports of Solon Robinson, to applicants.

SEWING MACHINES.

OUR LETTER A

Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.

It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Gusseting, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

MANUFACTURERS AND PROPRIETORS OF THE CELEBRATED

MACHINE GRAINED

Chamber Furniture.

WE are prepared to offer to dealers and others in want of Painted Chamber Furniture an entirely new and novel article in that line. Our work is done by a Patent Machine. By this invention the actual veins and fibers of the natural grain are moulded from the real wood, from which is impressed a perfect fac-simile of the original, thus reproducing upon any painted or bare wood surface a greater variety of grains, with more rapidity and with natural and more artistic beauty, than can possibly be created by the most skillful hand in any of the old modes known. It copies nature exactly. It grains in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsome and more durable set of Furniture, at as low a price as can be bought in the city. Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. To the natural wood do well to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

Poetry.

IN MEMORIAM OF J. W. M.
Died Dec. 17, 1865.

I.
While the Old Year lay dying day by day,
And the sad winds above it moaned their song,
Ere it had vanished from our lives away,
Came the dread message we had feared so long.

II.
He whom we loved,—the dearest and the best;
Full of pure thought and aspiration high,— Folded his wings within the parent nest,
And with the old year lay him down to die.

III.
He who had trod the gory path of war,
Leading the way till blood and toil should cease,
Came to us safe from battle-fields afar,
And then from God received his gift of peace.

IV.
Not as a form of terror or of pain,
Not in a garb of sorrow or of strife,
Came the dark angel to his side again,
And through death's portals led him up to life.

V.
So let him rest. We may not weep who know How fair his soul with virtue's sweetest flowers.
How brave the heart, that tender, tried and true,
Beat for awhile so near these lives of ours.

VI.
We may not weep! there is no cause for tears;
Though for awhile the steadfast eyes lie hid,
That shone beside us five and twenty years,
Ere they were closed beneath the coffin-lid.

VII.
For well we know the Spring time sleeps unseen,
Folded and warm upon the Winter's breast.
So through the gaps of life and time between,
We reach his side and rise with him to rest.

VIII.
And as the New Year smiling comes apace,
We, looking upward from the pall and sod,
See not the semblance of a pale dead face;
But—all transfigured—find our boy with God.

MAKIE.
Boston, Jan. 1866.

Interesting Selections.

As flowers carry dew-drops, trembling on the edge of the petals, and ready to fall at the first waft of wind or brush of bird, so the heart should carry its beaded words of thanksgiving, and at every dispensation of Providence should let them fall perfumed with the heart's gratitude.

When a gloom falls upon us, it may be we have entered into the cloud that will give its gentle showers to refresh us.

What will paralyze small minds
may incite larger ones, as the breath which extinguishes the candle will kindle and strengthen the fire on the hearthstone.

A "mysterious stranger," in the village of Adams, Mass., young, good-looking, and lined with greenbacks, answered a committee of ladies who waited upon him to find out his business. "I am a stranger and a criminal. I was convicted in New York of a heavy crime. The Judge sentenced me to eight years in Sing Sing, or to live in North Adams six months. I chose the latter." The ladies retired, and the stranger was not again disturbed.

The most unwholesome bread, in the long run, is that taken out of other men's mouths.

We live amid surfaces, and the art of life is to skate well on them.

It is said there was never but one man who wasn't spoiled by being lionized
—he was a Jew, and his name was Daniel.

An Irish peasant being asked why he permitted his pig to take up his quarters with his family, made an answer abounding with satirical naïveté. "Why not? Doesn't the place afford every convenience that a pig can require."

Adam Slonaker, a number of years ago, came to Huntington Furnace, and seeing there, for the first time, a pair of snufflers, he asked:—"What's them for?" "To snuff the candle." "To snuff the candle?" The candle just then needed attention, and Adam with his thumb and finger pinched off the snuff and carefully poked it into the snufflers, saying, "Well now, them is handy."

Miscellany.

HOW I WON MY WIFE.

Jessie Hale was the merriest, prettiest, most provoking daughter of Eve that ever existed—at least, I thought so, though perhaps I was not an impartial judge, as I must confess I was deeply in love,—and, in fact, I don't believe I could remember of a time when I was not in love with her.
It certainly was not when a youngster of twelve I took her under my especial care, feeling then prouder of my curly-headed charge than I could now of a mine of gold;
nor when a tall, awkward boy of sixteen, I first ventured to ask for her company home from church; or still later, when, after four years' absence, I returned to my native town, and set up as a surgeon in the house where Dr. Moore's name had been since my earliest recollection.

Oakplace was a remarkable place, or else the good people felt a little afraid of trusting their lives in the hands of such a young scapegrace as they had known me to be, for my horse and gig found more employment in carrying Jessie Hale to ride than in any more profitable business;
and it is certain more of my time was spent in Mr. Hale's pleasant parlor than in either study or practice of medicine.

Some of the neighbors slyly remarked that I must have a very sick patient there, to occasion such frequent visits; and I was certain that if I had no patient there, all the patience I ever had was required there at times; for, of all the tantalizing little wretches that ever fascinated and provoked a poor fellow—until he could not have told whether he were in the body or out of it—Jessie Hale was the worst.

And there was I—William Tremaine standing three feet two in my stockings, big enough to have known better, that is sure, led about by that little elf, coming and going at every beck and call, as if I were a great simpleton, as in truth I must have been, for after playing "Yours most devotedly" for six months, I was no nearer winning than at first. Open-hearted and candid she was on every other subject;
but just let me speak of love or marriage,
and I might as well talk to a stone wall,
for all the sense I could get out of her.

No matter how cautiously I might approach the subject, she was always ready with some off-hand answer, as far from what I wanted as the equator from the poles, until I was almost in despair, more eager after every failure. "All is fair in love and war," or at least I thought so,
and resolved to try the result of strategy
on my willful little lady love.

One fine morning, as we were about starting for a ride on horseback, as I was assisting Miss Jessie into the saddle, her horse commenced rearing and kicking at an alarming rate; of course the jagged bits of iron that I had cautiously inserted beneath the saddle had nothing to do with it. By the time she was fairly seated he had become perfectly unmanageable, throwing her violently from the saddle; of course
I caught her before she reached the ground.

No sooner was she in safety than, with a deep groan, I staggered back against the fence, my right arm hanging helplessly by my side. It took nicely, for Jessie was beside me in a moment.

"Oh, Will," she said piteously, "that terrible horse has broken your arm; and what will you do? Poor Will! poor Will!"

How like a rascal I felt at sight of her distress; but I was not going to give up then; so I answered with another terrible groan—

"It is nothing, dear Jessie; I would suffer a thousand times more to feel that I had saved your precious life."

"But, oh, I am so sorry! What can be done for you?" she said in such touching accents that I half repented.

"The end justifies the means," I thought.
The end accomplished certainly did. My answer was in a low, faint voice, as if I was just dying.

"Only tell me that you love me, Jessie, darling; it will soothe my pain more than any thing else in the world."

And then, like the great simpleton that I was, I put my arm around her, and never discovered my mistake until she sprang suddenly away from me.

"Wouldn't a little brandy and water do as well, Mr. Tremaine?" she said archly.

"There don't seem to be any bones broken;
the injury was internal, I should think.
Wouldn't I have sold myself for a sixpence? But there was no help for it; so I had to own the trick, and went home

wishing I had broken my arm, or neck, I didn't care much which. After that, for awhile, I was rather shy of the love subject, for I did not fancy hearing of my last attempt; but "out of the heart the mouth speaks," and my heart was so full of love for Jessie Hale, that I could not force my tongue to keep silence very long. So one morning, after lounging in my study until I was tired of every thing—myself in particular—I went over the way, resolved that the matter should be decided before I returned. Jessie was sitting by the parlor window, busily sewing, and humming some merry tune to herself when I entered. She was looking prettier than ever, I thought; and I found it terrible hard work to talk on commonplace subjects, when my life was so full of the one so important to me.

At last I broke in upon some of her careless nonsense with—
"Why in the world, Jessie, don't you say whether you love me or not? What is the use of keeping a fellow in suspense forever? I believe you do—in fact, I know you do."

Here I was again making a simpleton of myself. I might have known she never would have told me after that—but I did not understand woman kind as well then as I have done since.

"Oh! you do know then, do you?" she said coolly, with a merry twinkle in her eye. "Then of course there is no need of my telling you."

"No, I did not mean it, Jessie," I said, penitently. "But do you love me? will you answer me, yes or no?"

"Yes or no," she answered me demurely.
"Oh, Jessie Hale," I exclaimed, impatiently, "you will drive me crazy."

"A terrible misfortune, surely," she said with a laugh, throwing down her work and stepping through the low window upon the lawn. "Now, Will, I will tell you what I will do if you will promise never to plague me again about this."

"I will promise any thing if you will only give me an honest answer," I said eagerly.

"Well, then, if you can catch me before I reach the elm tree, I will give you a candid answer, upon my honor."

I thumped my head against the window-sash and away I went racing over the green sward with ten times more eagerness than I ever displayed in playing catch in my boyhood days. A very dignified proceeding truly, for a staid surgeon. All the gossips in Oakplace would have held up their hands in pious horror, had they seen me then; but I did not care if half the world saw me, so intent was I on catching that flying gypsy, and catch her I did, before she was half way to the old elm.

"Now for the answer," I said eagerly.
"Oh! but can't you wait until I get my breath?" drawing it in quick, spasmodic jerks, like some dilapidated old steam engine. "Let me see, what was it I promised to tell you?"

"Whether you love me or not, you provoking little wretch!" fairly out of patience.

Now, look here, Mr. Will; if you don't leave off calling me names, I won't tell you at all, though perhaps that is love talk, is it? Will, I promised, you say?"

"Of course you did; so don't be all day about it."

"If you hurry me, I can't speak at all,
for it will take me some time to think over the objects of my love to see if you are among them. Let me see—beginning to count her fingers—" there is Chloe, that's one; and Prince—though he hurt your arm you know—is two; and old Bridle is three; and Watch is four; and—let me see—yes, there is—Mr. William Tremaine is five."

I don't think I stopped to thank her for that answer, and if my return to the parlor was not as rapid as my exit, it was certainly more dignified. I had taken my hat, and was out of the gate before Jessie had reached the house.

I went home in no very enviable state of mind, resolving that I never would go near her again. But by the time I reached my study, my anger cooled considerably, and I sat down in my arm chair and began to think of any plan, just as I had done a hundred time before, how I could outwit this provoking little elf. Have her I would; but how; that was the question.

"A letter for you, sir," cried out a boy
at the door.

I took the letter and tore it open. I was too much occupied with my thoughts to care much what its contents were; but the few first lines fixed my attention. It was from an uncle of mine, a surgeon in a flourishing city, making me a very advantageous offer if I would come and take his place. This was just the situation I had been waiting for years, and I hailed it with delight now.

"But Jessie," I thought,—could I leave her?

A moment's reflection showed me what was needed, for if she really cared for me, my absence would make her willing to acknowledge it. It did not take long to make my arrangements, and before night they were all completed, and the next morning I started for the station, calling at Mr. Hale's on my way to bid Jessie good-bye. I could see the little witch did not believe one word of the story I told her.

"I hope, Mr. Will you won't break your arm in the train; it would make it so bad for you," she said with a queer smile, as I concluded.

"And you not there to cure it!" I retorted. "But seriously, Jessie, I am in earnest now. It is probable I shall not see you again for years, for if I like the place, I shall remain there."

She still believed it some trick, for her eyes said plainly:

"You can't cheat me again."
And she said good-bye as coolly as if it were only for a day. I went down the walk, feeling much as I think Adam must have felt when he left Paradise, although his Eve went with him, and I left mine behind.

I was well pleased with the place, and was not long in accepting my uncle's proposal. I wrote to this effect to a lawyer, desiring him to dispose of my property at Oakplace. I knew Jessie would hear of it, and it would give her to understand that I had no intention of returning, determined that if I did not succeed this time, I would give her up forever, though my heart gave a quick throb of pain at the thought.

It was just at twilight of a pleasant
September day when I reached Oakplace.
Direct to Mr. Hale's I took my way, saying over to myself as I went, "Now or never!" Straight up the gravel walk and across the broad lawn I went, and into the dusky parlor, unannounced.

The light I saw Jessie sitting on a sofa;
her head resting on a pillow. She was alone, and had not heard my step. Was she asleep? A quick sob answered me.
That augurs well for my success. In a moment I was kneeling beside her, and raised the bowed head.

"Jessie, dear Jessie!" I said tenderly, scarcely knowing how she would receive it.

With a quick start and a glad cry of surprise her head was pillowed on my bosom.

"Oh, I am so glad to see you, Will.
They told me you would not return, and I have been so lonely without you."

"And I have been lonely, too, Jessie, darling," I said. "My home, any where would be lonely without you. Will you not go and share it with me?"

The answer was very low, but I knew it was in the affirmative.

NEARER TO LIFE'S WINTER.

Nearer to life's winter, wife
We are drawing nearer—
Memories of the blessed Spring
Growing dearer, dearer.
Through the Summer heats we've toiled,
Through the Autumn weather
We have passed, sweet wife,
Hand in hand together.
Time was hearts were, well as feet,
Lighter, I remember,
April's locks of gold are turned
To silver this November.
Flowers are fewer than at first,
And the way grows dearer;
For unto life's winter, wife,
We are drawing nearer.
Nearer to life's end, sweet wife,
We are drawing nearer;
The last mile-stone on the way,
To our sight grows clearer.
Some whose hands we held quite faint
And lay down to their slumber;
Looking backward, we to-day,
All their graves may number.
Heights we've sought we failed to climb,
Fruits we've failed to gather;
But what matter since we've still Jesus and each other.

Farmers' Department.

TREATMENT OF COWS.

Cows says a contemporary, seldom kick without some good reason for it. Teats are sometimes chapped or the udder tender; harsh handling hurts them and they kick. Sometimes long and sharp finger nails cut their teats, and sometimes the milk pulls the long hairs on the udder, while milking. Shear off the long hairs, cut long finger nails close, bathe chapped teats with warm water, and grease them with lard, and always treat a cow gently. She will never kick unless something hurts her, or she fears a repetition of former hurts. When handled gently, cows like to be milked. When treated otherwise, they will kick and hold up their milk. It is quite as consistent to whip a sick child to stop its crying, as to whip or kick a cow, to prevent her kicking while being milked.

TRAINING CATTLE TO JUMP.

A Western farmer says he makes it a rule that whenever cattle are made to pass a fence, whether through bars or a "slip gap," to leave one rail for them to pass under. This gives them a downward tendency, and lessens their inclination to jump or look upward, as they are sure to do when a lazy attendant throws down a part of the rails, and makes them vault the rest. Cattle may be able to go over any fence, by the careful training they often get for this end, and performed as follows: First, starve them, or give them poor food, which will make them light and restless. As soon as they go over the lowest part of the fence after better provender, make them jump back again, and put on one more rail, saying, "I guess that will keep 'em out." Next day repeat the process, adding another rail; in a short time they will take care of themselves, and harvest the crops without charge.

Mange; or barn itch is contagious, and makes its appearance about the neck of creatures, thence extending to other parts, rendering the animals unsightly in appearance and uncomfortable in feeling. Mixing sulphur with lard and rubbing the diseased parts will cure this, as it will most other skin diseases.

Anecdotes.

"Boys," says Uncle Peter, as he examined the points of the beast, "I don't see but one reason why that mare can't trot her mile in three minutes."
They gathered round to hear this oracular opinion; and one inquired, "What is it?"
"Why," he replied, "the distance is too great for so short a time."

A boy was going along the street, carrying a pitcher of milk, when presently he stumbled, and smash went the pitcher, and away ran the milk. Another boy across the way, saw the accident, and shouted,—"Oh, won't you catch it when you go home; your mother'll give it to you!"
"No she won't neither!" screamed the other, "my mother always says 'never cry for spilled milk.'"

The keeper of a boarding house in New Orleans finding that a tall buxom woman rather severe on his corned pork and cabbage, at dinner, after helping his ravenous guest a third time, threw down his carving-knife and fork, and addressing his Western friend, said—"I beg your pardon, Mr. I don't like to be inquisitive, but I should like to know if you didn't spend some time at the pork-packing business out West? You seem to be an adept at it—you do."

A little ragged urchin, begging in the city the day was asked by a lady who killed his basket, if his parents were living?
"Only dad, ma'am," said the boy.
"Then you have enough in your basket now to feed the family for some time," said the lady.
"O, no, I haven't neither," said the lad, "for dad and me keeps five boarders; he does the house-work, and I do the kitchen."

VINELAND.
FARM AND FRUIT LANDS, in a mild and healthy climate, lying miles south of Philadelphia by Railroad, in New Jersey, on the same line of latitude as Baltimore. The soil is rich and productive, varying from a clay to a sandy loam, suitable for Wheat, Grass, Corn, Tobacco, Fruits and Vegetables. This is a great fruit country. Five hundred Vineyards and Orchards have been planted out by experienced fruit growers. Grapes, Peaches, Pears, &c., produce immense profits. Vineland is already one of the most beautiful places in the United States. The entire territory, consisting of fifty square miles of land, is laid out upon a general system of improvements. The land is only sold to actual settlers with provision for only one allotment. The price, on account of great beauty, is well as other advantages, has become the resort of people of taste. It has increased five thousand people in the past few years. Churches, Stores, Schools, Academies, Societies of Art and Learning, and other elements of refinement and culture have been introduced. Hundreds of people are being introduced. Price of Farm land, twenty acre lots and upward, $25 per acre. Five and ten acre, and village lots for sale.

Fruits and Vegetables ripe earlier in this district than in any other local north of Norfolk, Va. Improved places for sale.

Openings for all kinds of business, Lumber yards, Manufactories, Foundries, Stores, and the like; and Steam Power, with room, can be rented.

For persons who desire mild winters, a healthy climate, and a good soil, in a country beautifully improved, abounding in fruits, and possessing all other social privileges, in the heart of civilization, it is worthy of a visit.

SEWING MACHINES.

OUR LETTER A
Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Quilting, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chaste manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

MANUFACTURERS AND PROPRIETORS OF THE CELEBRATED MACHINE GRAINED

Chamber Furniture.

WE are prepared to offer to dealers and others in want of Painted Chamber Furniture an entire new and novel article in that line. Our work is done by a Patent Machine. By this invention the actual veins and fibres of the natural grains are molded from the real wood, from which is impressed a perfect fac-simile of the original, thus reproducing upon any painted or oiled wood surface a greater variety of grains, with more rapidity and with natural and more artistic beauty, than can possibly be created by the most skillful hand in any of the old modes known. It copies nature exactly. It grows in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsomer and more durable set of Furniture, and at as low a price as can be bought in the city. Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. Those in want would do well to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

Poetry.
TO THE "PATRIOT."
Suggested upon seeing its New Dress.
Thou dear old "Patriot," strong and true,
With colors floating proudly now,
We hail thee, with the homage due,
The glory which enshrouds thy brow.
Full many years thro' changing scenes,
Thou'st held thy calm and even way,
And smiled, tho' clouds have come between,
Thou—and the promised future day.
Since first Old Quincy saw thy face,
(A century's quarter's passed since then)
The changes which on earth have place,
Have passed before the eyes of men.
New faces to the old succeed,
New names, where others used to be,
New thoughts to some from bondage freed,
New lives for all as well as thee.
The desolation war hath brought,
Hath swept unknown mercy, where
No language like the breath, hath taught,
Unheeding man a mercy-prayer.
Ah! me! thy columns "Patriot" dear,
With wounded and with slain well-filled,
Have brought the blanching cheek and fear,
To those who queried—"is he killed?"
Thy bright eyes with the dust have lain,
Beneath the feet of Southern hove,
White mothers wept the noble slain,
And earth received the forms so cold.
Tiro! all the smoke and fire, thou'st passed,
And now art out upon the seas.
Thou'st dared with new trimmed sail the blast,
Fair tide I wish, and stiffening breeze.
Oh may the odorous breath of flowers,
Be wafted on each rising gale,
And bear thee onward, while the hours,
Recount our welcome—Hail! all hail!
MATTIE L. B. EWELE,

RECIPE FOR A HAPPY HOME.
We have somewhere met with this assertion, which seems worth repeating—"Six things are requisite to create a happy home. Integrity must be the architect, and tidiness the upholsterer. It must be warmed by affection, lightened up with cheerfulness, and industry must be the ventilator, renewing the atmosphere and bringing in fresh salubrity day by day;
while over all, as a protecting canopy and glory, nothing will suffice except the blessing of God.
The creations of the sculptor may moulder into dust; the wreath of the bard may wither; the throne of the conqueror may be shattered into atoms by an opposing power; the fame of the warrior may no more be hymned by the recording minstrel; the hope of the youth may be disappointed; but that which hallows the cottage and sheds glory around the palace —VIRTUE—shall not decay. It is celebrated by the angels of God—it is written on the pillows of Heaven, and reflected down to earth.
A young man recently presented himself for examination as Assistant Engineer in the navy. Among other questions the following was asked him: "Suppose you had built an engine yourself, performed every part of the work without assistance, and well knew that it was in complete order, but when put into a vessel the pump would not draw water, what would you do?" The young man promptly replied: "I should go to the side of the vessel and ascertain if there was any water in the river."

Miscellany.
INTELLECT IN RAGS.
It was a bleak, wintry day. Heavy snow drifts lay piled up in the streets of New York, and the whole appearance of the city was cold and dismal.
Seated upon the steps of one of the large dwellings on Fifth Avenue, was a boy apparently thirteen years of age. He was literally clothed in rags, and his hands were blue, and his teeth chattered with cold. Lying upon his knee was a newspaper, he had picked up in the street, and he was trying to read the words upon it.
He had been occupied thus for some time, when two little girls, clad in silks and furs, came towards him. The eldest one was about twelve years old, and so beautiful that the poor boy raised his eyes and fixed them upon her in undisguised admiration.
The child of wealth stopped before him,
and turning to her companion, exclaimed,
"Marian, just see this fellow on my steps!"
"I am trying to learn to read upon this bit of paper," answered the boy.
The girl laughed derisively and said:
"Well, truly! I have heard of intellect in rags, Marian, and here it is personified." Marian's soft hazel eyes filled with tears as she replied:
"Oh, Louise, do not talk so; you know that Miss Fanny teaches us at school,
"The rich and poor meet together, and the Lord is the maker of them all."
Louise laughed again, and said to the boy: "Get up from here, you shall not sit on my steps, you are too ragged and dirty."
The boy arose, and a blush crimsoned his face. He was walking away when Marian said:
"Don't go, little boy, you are so cold come to my house and get warm. Oh, do come," she continued, as he hesitated;
and he followed her into a large kitchen, where a bright fire was shedding its genial warmth around.
"Well, Miss Marian, who are you bringing here now?" asked a servant woman.
"A poor boy, who is almost perished,
you will let him warm himself on Rachel?"
"Oh, he shall warm; sit here little boy," and she pushed a chair in front of the stove, she then gave him a piece of bread and meat.
Marian watched these arrangements, and then glided from the room; when she returned, she had a primer, with the first rudiments of reading and spelling. Going to the boy, she said:
"Here's a book that you can learn to read from, better than a piece of paper.
Do you know your letters?"
"Some of them, but not all. I never had any body to teach me. I just learned myself; but, oh, I want to read so badly." Marian sat down beside him, and began teaching him his letters. She was so busily engaged in this work that she did not see her mother enter the room;
nor did she know that her mother had stood some time behind them, listening to her noble child teaching the beggar boy his letters.
There were but few that he had not already learned himself, and it was not long before Marian had the satisfaction of hearing him repeat the alphabet.
When he arose to go, he thanked Rachel for her kindness, and offered Marian her book.
"No, I don't want it. I have given it to you to learn to read from. Won't you tell me your name?"
"Jimmie," he replied.
"I will not forget you, Jimmie, you must always remember Marian Hayes," was the little girl's farewell.
Louise Gardner and Marian Hayes were playmates and friends. Their dwellings joined, and almost every hour of the day they were together, for they attended the same school. These two children were very different dispositioned, and very differently brought up. Louise was proud and haughty. Poverty in her eyes was a disgrace and a crime, and she thought nothing too severe for the poor to suffer.
These views she learned from her mother.
Mrs. Gardner moved in one exclusive circle—the bon-ton of New York. Without its precincts she never ventured, for all others were beneath her. Louise, taught to mingle with no children, except those of her mother's friends, and was growing up, believing herself better than they.

The teachings that Marian Hayes received were totally different from this.
Mrs. Hayes was acknowledged as one of her particular friends; yet though she moved in that circle, she was far from being one of them. Her doctrine was the text her little girl had used, "The rich and the poor meet together, and the Lord is maker of them all." This she taught Marian—that there was no distinction in wealth or position; that the distinction was in worth alone. She taught her to reverence age, and to pity the poor and destitute; and that pleasant words were as honey comb, sweet to the soul—a little kindness was better than money. Marian learned the lesson well, and was ever ready to dispense her gentle words to all, whether they were wealthy and influential, or ragged and intelligent, as the boy,
she had that cold morning befriended.
A gay and brilliant throng were assembled in the city of Washington. Congress was in session, and the hotels were crowded with strangers. It was an evening party. The brilliantly lighted rooms were filled with youth and beauty.
Standing near one of the doors were two young ladies, busily engaged conversing together. The elder of the two suddenly exclaimed:
"Oh, Marian, have you seen the new member from W.?"
"No, but I have heard a great deal about him."
"Oh, I want to see him so badly. Mrs.
N. is going to introduce him to us. I wish she would make haste, I have no patience."
"Don't speak so, Louise, I wish you would not be so trifling," said Marian.
A singular smile played around the mouth of a tall, handsome gentleman, who was standing near the girls; and as he passed them he scanned them very closely.
In a very short time, Mrs. N.—came up with Mr. Hamilton, the new member, and presented him to Miss Gardner and Miss Hayes. As they were conversing together, Mr. Hamilton said:
"Ladies, we have met before."
But Louise and Marian declared their ignorance of the fact.
"It has been long years since, yet I have not forgotten it—nor a single sentence uttered during that meeting. I will quote one that will recall it to your memory: "The rich and the poor meet together, and the Lord is the maker of them all."
The rich blood tinged the cheeks of Marian, but Louise still declared herself ignorant as before. Mr. Hamilton glanced for a moment at Marian, then turning to Louise, he said:
"Long years ago, a little boy, ragged and dirty, seated himself upon the steps of a stately dwelling on Fifth Avenue,
New York, and was busily engaged trying to read from a bit of paper, when his attention was attracted by two girls richly dressed. The eldest of the two particularly attracted him, for she was as beautiful as an angel; but as they came near to him, she lifted up her hand and exclaimed:
"Boy, what are you doing here?"
"The boy answered that he was trying to read. The child of affluence derided him, and said she had heard of intellect in rags, and that he was the very personification of it. Her companion's answer was, "The rich and the poor meet together, and the Lord is the maker of them all." But the Lord is the maker of them all."
The elder girl drove the boy away from her steps, but the younger one took him into the house, and warmed and fed him there. When they parted, the girl said, 'you must not forget Marian Hayes.'
And Miss Hayes, he never has forgotten her. That ragged, dirty boy is now before you, ladies, as Mr. Hamilton, the member of Congress; and allow me, Miss Hayes to tender my thanks to you for the kind treatment of that boy." Overwhelmed with confusion, Louise knew not what to say or do.
In pity for her, Mr. Hamilton arose, and turning to Marian, said:
"I will see you again, Miss Hayes," and left them.
Louise would not stay in the city, where she daily met Mr. Hamilton, and in a few days returned to New York, leaving Marian with the consciousness of having done nothing to be ashamed of, and enjoying the society of distinguished Congressmen.
Marian and Mr. Hamilton were walking together one evening, when the latter drew from his bosom an old and well worn primer, and handed it to Marian.
"From this," he said, "the man who is so distinguished here first learned to read.

Marian trembled, and did not raise her eyes, when she saw the well remembered book. Mr. Hamilton took her hand and said:
"Marian, Jimmie has never forgotten
you. Since the day you were so kind to him and gave him this book, his life has been one great aim, and that was to attain to greatness, and in after years seek that administering angel, who was the sweetener of his days of poverty. When I left your house with this book, I returned to my home ten times happier and went assiduously to work to learn to read. My mother was an invalid, and ere long I learned well enough to read her."
When my mother died, I found good friends and was adopted by a gentleman in W.—. As his son I have been educated. A year ago he died and left his property to me. Of all the pleasant memories of my boyhood, the one connected with you is the dearest. I have kept this primer next to my heart, and dwell upon the hope of again meeting the giver. I have met her. I see all that my imagination pictured, and I ask if the dear hand that gave this book cannot be mine for ever?"
Louise felt deeper grief than ever when Marian told her she was to become the wife of Mr. Hamilton, the poor boy whom she once spurned from her door and derisively called, "intellect in rags." But she learned a severe lesson, and one that soon changed the whole current of her life. For while she scorned Mr. Hamilton, by persevering kindness he made her feel easy in his presence, and she became the acknowledged friend of the Congressman and his wife.
Years have passed since then, and Louise is training up a family of little ones; but she is teaching them to despise not intellect in rags, but to be guided by Marian's text: "The rich and the poor meet together, and the Lord is the maker of them all."

CHOLERA.
Read before the QUINCY SOCIAL SCIENCE
ASSOCIATION, Nov. 30th, 1865.
The arrival of a vessel infected with cholera has caused considerable sensation in New York. We learn that the Atlanta had on board four hundred and fifty persons, most of whom were German emigrants in the steerage. It is worthy of remark that the cases of disease were entirely confined to the steerage passengers. Not only were the cabin passengers more comfortably accommodated, and better fed, but "they adopted a plan not only of making themselves as comfortable as possible, but of diverting their minds from the subject by amusements of various kinds." For it is well known that fear of a disease predisposes the system to its attacks; and we remember the story of the criminal whom certain physicians bled to death without taking from him a drop of blood.
Let us make up our minds to banish
from our thoughts all fear of the cholera.
In the first place, it is not certain that it will reach our State or town. And if it does come we are not sure that we shall be the victims. And even if we are it is nothing to be afraid of. There are things that may happen to us ten thousand times worse than to be killed by cholera. Let us look the terrible spectre fairly in the face, and we shall have to confess that taking him at his worst aspect, this devil is not half so bad as he is painted.
Yet if we are wise, we shall quietly take all proper precautions. We shall keep our persons, and every thing about our dwellings scrupulously clean. If we have not learned the blessings of the daily bath, we must learn them at once. If we have allowed ourselves to eat ill-cooked and indigestible food, we must eat it no longer. If we have shut ourselves up in close rooms, we must change our habits, and take exercise in all weathers. If we have allowed the perspiration to be check-ed by contact with cold linen or cotton, instead of absorbing itself in wool, we must clothe ourselves more wisely. What are all pestilential visitations but results of bad habits, and admonitions to live more like angels, and less like pigs!
It is said that cholera has two stages:
The first curable; the second fatal. The first is a mild, painless diarrhoea, which lasts hours and sometimes days before the second stage sets in. When the first symptoms appear, the patient has only to go to bed, and keep warm, and take the necessary remedies. In England, during former visitations of cholera, boards of visitors were organized who went from house to house inquiring for persons in whom had appeared the premonitory symptoms, and applying simple remedies, which they carried with them. And it is declared that in districts thus visited, many towns lying in the direct path of the disease did not lose a single inhabitant from cholera.

LOSS OF APPETITE IN SPRING.
The decline of appetite in spring is not a symptom or a effect of disease; it is,
as it were the wise forethought of a sleepless instinct which puts out its blind feel-ers ahead to clear away danger. Instinct, that wonderful, impalpable thing, the agent of Almighty power, the instrument of divine love, its lesson is, that the body does not require so much food, hence the desire is taken away; and if men could only be induced to read the lesson aright, to practice it by simply eating according to the appetite, by not going to the table
if they do not "feel like taking anything," and then resolutely wait until the next meal, and at no time eating on a whim, if there were a decided desire for it; if such a course were judiciously pursued, the spring time would be to us a waking up to newness of life, as it is to the vegetable world. But instead of this co-operating with our instincts, we take something, bitters, pills, anything that anybody advises as good for "whetting up the appetite." It acts like a charm; we speak loudly in its praise, and a dozen more are induced to follow the example. But soon the bubble bursts. Nature was only drugged; her voice was only hushed to wake up a little later, to find her ward prostrated by serious, and to old persons often fatal sickness. To avoid spring diseases, then, abate the amount of food eaten at least one-third, and work or exercise with proportionate deliberation.

ROBIN AND ALUM.
A gentleman in Alabama, in exerting himself one day, felt a sudden pain, and fearing his internal machinery had been thrown out of gear, sent for a negro on his plantation, to prescribe for him. The negro having investigated the cause, prepared and administered a dose to his patient with the utmost confidence of a speedy cure. No relief being experienced, however, the gentleman sent for a physician, who inquired of the negro what medicine he had given his master. Bob promptly responded, "Robin and alum, sir." "What did you give them for?"
continued the doctor. "Why," replied Bob, "de alum to draw de parts together, and de robin to solder um." The patient eventually recovered.

A POSER.
This story is related as a veritable fact,
of a Dutch Justice, residing in the pleasant valley of the Hudson, not a thousand miles from Albany.
He kept a small tavern, and was not remarkable for the acuteness of his mental perceptions, nor would it appear as one of his customers much better off in the matter of "gumption." One morning a man stepped in and bought a bottle of small beer. He stood talking a few minutes, and by and by said:
"I am sorry I purchased this beer. I wish you would exchange it for some crackers and cheese to the same amount."
The simple boniface readily assented, and the man took the plate of crackers and cheese and eat them. As he was going out, the landlord hesitatingly reminded him that he hadn't paid for them.
"Yes, I did," said the customer; "I gave you the beer for them."
"Well, den, I knowish dat; but den you haven't give me de monish for the beerish."
"But I didn't take the beer; there stands the same bottle now!"
The old tavern-keeper was astounded.
He looked sad and confused; but all to no purpose was his laborious thinking.
The case was still a mystery.
"Well, den," said he at length. "I don't see how it ish; I got the beerish—yaas, I got the beerish; but den same times, I got no monish! Well, you keeps de crackers—and cheese; but I don't want any more of your custom. You can keeps away from my tavern."
We may always joke when we please, if we are always careful to please when we joke.

POINT LECTURES. The fourth of the Point Lectures, by the Rev. B. G. Northrup, was expected from the position held by the lecturer in the educational department of our State government, was a high-toned, finished, and scholarly production.

It has been said that our system of government, and our political institutions largely owe their origin to New England town meetings. Deeper than this, nearer to primal causes, travelled the thoughts of the speaker, and in home and home training and influences he found the germ of our character as a people, and of the "power that hath made and preserved us as a nation."

To Mr. Northrup, "a thing of beauty is a joy forever," and he advocated unreservedly the cultivation of a taste for the beautiful, both as in itself a source of pleasure, and as a means of developing and strengthening the moral nature.

The idea that this system of education would result in a weakly sentimentality, was answered by recognizing clearly the unadorned truth, that beauty finds its highest and noblest expression in the cultivation of moral excellence.

Cheerfulness of disposition, and the pursuit of happiness, by all legitimate methods, were inculcated as duties.

Mr. Northrup has commended himself to public favor by his energetic efforts at the meeting of State Superintendents lately held at Washington. The assurance which he gave to his audience of the success of the Common School System at the South were gratifying and highly encouraging.

On next Thursday evening, Rev. Mr. Parkhurst of Woburn, who has seen actual service, will give some "Reminiscences of the war."

THE LECTURES OF SUNDAY AND TUESDAY EVENINGS. Notwithstanding the threatening aspect of the weather, a very fair audience was present to hear Mr. W. E. Eaton's lecture in the Universalist Church on Sunday evening.

It was the fifth, we believe, in the course of Temperance Lectures, delivered under the auspices of the "Good Templars" in this village, during the present winter, and was one of the ablest and most telling of the course.

The singing by a full choir, was capital, and the services throughout, were exceedingly pleasant and profitable.

The lecture by Rev. D. W. Waldron of South Braintree before the "Quincy Temperance Society" in Lyceum Hall, on Tuesday evening, was very interesting and instructive; but in consequence of other entertainments on that evening, the audience was, we doubt not, much smaller than it would have been at a more favorable time.

CLOTHING. The new firm of Lombard & Nightingale have added an immense stock the past week to their previous good assortment, and we believe they are prepared to show a larger and better collection of piece goods than can be found anywhere this side of Boston. Particular attention is given to the custom department, and those in want of Spring Goods, will be well accommodated by giving them a call.

Rev. Mr. Eastman—late of South Braintree, now of Holyoke, recently took possession of the new Parsonage, built for him by his parish at a cost of $5000. Besides a purse of money he found other substantial awaiting him, which, with other gifts, amount to $250. If religious societies understood how much a comfortable and permanent dwelling had to do with permanency in the pastoral relation they would either purchase or build parsonages.

CONCERT AND BALL. One of the grandest promenade balls that has been given in Norfolk County this winter, is announced in our columns to take place at Stetson Hall, Randolph, on Friday evening next. The Germania Orchestra, consisting of ten pieces has been engaged for the occasion. Col. Beals of Boston will tastefully decorate the Hall, and there is no one to our knowledge who knows how to do it in better style. Undoubtedly a large number will be present from this and the adjoining towns.

THE BUTLER GOLD CASE. It will be remembered that about a year ago South Bros, formerly bankers at New Orleans, commenced suit in the Court of Common Pleas of the city of New York, against Gen. Butler to recover $80,000 in gold, which they alleged he had abstracted from their vaults. The General defended, and claimed that he had turned over the money to the War Department. This Judge Pierpont counsel for the Smiths, disproved, the trial was pushed on, and there was every chance of its being reached next month. Within a day or two, we learn from the Express, Gen. Butler, has settled the account by paying the gold back with interest, all costs and Sheriff's pounce, making an aggregate of over $150,000.—Commercial.

BOSTON CORRESPONDENCE.

BOSTON, FEB. 22, 1866.

Business of all kinds continues quiet and bids fair to remain so until the financial policy of the nation is developed for the year. Buyers and holders are alike cautious in their dealings, waiting for something more definite. Compared with last year at this time, there is a great decline of prices, with every prospect that there will be a further decrease. Gold through the week has held an average position of 136 and in our humble view it will get at 125 before summer, and remain there until the resumption of specie payments. High as the prices of labor and materials for building are, improvements are contemplated in many parts of the city on a large scale. The denizens of Summer street are fast vacating their princely dwellings, in the places of which, many blocks of stores are to be erected; and even the "Church of the Green," at the corner of Bedford and Summer streets, is to be demolished for the erection of buildings of a business character. The old State House, that venerable pile of bricks on State street, according to the action of the City Government is soon to disappear. How we shall miss the sight of that very ancient edifice! In our boyish days, many are the gambols we have enjoyed around the Massachusetts State House of the last century. Our recollection stretches back to more than the span of a generation. Then the basement of this dear old building was occupied as a saddler's shop; the west end, on Washington street, as a shoe store, and the middle portion of the building for offices and other kinds of business. Selfridge who killed Austin in 1806 had his office in the first story on the north side of the building. We remember when he occupied it, and have seen him in his office. What a history could be written of this ancient landmark of Boston. The Colonial Legislature before the Revolution of 1776 convened within its walls; and many a time have the Royal Governors in their scarlet robes harangued the people in pomp and glory from the balcony now standing on the eastern side. The old State House is one hundred and ten feet long and thirty-eight feet in breadth, covering an area of four thousand one hundred and eighty square feet. It would probably sell for $100,000 per foot, which would amount to the snug sum of $418,000. History tells us that two buildings on this spot have been destroyed by fire. The first was built in 1659; the second in 1714—and the present building in 1748. On the completion of the new State House in January, 1798, the ancient building in question ceased to be the Capitol of the old Bay State. Sic transit gloria mundi.

The city was much excited on Monday from the reception of President Johnson's veto of the Freedmen's Bureau Bill. The tone of parties on this document is very decided, both pro and con. The Boston Herald says it will command the attention of every thoughtful person, and undoubtedly provoke much controversy.

The National Intelligencer, in Washington, says, "the veto is the overthrow of the revolutionary cabal."

The feelings among the politicians in Washington are at fever heat. Forney, of the Chronicle, says, the veto falls like the cold hand of death on the warm impulses of the American people.

The New York Tribune says, Mr. Johnson made a grave mistake, and that he has relieved those who elected him of a great responsibility by taking it on his own shoulders. It condemns the President's views.

The World, editorially, says of the veto in its concluding laudatory remarks:—"neither Jefferson or Jackson ever asserted with such fearful fidelity and ringing emphasis the fundamental principles of civil liberty as President Johnson has done in this message."

The New York Times takes a more hopeful view of it—saying, in no essential point is the President at variance either with the majority in Congress or with the country. So far as the claims of the Freedmen are concerned, he seeks to reach the end aimed at in the vetoed bill by other, and what he deems less radical means. It will therefore be for Congress and the country to weigh carefully the objections offered, and at least with respect, if they cannot assent to the reasons on which the veto is based."

The leader of the Boston Journal of last evening, in speaking of the excitement of Congress on the veto, takes a calm and dispassionate view of the matter; disapproving the hasty and hot language of Wade and others in denunciations of the President; and that this is not the time for giving away to resentment and aimless excitement. He argues that there is no evidence in the vote that the President is unfriendly to the protection of the Freedmen. A conciliatory couple with members of Congress, the people is recommended with all who have heretofore marched together as good and true union men, under the banner of the American flag.

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE. We have received from James Vick, Esq., importer of choice flower and vegetable seeds, Rochester, N. Y., a pamphlet entitled: "Vick's illustrated catalogue of seeds, and guide to the flower garden; containing accurate descriptions of the leading floral treasures of the world, with plain and full directions for sowing seed, transplanting and after culture, illustrated with numerous engravings. Also, choice seeds for the vegetable garden with instructions for culture." We find the work very interesting and instructive, and we would advise those who take delight and pleasure in cultivating beautiful flowers to send for a catalogue.

A Seamen's Chaplain in Boston states that one hundred and fifty thousand sailors arrive every year at that port, speaking three hundred different languages. Boston alone has 19,000 sailors.

SOLDIERS' FUND.

At a public meeting at the Town Hall, in April, 1861, something over two thousand dollars was raised by subscription and contribution to aid the soldiers who might go to the war, and assist and help their families at home. This was done to encourage men to volunteer, and go out to the war. They went, feeling assured that their families would not suffer in their absence; how for they have been relieved by this fund, may be judged, when at the present time, about half the money remains in the hands of the Selectmen, which a few rich men of the subscribers have voted to give to build a soldiers' monument. Why have they done so? Why do they take that money for other purposes than that for which it was given? Are there no poor soldiers' widows, with helpless children to provide for, who would be glad of their mite? Are there no disabled soldiers? Are there none suffering from wounds, or sickness caused by being in the army who would be very glad of a few dollars of this, their own money, to make them comfortable, even for a short time? I believe there are many! Why have they voted to take the widow's mite from them without their consent, for that or any other purpose? Perhaps they think the town may vote to build the monument, and by using this money for that purpose, their taxes will be so much less. But I believe it is wrong to rob the widow, the fatherless children, and the worn out and sick, and wounded soldier, for this or any other purpose. I hope to see at the adjourned meeting of the subscribers, enough present to reconsider the vote by which this money was given toward building the monument. A SUBSCRIBER.

A BIRTHDAY PARTY. The friends of Mr. Franklin Shaw, of the firm of F. Shaw & Co. Braintree, were entertained at his home, Thursday evening, February 16th, it being the anniversary of his birthday. One feature of the evening, was the presentation of a gold headed cane, by C. D. Hayden, Esq., in behalf of his friends assembled. The recipient responded in eloquent terms. Refreshments under the direction of Mrs. Matilda Hollis, was excellent and abundant; and music, vocal and instrumental, was rendered principally by Mrs. Gordon, of Boston, with great effect. The occasion passed off pleasantly to all concerned. C. C. C.

THE TWENTY-SECOND. The birthday of Washington was generally observed in this place. The bells were rung in the morning, at noon, and at night. The national colors were displayed on many of the buildings, and the day wore a pleasant aspect—the weather being delightful. In the evening the Quincy Brass Band gave a grand entertainment at the Town Hall, which was largely attended. Some eight hundred persons were present. The programme was well selected and most perfectly performed, giving the most pleasing and satisfactory entertainment ever presented by this company, and we are happy that there was so large a crowd present to enjoy it.

SAVINGS BANKS. The following statement exhibits the number of depositors and the amount of deposits in the Savings Banks in the County, on the last Saturday of October, 1865, as shown by the returns prepared by the Secretary of State:

Towns.	Depositors.	Amount.

Roxbury Five Cents	1,054	91,055.00

THE SOUTH. We have before us the advance sheets of a new volume touching the late rebellion, which promises to be one of the most fascinating books of the year. It is from the pen of J. T. Trowbridge, a well known magazine and novelist, whose "Cudjoe's Cave" was so popular during the rebellion, and is entitled, The South, a tour of its battle fields and ruined cities, etc.

The author had every facility offered him for observation. His acquaintance and his position as an author, gave him letters from leading official persons, and these opened the way for him everywhere, and procured a kind reception from the officers of our army stationed throughout the South. The volume so far as it has been put in type, is very interesting. The style is genial, anecdotal and agreeable, conversations are reported with vivacity, the descriptions are well done, a few touches reproduce the great features of the battles, and the reader will thoroughly enjoy the ramble with the author over the famous fields, and find himself instructed.

The volume is to be an octavo of about 600 pages, on fine paper, in clear type, with good maps and a number of excellent illustrations from original drawings. The book is to be sold by subscription only for $3.50.

SOUTHWAY'S CANDIES. We are pleased to refer our readers to the advertisement of J. K. Southway in another column. He is the best confectioner in New England, and to say that a candy comes from Southway's is a recommendation enough for the most aristocratic families in and about Boston. Some of our confectioners bought to make specialty of Southway's. His "Molasses Candy" is a rarity that never finds its way here.

His "Balsam of Tolu Candy" is as popular as dress goods from Stewart's. Who will introduce Southway's confections to this market? Hundreds of our readers always visit his place when in Boston, and bring home a bundle of good things.

For the Patriot. Agricultural Meeting in Weymouth.

The Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society held their regular quarterly meeting in the vestry of the new Baptist Church, Weymouth Landing, Friday evening, February 2, 1866. The President, John S. Fogg, Esq., and the Secretary, Oliver Loud, Esq., both being absent, their places were filled by two of the Vice Presidents, Hon. J. W. Lounf, presiding, and John O. Foye acting as Secretary, pro tem.

The Chairman opened the meeting by informing them that this was a stated gathering of the Society for the discussion of agriculture and kindred topics, and invited all present to take part in the discussion. He urged the importance of educating the people to be farmers, how to use manures, the best kind for each crop, the proper time to apply them, and the amount to be used to the acre. He detailed how he reclaimed a worthless bog meadow of three acres, and made it produce a very large crop of English hay. The process had beautified and improved the land in five years, so it is now taxed for more than two hundred dollars per acre. Five years ago he planted a small piece of this meadow (smaller than the room in which the meeting was held) to cranberries, and this fall he gathered fifteen bushels of good cranberries from the lot. He said he farmed it principally to save doctors' bills, and found it a very healthful, pleasant occupation, and thought that every man with a family ought to cultivate a good garden, if no more.

Rev. Calvin Terry was the next speaker. He said that agriculture and its kindred subjects lay at the bottom of our national wealth and prosperity; that our youth ought to be educated in the science of farming in our common schools and colleges; that farming was one of the most honorable as well as healthy occupations of life, and he believed that it could be made to pay a profit even in Weymouth. He showed how an artificial trout pond could be made, at little cost, that would supply a family with this beautiful fish the year round. He believed also from observation, that cranberries could be raised in the bog meadows of Weymouth, at a great profit. His remarks were extended to considerable length on kindred subjects and were very interesting.

Mr. Francis E. Loud said that it was an old adage that he who makes two spears of grass to grow where but one grew before, is a benefactor to the race. This is as true now as it ever was, and he urged the importance of cultivating a good garden, and said it brought health and happiness with the necessities of life.

Mr. Elias Richards next responded to the call of the President, and said that when a boy his father told him to plough the corn field and get ready for planting. He obeyed the order and invited his father to go and see how well he had ploughed the land. The old gentleman looked it over and said, "My son, you have ploughed too deep, we shall not have half a crop on this land." But when the corn was gathered, it was found that they had a much larger crop than ever before; and from that time to the present he had advocated deep ploughing.

Mr. Marshall C. Dizer set the meeting in a roar of laughter by describing how he raised cranberries and pickled them. He said he planted a large lot of cranberries near his house, and prided himself that he should raise enough in a few years to sell to his neighbors, but was sorry to say that he had never seen a cranberry on the lot since—the first frost he saw the vines all out of the ground the first winter.

Having failed in the cranberry business he next turned his attention to raising pickled. He had a pond of water near his house, so he employed a number of boys to catch all the pickled they could and put them in the pond, for which he paid them liberally. The fish increased rapidly and grew finely, and he prided himself on possessing the best show of pickled in the County, and he took great pleasure in showing his finny tribe to his friends, and told them he should soon be able to supply them all. But imagine his surprise when told one day by a gentleman that knew that his pickled were all salers. The announcement of this fact took the starch out of him so that he could not attend to business for several days.

Mr. W. Farren said his farming had not been very profitable, probably from a want of knowledge, but urged the necessity of it from motives of health and happiness. He said every one ought to tend on fruit or ornamental trees, and thus adorn his home.

Mr. Joseph Gannett explained how such large crops of corn are raised in the Southern States, at so little cost, and gave an interesting account of his travels South, while in the Union army, fighting the rebels.

The Secretary stated that the Society proposed to hold its quarterly meetings in each village of the town—and that the next would probably be in East Weymouth, and hoped it would prove as interesting and profitable as the one to-night. These meetings are always very interesting, and it is hoped that one people will attend them better than they have done.

JOHN O. FOYE, Secretary pro tem, Weymouth Landing, Feb. 3, 1866.

CONCERT AT WEYMOUTH. The Universalist Church at Weymouth Landing, was crowded on Sunday evening last. The concert by the children under their popular instructor was excellent, and both teacher and scholars are deserving of great praise. Weymouth is noted for its fine singers, and we believe they can maintain this honor with dignity for years to come, if we could judge anything by the singing of the young ladies on this occasion.

CONUNDRUM. Why may the present Board of Selectmen of this town be likened to retired men? Because they are men of E's.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

Quincy, Feb. 14th, 1866.
At a meeting of the Subscribers of the Soldiers' Fund, held at the Selectmen's Room, pursuant to notice, (there being present the Quincy Patriot last Saturday, Daniel Baxter was chosen Chairman, and Thompson Baxter Secretary.)

The Trustees reported in the fund eleven hundred dollars.
Voted, that this money be appropriated towards building a suitable Monument to the memory of all the citizens of Quincy, who have died in the service of their country, in the late rebellion.

Voted, to adjourn to next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at same place, at which time a building committee will be chosen to carry the above vote into effect. A full attendance of the subscribers is requested.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, FEB. 21st.
Met pursuant to adjournment, voted to adjourn to WEDNESDAY EVENING, March 7th, 1866, to see what action the town will take in the matter (there being present an article in the Warrant for that purpose,) and that the Secretary be authorized to publish the doings of this and the first meeting in the Quincy Patriot two weeks.

The "Goats," having been expelled from church, have joined the Masons.

The rogues who broke open Holden's shop used candles—gas too weak for their eyes.

The Town Clock is sadly out of keeping or a keeper; it tells a different hour on each face.

The "Goats" are to be harnessed,
Jones, Poor & Co., are about contracting with the "Order" to furnish a double Harness; silver mounted, with all the extras.

A meeting of the "Social Science Association" is said to have been postponed because the wind was east, and did not blow scientifically.

The Report of the School Committee is being printed. News anticipated by the Reports of years past.

The "Goats" have moved from the Hancock House, and have taken lodging near the Masonic Hall.

Selected Poetry.

I AM DYING.

Raise my pillow, husband dearest,—
Faint and fainter comes my breath,
And these shadows stealing slowly,
Most I know be those of death.

I've had visions, and been dreaming
O'er the past of joy and pain;
Year by year I've wandered backward,
Till I was a child again.

Dreamed of childhood, and the moment
When I stood your wife and bride—
How my heart thrilled with love's triumph
In that hour of woman's pride!

Dreamed of thee—and all the earth-cords
Firmly twined about my heart—
O the bitter, burning anguish,
When I knew that we must part.

It has passed—and God has promised
All thy footsteps to attend;
He, that's more than friend or brother,
He'll be with thee to the end.

When life's trials wait around thee,
And its chilling billows swell,
Think! think Heaven that I am parted them,
Thou'lt then feel that 'all is well.'

Bring our labors unto my bedside;
My last blessing let them keep—
But they're sleeping; do not wake them—
They'll learn soon enough to weep.

Tell them often of my mother,
Kiss them when they wake, and Lead them gently in the pathway,
Love them doubly for my sake.

Clasp my hand still closer, darling,
Till the last night of my life;
For to-morrow I shall never Answer when you call me "wife."

Fare thee well my noble husband;
Faintest 'neath this chattering rind;
Thy strong arm round our children,
Keep them close to thee—and God.

Farmers' Department.

OXEN PROFITABLE TEAMS.

Late in the autumn of 1864, a good farmer of our acquaintance, purchased a yoke of ordinary cattle for two hundred dollars, and used them for hauling wood, rails and any thing else, and for doing most of the plowing for spring crops on a farm of seventy acres. In June, he sold them for beef for two hundred and sixty dollars. He thinks their labor paid well for the meal they consumed. On the same day that he drove these oxen to market, he purchased another yoke for one hundred and ninety dollars. After a few months he sold these for beef at an advance, which also paid well for the meal fed to them, and purchased another yoke at once, and commenced feeding them with meal, working them occasionally. By this system of trafficking, he made three hundred dollars in about one year, and had a good ox team constantly, received a good price for all grain fed them, besides making a large quantity of excellent manure. He is a good manager, always feeds his teams well, treats them kindly, and never allows them to be overworked, or worried by disagreeable drivers, who use up more of the energies of a team by bawling at, and whipping them, than by the labor got out of them. He never purchases poor oxen, even at a cheap rate, as it requires many dollars worth of meal to get them into a fattening condition.

FOWLS. Never over feed. Never feed from trough, pan, basin, or any vessel. Feed only when the birds will run after the feed, and not at all if they seem careless about it. For seven or eight days before hatching, sprinkle the eggs with cold water while the hen is off. This will prevent the frequent complaint that the chicken was dead in the shell.

Inednotes.

"How do I look, Pompey?" said a young dandy to his servant, as he had finished dressing himself.

"Elegant, massa; you look as bold as a lion."

"Bold as a lion, Pompey! How do you know? You never saw a lion."

"O yes, massa, I seed one down to massa Jenks, in de stable."

"Down to Jenks, Pompey? Why, you abominable fool, Jenks hasn't got a lion; that's a jacks."

"Can't help it, massa, you look just like him."

A boy with ragged trowsers and rimless chip hat, runs into the apothecary shop on the corner with a dipper in his hand.

"Doctor, mother sent me down to the shotary pop, quicker'n blazes, coz bub's sick as the dickens with the pipen chox and she wants a thimbleful of pollygolic in this dipper, coz we hadn't got a bottle handy, and the kint pup's got the binc waters in't. Got any?"

A celebrated wit was asked why he did not marry a young lady to whom he was much attached.

"I know no reason," he replied, "except the great regard we have for each other."

An Irishman was about to marry a Southern girl for her property. "Will you take this woman to be your wedded wife?" said the minister. "Yes, your reverence, and the nagers, too."

TO THE LADIES.

Miss GUILD offers to the public her Superior Crystal Palace Chart for CUTTING DRESSES, which is conceded by competent judges to surpass any inventory of the kind ever offered to the American public. She feels fully warranted in saying that it is as perfect a fit as human ingenuity can render it, and should be in the possession of every lady. It is simple, easy and graceful, adapted to fit every form and size, from the slender girl of seven years to the largest adult. Directions printed in full on every Chart. None genuine unless the Crystal Palace is engraved upon it, and the name of the inventor printed. Copyright secured and no infringements allowed.

Agents wanted in every part of the country.—This Chart will be sent, on receipt of a receipt of $2 addressed to LUCY GUILD, Revere, Vt. Ladies wishing a tape measure must enclose 15 cents extra.

Miss Guild warns people from buying, selling or using a chart called the National Chart, by Miss Jane Eddy, Nashua, N. H., as it is an infringement of her copyright. Any person printing, selling or using the counterfeit chart will be prosecuted according to law. One Albert J. Warren has been extensively engaged in selling the counterfeit chart, and is supposed to be the perpetrator of the forgery. Any information leading to his arrest will be liberally rewarded.

CHAPPED HANDS, FACE, LIPS,

CHAPBURN, ETC.—Certain and Immediate Cure.—HEGEMAN & Co.'s Eucalypti and Glycerine, if used according to the directions, will keep the hands in the coldest weather. Price 25 cents. Sold by Druggists. Sent by mail on receipt of 25 cents. HEGEMAN & Co., Chemists and Druggists, New York.

Souther & Monroe

Opposite the Maine Depot, Boston. MANUFACTURERS AND PROPRIETORS OF THE CELEBRATED MACHINE GRAINED

Chamber Furniture.

WE are prepared to offer to dealers and others in want of Painted Chamber Furniture an entirely new and novel article in that line. Our work is done by a Patent Machine. By this machine the actual veins and fibres of the natural grains are molded from the real wood, from which is impressed a perfect fac-simile of the original, thus reproducing upon any painted or bare wood surface a greater variety of designs, with more rapidity and with natural and more artistic beauty, than can possibly be created by the most skillful hand in any of the old modes known. It copies nature exactly. It grains in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsome and more durable set of Furniture, and at as low a price as can be bought in the city. Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. Those in want would do well to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

Poetry.

FOR THE PATRIOT.

THE OLD MAN.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

The old man's at his cottage door,

His head is bowed, his eyes are dim,

His hopes in life are well nigh o'er,

The world has lost its charms for him.

They who have been his hope and stay,

Will cheer his drooping heart no more;

Their country call'd them far away,

To battle on a distant shore.

His gallant sons in Freedom's cause,

They died—submitting to his fate,

He waits his country's promised laws,

To shield him from the paper's state.

Must he be told his hopes are vain?

Be told his country can't afford

Her martyr's parents to sustain?

Be told the debt will be ignored?

Where is the man will tell him so?

Tell him his claims we do not heed,

That he may to the slum-house go!

What traitor tongue will do the deed.

The demagogue who would conspire,

White'er his rank, white'er his fame,

To crush thy hopes, poor aged sire,

Should bear the traitor's branded name.

A nation who would dissallow

The claims of those who died to save,

Beneath a conqueror's yoke should bow,

And wear the liv'ry of a slave.

Interesting Selections.

GINGER SPONGE CAKE.

One cup of molasses, one cup of butter, two cups of sugar, four eggs, three cups of flour, one cup of milk, soda and ginger.

BUTTERMILK ROLLS.

Mix one teaspoonful of cream of tartar into a quart of flour; one quart of buttermilk, with one large spoonful of soda dissolved in it; stir it well and quickly—a little salt added lastly. Pour into tins, or make into rolls. Bake quickly.

KIND WORDS.

They are the brightest flowers of earth's existence; they make a very paradise of the humblest home the world can show. Use them, and especially around the fireside circle. They are jewels beyond price, and more precious to the heart than gold, and make the weighed-down spirit glad, than all other blessings the earth can give.

CONJUGAL AFFECTION.

Of a small farmer in Aberdeenshire, having been long confined to bed before the time when her last moment approached, the husband, who was of a very niggardly disposition, at length grudgingly let her have so much as a light by the side of her bed. One night, while in this condition, she exclaimed, "Oh, I wish this an uncouth thing, that a pair of body can get near light to see to die in!" The husband instantly rose up, lighted a candle, and bringing it forward, hastily, to the bottom of the bed, said, "There, die now!"

HIS FIRST ACT.

A young candidate for the legal profession was asked what he should do first when employed to bring an action. "Ask for money on account," was the prompt reply. He passed.

MARRYING FOR MONEY.

A prudent and well-disposed member of the Society of Friends once gave the following friendly advice:

"John," said he, "I hear thou art going to be married."

"Yes," replied John, "I am."

"Well, I have only one little piece of advice to give thee, and that is, never marry a woman more than thou art. When I married my wife, I was worth fifty cents, and she was worth sixty-two cents; and when any difference has occurred between us since, she has always thrown up the odd shilling."

An old lady was complaining a few days since, in the market, of the excessive high price of provisions. "It is not the meat only that is so enormously dear," said she, "but I cannot obtain flour for a pudding, for less than double the usual price, and they do not make the eggs half as large as they used to be."

GINGERBREAD AND ARMUNES.

Reuben: "Mayn't I see you hum from meetin', Eunice?" Eunice: "No, you shan't do no such thing, I'm otherwise engaged." Reuben: "Wa'al, I kinder guess you've missed it once. I've got my pockets chuck full o' gingerbread and armunes." Eunice: "You may take my arm, Reuben."

It is funny to see a young lady with both hands in soft dough, and a musquito on the end of her nose.

Miscellany.

DON'T PROPOSE IN THE DARK.

The pretty, square farm house, standing at the corner where Kibe's land, (or the first phrase, although giving by far the closest picture of the place, it must be confessed, looked rather Irish,) and where the aforesaid brook winds away by the side of another lane, until it spreads into riverlike dignity, as it meanders through the sunny plain of Hartly Common; and finally disappears amidst the great recesses of Perge Wood—that pretty, square farm house, half hidden by the tall elms in the flower court before it, which, with the spacious garden and orchard behind, and the extensive barn, yards and out-buildings, so completely occupies one of the angles formed by the crossing of the lane and the stream—that pretty farm house contains one of the happiest and most prosperous families in Aberleigh—the large and thriving family of Farmer Evans.

Whether from skill or from good fortune—or as is probable, from a lucky mixture of both—everything goes right in his great farm. His crops are the best in the parish; his hay is never spoiled; his cattle never die; his servants never thieve; his children are never ill. He buys cheap and sells dear; money gathers about him like a snow-ball—and yet, in spite of all this provoking and intolerable prosperity, every body loves Farmer Evans. He is so hospitable, so good natured, so generous and so homely.

There, after all, lies the charm. Riches have only not spoiled the man, but they have not altered him. He is just the same in look and word, that he was thirty years ago, when he and his wife, with two sorry horses, and cow and three pigs, began the world at Dean Gate, a little bargain of twenty miles off. Ay, and his wife is the same woman! the same frugal, tidy, industrious, good natured Mrs. Evans—so noted for her activity in tongue and limb, her good looks and plain dressings; as frugal, as good natured, as active, as plain, as dressing Mrs. Evans at forty-five, as she was at nineteen, and in a different way, almost as good looking.

Their children—six "boys," as Farmer Evans promiscuously calls them, whose ages vary from eight and twenty, and three girls, two grown up, and one, the youngest of the family—are just what we might expect from parents so simple and so good. The young men, intelligent and well conducted; the boys, docile and promising; and the little girl, as pretty a little curly-headed, rosy-checked poppet as ever was the pet and plaything of a large family.

It is, however, with the eldest daughters we have to do.

Jane and Patty Evans were as much alike as hath often befallen any two sisters not born at one time, for in the matter of twin children, there has been a series of puzzles ever since the days of the Dromios. Nearly of an age, I believe at this moment, both are turned nineteen, and neither have reached twenty; exactly of a stature, (so high that Frederick the Great would have coveted them for his tall regiment)—with hazel eyes, large mouths, full lips, white teeth, brown hair, clear, healthy complexion, and that sort of nose which is neither Grecian nor Roman, nor aquiline, nor ce petit nez retroussé, that some persons prefer to them all, but a nose which, moderately prominent and sufficiently well shaped, is as yet, as far as I know, anonymous, although it be perhaps as common and as well looking a feature as is to be seen on an English face.

Altogether, they were a pair of tall and comely maidens, and being constantly attired in garments of the same color and fashion, looked at all times so much alike, that no stranger ever dreamed of knowing them apart; and even their acquaintances were accustomed to think and speak of them generally as "the Evanses," than as the separate individuals, Jane and Patty. Even those who did pretend to distinguish the one from the other, were not exempt from mistakes, which the sisters—Patty especially, who delighted in the fun so often produced by the unusual resemblance—were apt to favor, by changing places in a walk, or slipping from one side to the other at a country tea-party, or playing a hundred innocent tricks, to occasion at once a grave blunder and a merry laugh.

Old Dinah Goodwin, for instance, who, being rather portly, was, jealous of being suspected less clearly than her neighbors, and had defied even the Evanses to puzzle her discernment; seeking in vain on Patty's hand the cut finger which she had dressed on Jane's, ascribed the incredible cure to the merits of her own incomparable salve; and could hardly be deceived, even by the pulling off of Jane's glove and the exhibition of the lacerated digital sewed round by her own bandage.

Young George Kally, too, the greatest beau in the parish, having betted at a Christmas party, that he would dance with every pretty girl in the room, lost his wager (which Patty had overheard) by that saucy damsel slipping into her sister's place, and persuading her to join her own unconscious partner; so that George danced twice with Patty and not at all with Jane. A bandering piece of malice, which proved, as the young gentleman (a rustic exquisite of the first water) was pleased to assert, that Miss Patty was not displeased with her partner. How little does a rain man know of womanhood! If she had liked him, she would not have played the trick for the mines of Golconda.

In short, from their school days, when Jane was chidden for Patty's bad work, and Patty slapped for Jane's bad spinning, down to this, their prime of womanhood, there had been no end to the confusion pronounced by this remarkable instance of family likeness.

And yet Nature—who sets some mark of indication of individuality upon even her meanest productions, making some unnoted difference between the lambs dropped from ewe, the robins bred in one nest, the flowers growing on one stock, and the leaves hanging on one tree—had not left these young maidens without one great and permanent distinction—a natural and striking dissimilarity of temper. Equally industrious, affectionate, happy and kind; each was so in a different way. Jane was grave, Patty was gay. If you heard a laugh or a song, be sure it was Patty; she who jumped the stile, when her sister opened the gate was Patty; she who chased the pigs from the garden as merrily as if she were running a race, so that the pigs did not mind her, was Patty.

On the other hand, she that so carefully was making, with its own ravelled threads, and invisible dam, in her mother's handkerchief, and hearing her sister read the while; by she so patiently feeding, one by one, two broods of young turkeys; she that so pensively was watering her own bed of delicate and somewhat rare flowers—the pale hues of the Alpine pink, or the alabaster blossoms of the white evening primrose, whose modest flowers dying off into a bluish, resemble her own character—was Jane.

Some of the gossip of Aberleigh used to assert that Jane's sighing over the flowers, as well as the early steadiness of her character, arose from an engagement to my lord's head gardener, an intelligent, sedate, and sober young Scotsman. Of this I know nothing. Certain it is, that the prettiest and newest plants were to be found in Jane's little flower garden; and if Mr. Archibald Maclean did sometimes come to look after them, I did not see that he was the business of anybody's.

In the meantime, a visitor of a different description arrived at the farm. A cousin of Mrs. Evans had been as successful in trade as her husband had been in agriculture, and had now sent his only son to become acquainted with his relations and spend a few weeks in their family.

Charles Foster was a fine young man, whose father was neither more or less than a linen draper, in a great town; but whose manners, education, mind and character, might have done honor to a far higher station. He was, in a word, one of nature's gentlemen; and in nothing did he more thoroughly show his taste and good breeding, than by entering entirely in the homely ways and old fashioned habits of his country cousins. He was delighted with the simplicity, frugality and industry which blended well with the sterling goodness and genuine prudence of the great English farm house. The women especially, pleased him much. They formed a strong contrast with anything he met with before. No flattery; no coquetry; no French; no piano! It is impossible to describe the sensation of relief and comfort with which Charles Foster, sick of modern Misses, ascertained that the whole dwelling did not contain a single instrument, except the bassoon on which George Evans was wont, every Sunday at church, to excruciate the ears of the whole congregation. He liked both sisters. Jane's softness and consideration engaged his full esteem; Patty's innocent playfulness suited best his own high spirits and animated conversation. He had known them apart from the first; and indeed denied that the likeness was at all puzzling, or more than usual among sisters; and secretly thought Patty as much prettier than her sister as she was avowedly merrier. In doors and out, he was constantly at her side, and before he had been a month in the house, all the inmates had given Charles Foster as a lever of his young cousin; and she, when rallied on the subject, cried fie! and pish! and pshaw! and wondered how people could talk such nonsense; and liked to have such nonsense talked to her, better than any thing in the world.

Affairs were in this state when, one night, Jane appeared even graver and more thoughtful than usual—and far, far sadder. She sighed deeply; and Patty—for the two sisters shared the same little room—inquired, "What ailed her?"

She burst into tears, while Patty hung over her and soothed her. At length she roused herself by a strong effort, and, turning away from her affectionate comforter, said in a low tone:

"I have a great vexation to-night, Patty. Charles Foster has asked me to marry him!"

"Charles Foster! did you say Charles Foster?" asked poor Patty, trembling, unwilling even to turn her own senses against the evidence of her heart; "Charles Foster!"

"Yes, our cousin, Charles Foster!"

"And you have accepted him?" inquired Patty, in a hoarse voice.

"Oh, no—no—no. Did you think I had forgotten poor Archibald! Besides, I am not the person whom he ought to have asked to marry him, false and heartless as he is. I would not be his wife, cruel, unfeeling, unmanly as his conduct has been! No, not if he would make me queen of England!"

"You refused him, then?"

"No, my father met us suddenly, just as I was recovering from the surprise and indignation that at first struck me dumb. But I shall refuse him most certainly—the false, deceitful, ungrateful villain!"

"Poor father, he will be disappointed. So will mother."

"They will be disappointed, and both angry, but not at my refusal. Oh, how they will despise him," added Jane.

Poor Patty, melted by her sister's sympathy, and touched by an indignation most unusual in that mild and gentle girl, could no longer command her feelings, but threw herself on the bed, in that agony of passion and grief which the first great sorrow seldom fails to excite in a young heart. After a while she again resumed the conversation.

"We must not blame him too severely. Perhaps my vanity made me think his attentions meant more than they really did, and you had all taken up the notion. But you must not speak of him so unkindly. He has done nothing but what is natural. You are so much better and wiser than I, dear Jane! He laughed and talked with me, but felt your goodness; and he was right. I was never worthy of him; and you are; and if it were not for Archibald, I should rejoice from the bottom of my heart," continued Patty, sobbing, "if you would accept—"

But unable to speak her generous wish, she burst into a fresh flow of tears, and the sisters, mutually and strongly affected, wept in each other's arms, and were comforted.

That night Patty cried herself to sleep, but such sleep is not of long duration. Before dawn she was up, and pacing with restless irritability, the dewy grass walk of the orchard and garden. In less than half an hour, a light, elastic step—she knew the sound well—came rapidly behind her; a hand—oh! how often had she thrilled at the touch of that hand! tried to draw hers under her own; while a well known voice addressed her in the softest and tenderest accents.

"Patty, my own sweet Patty, have you thought of what I said to you last night?"

"Said to me?" replied Patty, with bitterness.

"Ay, to be sure, to your own dear self! Do you not remember the question I asked you when your good father—for the first time unwelcome—joined us so suddenly that you had not time to say yes, and will you not say 'yes' now?"

"Mr. Foster," said Patty, with some spirit, "you are under some mistake here.

It was to Jane that you made the proposal last evening, and you are taking me for her this very moment!"

"Mistake you for your sister! Propose to Jane! Incredible! Impossible! You are jesting!"

"Then he mistook Jane for me last night, and he is no deceiver!" thought Patty to herself, as with smiles beaming brightly through her tears, she turned round at his reiterated prayers, and yielded the hand he sought to his pressure.

"He mistook her for me! He that defied us to perplex him!"

Selected Poetry.

THE RAPTURE OF A KISS.

BY ALEXANDER SMITH.

I clasp thy waist, I feel thy bosom's heat;
Thou lovest me into fineness, sweet and dim!
Thou lovest me as a swelling peach,
Full-juiced and mellow, leanness to the taker's reach;
Thy hair is loosened by the kiss you gave,
It flows my shoulders o'er;
Another yet! Oh, as a weary wave
Subsides upon the shore,
My heart, like moon-charmed waters, all unrest;
Yet strong as despair, as weak as tears,
Dust faint upon thy breast!
I feel thy clasping arms—my cheek is wet—
One kiss! sweet, sweet, another yet!

Farmers' Department.

Flour of Bone and Superphosphate.

Bones in their entire state, that is, containing all the gelatine of the periosteum and cells which compose their frame work, and all the fat and earths with which these cells are filled, consist of about thirty-eight per cent. of animal matter, forty-four per cent. of phosphate of lime, three per cent. of carbonate of lime, and about three per cent. of magnesia, soda and other salts, with twelve per cent. of moisture. If a quantity of bones are ground entire, to a fine powder, and placed in a box or other vessel in a warm temperature and slightly moistened, putrefaction will be quickly set up, and ammonia will be rapidly evolved. It is obvious that, in this condition, it would afford a highly stimulating and active manure, and must contribute to the vigorous growth of the stalks, and an abundant crop of grain and seed. Bone meal and flour now in the market, purport to consist of the entire bone reduced to different degrees of fineness.

Could we be always sure that the glue makers and soap makers have not had their share of it, we should consider it the most reliable and valuable of all the manufactured manures.

Bones contain, as we have said, forty-four per cent. of phosphate of lime—Phosphate of lime is almost insoluble. We see bones lying exposed to the weather for years, and only slowly crumbling into the earth. The animal matter has been long since wasted out of them, but the phosphate of lime remains. How can this be rendered soluble, so that it can yield the valuable elements of which it consists to the growing plants? First, by giving to it an additional dose of phosphoric acid, so that this acid shall be in excess; and, secondly, by abstracting a portion of the lime, which amounts to the same thing. Phosphate of lime, as found in bones, is a neutral phosphate, and consists of one part of phosphoric acid, and three parts of lime. When oil of vitriol, or sulphuric acid, is added to ground bone freed from its animal matter, acid unites one part of the lime and forms sulphate of lime or plaster. The remaining phosphate of lime is no longer a neutral phosphate, but an acid phosphate, or as it is called a superphosphate, in which the phosphoric acid predominates. This becomes more soluble, and active in the soil. The mixture of bone with sulphuric acid will then consist of superphosphate of lime and plaster. This is the substance known in the market as superphosphate of lime.—New England Farmer.

Inednotes.

A comedian lent a brother actor two shillings, and when he made a demand for the sum, the debtor turned peevishly from him, and said, "Hang it! I'll pay you to-day in some shape or other." The person good humoredly replied, "I shall be much obliged to you, Tom, to let it be as much like two shillings as you can."

"John," said a traveller to a farmer's boy, who was hoeing in the field, "your corn is very small." "Yes, we planted a small kind." "But it looks dwarfish and yellow." "Yes, we planted the yellow sort." "I mean, you will not have half a crop—do you understand me?" "Oh, yes, I understand; we don't expect to, for we planted on shares."

A gentleman lying on his death-bed, called his coachman, who had been an old servant, and said, "Ah, Tom, I am going a long and rugged journey, worse than ever you drove me." "Oh, dear sir, replied the fellow, (he having been an indifferent master,) "never let that discourage you, for it is all down hill."

$27.60 per day. Agents wanted, ladies and gentlemen in every country in the United States to sell the Ink Powder of the American Ink Company. The powder sells for five cents per package, and will make enough to fill fifty bottles of the size usually retailed at ten cents per bottle. A smart agent can sell a gross of it a day and clear $7.60. The ink can be made from the powder in three minutes in common boiling water. It is a perfect black ink the best in the world. It flows easily, does not corrode the pen a particle, never gums up, is not injured by freezing, and its color will last forever. Every family in America will buy it, as a package will last a family for years, and ink can be made in small quantities as wanted. With each gross we send a thousand circulars, testimonials from clergymen, lawyers, teachers, merchants, commercial colleges, editors, &c., and the agent's name and the right to sell the ink in the county he or she designates. 1. Offered for the same county, the money will be returned free of expense. To make sure one had better designate several counties, either of which he or she will take. Send for trade list and circulars if you dare run the risk of waiting, or send the money for a gross. Letters addressed to the agent, postmaster, collector of the bank, express agents of this city, will show that the business is honorable and squarely conducted.—Risk nothing by sending by mail. MANUFACTURERS AND PROPRIETORS OF THE CELEBRATED

Chamber Furniture.

WE are prepared to offer to dealers and others in want of Painted Chamber Furniture an entirely new and novel article in this line.

Our work is done by a Patent Machine. By this invention the actual veins and fibres of the natural grains are molded from the real wood, from which is impressed a perfect fac-simile of the original, thus reproducing upon any painted or bare wood surface a greater variety of grain, with more rapidity and with natural and more artistic beauty, than can possibly be created by the most skillful hand in any of the modes known.

It copies nature exactly. It grains in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsome and more durable set of Furniture, and at as low a price as can be bought in this city.

Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. Those in want would do well to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere.

OBITUARY.

Passed to Spirit-Life, on the 10th of

Feb. 1866, Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of Joshiah Brigham, Esq., of this town, aged

75 years and 3 months.

Mr. and Mrs. Brigham were intimate friends of John Quincy Adams, and it was at their house that the twelve messages from him were communicated several years since. Mrs. Brigham was one of the most amiable and lovely women I ever met—a kind, affectionate wife, mother and grandmother, purely domestic in her home relations, always industrious and orderly, thus making her home attractive to her family and friends. None knew her but to love her. Her hands and her heart were open to the poor and distressed; and when I saw at her funeral

a poor Irish woman, who told me she had worked for her twenty-five years, and only God could know the great good she had done to the poor, and how they would miss her, I said in my soul, what greater tribute could be paid to her memory than such language from this sincere mourner? "She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and catcheth not the breath of idleness. Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband, also,

and he praiseth her."

Her afflicted husband was unable to leave his bed, and her beautiful remains, covered with flowers by a dear friend of

Each laziness as the most disgusting of all faults, and one that will surely end in hopeless misery; for, depend upon it, none can be so insensible through laziness, as to be, in the end, incapable of suffering—Nature is in the event of a non-payment of her demands, a stern and merciless creditor. Therefore, boys and girls, off jackets and superabundant crinolines, and keep square your account with her.

BOSTON CORRESPONDENCE.

BOSTON, MARCH 8, 1866.
BUSINESS.

There is a marked dulness in spring trade, both here, and as we learn in New York. The occasion is attributed to the dread uncertainty felt by all classes of business men in regard to the future. Some of the causes are apparent; the unsettled condition of financial policy of the Federal Government; the decline of prices; the rush of large amounts of goods to the auction market, and the general "holding off," as it is termed, for better times, and owing to a want of confidence, which is the life of enterprise—the only safe trade appears that only which brings the quickest returns. Gold holds at 133 and a fraction, and the money market is becoming more stringent. Altogether, the business record of the first week in March is any thing but cheerful.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Grand State Ball of Monday evening, at the Boston Theatre, fell short of the hopes of the managers as to net receipts. The great expenses of $20,000, swallowed all the money received, and probably much more; the deficit to be made up by the gettys up of the ball. The Boston Museum is crowded nightly, and the places of public amusement generally are better patronized than we should think they would be. Theatre-going is more fashionable than in former years. The drama, well conducted, is no injury to society.

THE GENERAL COURT.

Among the multitude of petitions that are presented to the Legislature from day to day, are those on the subject of the equalization of bounties. The matter is now fairly before the House, and it seems a difficult subject to settle.

There is evidence now that the eight hours' labor system will not have a corporal's guard, either in the Senate or House, in favor of establishing such system by legislation. We yield to no one in our respect for the rights and interests of the industrial classes. The idea of regulating the prices of labor between the employer and employee, or the prices of commodities in trade, is not in accordance with the genius of our Republican institutions of government.

Messrs. Morse of Cambridge, Jewell of Boston, Adams of Quincy, Carter of Bradford, and Dennis of Boston, have given notice of their intention to move amendments to the Resolutions on the State of the Union and the House granted leave to print them. Mr. Adams, though young in years and in legislation, has become an influential member of the House. He has spoken on several topics that have come before that body, with much ability. In debate, he is sound, fluent, and courteous. Mr. French, the member from Braintree, enters, also, on his first year as a legislator. He is a working member; very efficient on the Committee to which he is assigned, and brings with him favorable antecedents, as well read in legal jurisprudence. The citizens of Braintree appreciate his high moral worth, and his labors for the people, and his labors for popular education. Messrs. Pierce and Fox are the Representatives from Dorchester—both fill their stations with ability. Mr. Pierce may be called a veteran member, although scarce at the meridian of life; he having been several times elected a member from the ancient town of Dorchester. He has much prominence in the House, and will probably be a candidate to succeed the Hon. Ames in Congress. But as your worthy and pleasant Correspondent says, "Our Photographs will continue."

BRAINTREE. The following gentlemen were elected Town Officers, in BRAINTREE on Monday last:

Selectmen, Assessors and Overseers of Poor: N. H. Hunt, Naaman L. White, Wm. F. Locke.

Town Clerk: E. W. Arnold.
Treasurer: Nathaniel Terry.

School Committee: T. E. Deering, for one year; N. L. White for three years. Most of the above are new officers. Messrs. Locke and Arnold re-elections. The appropriations amount to $17,000.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE. We learn that the estate of the late Moses R. Marsh, on Hancock Street in this town, has been purchased by Henry H. Faxon, Esq. Also the shoemakers' shop adjoining the same, which he intends to move to the Barrell lot and fix into a dwelling house.

THE HOME MONTHLY for March, among other good things has an excellent story by Minnie May; three articles with illustrations—Pilgrims of Leyden, attic and cellar and Transatlantic sketches; and a biographical sketch of Captain Morton of Quincy, first published in the PATRIOT. An elegant steel plate, "In the Woods," accompanied by a poem from Mr. Butler adds to the general attractions of the Magazine.

BARGAINS. Our citizens will find it for their interest we think to call at the store of W. Abercrombie. His stock is offered at reduced prices for a few days; and what he says he means. Give him a call.

IRELAND. The crisis which is pending over this unhappy country, has awakened a wide spread sympathy in her behalf. Her friends are moving in every direction, to raise means to aid her, in this, her hour of need and trial. A meeting for this purpose, will be held at the Town Hall this evening, to which a general invitation is extended.

SPRING. We are on the march toward spring, but haven't overtaken it yet. There is too much winter in the skies, which has to be disposed of, before spring, in earnest, will make its appearance.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

We copy the following Patriotic notices from our Exchanges.

THE Quincy Patriot has been enlarged to the size of our own paper, and looks and reads well. Quincy merchants understand the advantages of advertising.—Middleboro' Gazette

It begins its thirtieth year with a new dress and greatly enlarged in size, making it a valuable and attractive sheet.—Boston Traveller.

THE Quincy Patriot is an enterprising paper in business directions, and has an excellent local patronage, which has so multiplied of late, as to make the increase of its size a necessity.—Roxbury Journal.

One of our oldest suburban papers begins its thirtieth year with a new dress.—Boston Journal.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT. This well conducted paper comes to us enlarged and otherwise greatly improved. This is an evidence of prosperity which we are happy to see. This paper is carried on by Mrs. Elizabeth Green, widow of the former proprietor. She is ably seconded in her efforts by Mr. Prescott, who has charge of the office.—Hingham Journal.

It appeared in a new dress, and engaged form, which is a great improvement over its former issues. We wish our neighbor much success.—Norfolk Register.

It appeared in a new and neat dress.—Dedham Gazette.

One of our oldest and most valued country exchanges, comes to us considerably enlarged in its dimensions, and greatly improved in its general appearance. The Patriot is but three years our junior, and has ever been managed with peculiar tact and ability, and we are pleased to see this mark of its prosperity. It deserves a liberal patronage.—Barnstable Patriot.

The Quincy public should see to it that this enterprise is liberally sustained and rewarded.—Bridgewater Gazette.

A CONVENTION. A Peace Convention will be held in Boston on Wednesday next, March 14th, and everybody is invited to attend. "Irrespective of sex, color, creed, nationality or residence."

FAST DAY. His Excellency Governor Bullock with the advice of the Executive Council, has appointed Thursday, April 5th, as the day for the annual Fast in this Commonwealth.

At a meeting of the new Board of Selectmen, held on Tuesday last, Col. Adams was re-elected Chairman, but declined serving, and Ensign S. Fellows, was elected.

MARCH MEETING passed off with us very pleasantly. There was considerable important business transacted, as will be seen by reference to our columns. The election for town officers was spirited; the "Ins" remain in—and the "Outs," still live—and will have to remain out, until a more favorable day comes round.

Rev. James P. Lane, who recently obtained his dismission from the society over which he was settled in East Weymouth, has received a unanimous call to become pastor of the Free Church, Andover.

The richest individual in this State is a boy, the son of the late Joshua Sears, of Boston. The estate on the death of his father, was appraised at $1,800,000. By profitable investments, mostly in real estate in Boston, the property has nearly doubled in the hands of the Trustees, and now reaches an aggregate of over four millions!

We call the attention to the advertisement of the "Ames Plow Co." the most extensive dealers in Agricultural Implements and Machines in New England. They occupy the immense halls over Quincy Market, and their place is a museum of all articles needed by the farmer, well worth a visit from any one spending a few days in Boston.

AUCTION!

COURT OF INSOLVENCY.
BEFORE the Hon. GEO. WHITE, Judge of Probate and Insolvency in and for the said County of Norfolk.

The THIRD meeting of the Creditors of LYMAN R. RUGLES, of Dorchester, of the County of Norfolk, an Insolvent Debtor, will be held at the Court of Insolvency, at the Insolvency Court Room, in Roxbury, in said County on the FIRST THURSDAY of June next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, at which meeting creditors may prove their claims, and the account of the Assignee will be presented and Creditors may appear and object to the allowance thereof.

A. W. BOARDMAN, Assignee.
Quincy, Mar. 10.

WEST ROXBURY TRAGEDY. The public will be rejoiced to hear that the perpetrator of one of the most fiendish outrages and murders ever committed by man—that of the murder of Isabella and John Joyce at West Roxbury on the 12th of June, 1865, which created such intense excitement at the time of its occurrence—has at last been discovered and is now in safe custody.

It appears that the murderer broke into the house of Mr. Brown in Gardner Mass., and was arrested and imprisoned at Fitchburg jail until the 24th of Aug. when he was conveyed to Charlestown State Prison where he owned the horrid deed of murdering the Joyce children.

He was when four years old, an inmate of an asylum, thought to have been situated on Tremont Street Boston, and was named Charles Scott. He states that his father was a Spaniard and his mother an American, but nothing is known of the existence of either of his parents. His real name, he says, is Rolla Ampudia. In his fifth year he was taken by Mr. Aaron Dodge of Hamilton, Essex county, and adopted as his own child. He lived in Mr. Dodge's family until 13 years of age and then went to sea. Since that time he has been roaming over sea and land.

RETURNED. James A. McLellan, has returned from his trip to Chicago, and we are sorry to say, has decided to close out his stock of goods in this place, and start in business in that city. He offers his goods at cost, as will be seen by a notice in another column. Here is a chance for bargains sure.

MAY FESTIVAL. The Sunday School Teachers' Association of the Unitarian Church in this place, propose holding a May Festival for the purpose of raising funds toward the construction of a Sunday School Chapel and the lighting of the Church.

GUNNING WITH PLEASURE. We learn that Wm. Gardner Prescott of this town, shot one day this week, twenty wild ducks on one of the islands in the harbor. This is the largest number we believe ever killed by any of our citizens in one day.

The town of Bridgewater was added last Monday to the list of towns in this State which have abolished the district system.

Cacciola's Hair Restorer Gray Hair to its original color, removes Dandruff and all impurities, and preserves the hair from premature death. Containing nothing injurious, it is unsurpassed for dressing the hair, promoting a luxuriant growth, and leaving it soft and glossy. For Sale by all Druggists. Price, one dollar a bottle. Depot, No. 72 William Street, N. Y. Jan 7, 1866

Special Notices.

H. G. C. The next party of the course being given by the Hancock Glee Club, will take place on FRIDAY EVENING, March 10th, on which occasion we hope to see all our friends present.

ADMINISTRIX'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

PURSUANT to License of the Probate Court for the County of Norfolk, will be sold at Public Auction, on MONDAY, March 26, A. D. 1866, at 2 o'clock P. M., on the premises—

All the right and title which the estate of NATHANIEL NASH, late of Quincy, deceased, has in and to a lot of land with the buildings thereon, lately situated in said Quincy, on Winter Street, so called, containing one and three quarter acres more or less, and being the same premises which were conveyed to said Nash, by Nathaniel Newcomb by his deed dated Oct. 1, 1856 and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 249, fol. 182, to which reference is hereby made for a more particular description of the premises.

The widow's interest will be sold at the same time and place.

Particulars and terms made known at the sale.

POINT LECTURES. The closing lecture of the course, by Rev. J. T. Burrell, of Christ Church, Boston, gave great satisfaction to all present, and especially to the older residents of the Point, to whom his voice re-called associations of days "Long since," when as pastor and preacher he was wont to lead them in the paths of duty and religion; his lecture to such persons having the double charm of its own merit, and of the renewed pledge which it gave of his interest in them and their welfare.

The proper caring for the physical nature; energetic and never tiring labor for the success of truth and right; integrity of purpose and action; the cultivation of the social affections through the influence of a well ordered marriage relation, and a "home"; and above all, the necessity for an earnest, never-faltering faith, were urged as the sure means for the attainment of a complete "manhood."

This series of lectures thus closed has been a source of pleasure, and it is hoped of profit as well, to those who have listened thereto.

It is we believe the intention, on next Thursday evening, to have a Concert of miscellaneous music, given by the "Choral Society," followed by a Levee, both being for the benefit of the religious society worshipping at the Point.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT. A workman at the ledge of Messrs. Barker & Wright, in this town, completed a drill on Saturday last and ignited the fuse, but for the want of air or some other cause went out. Mr. Edward Kane undertook the dangerous task of drilling around the fuse to remove it and while so engaged a spark ignited the fuse, causing an instantaneous explosion, and blowing the unfortunate man to pieces. He leaves a wife in feeble health, and one child to mourn his sad fate. His mutilated remains were gathered together and buried on Sunday.

The Montreal morning papers of March 8th, say that last night, orders were received by the militia authorities to call out 10,000 volunteers, within 24 hours, and that guards were stationed at the armories and everything put in a state of defence.

We would call the attention of our readers to a sale of cows, horses, wagons, harnesses, &c., at the residence of John Mackenzie, Quincy Point, on Thursday next. For full particulars see notice in to-day's paper.

THE ENTERTAINMENT. The performance given by the Progressive Lyceum, at Mariposa Hall, on Thursday evening, was largely attended. The entertainment was well conducted and everything passed off pleasantly—all who took part did it to perfection.

Selected Poetry.

A THOUGHT.

If but a single thought I drop
Into a weary ear,
It may receive the spark of hope,
And the depending cheer.
A word may save where volumes fail,
If spoken from the heart;
And with the dying soul prevail,
And life and strength impart.
Ye all can speak a gentle word,
To bless the weak and low;
And o'er life's dark and dreary road
Sweet flowers and sunshine throw.

Farmers' Department.

MARCH ON THE FARM.

Here we are at the beginning of March. Spring will soon be upon us, and leave us little time to think. It's best to knock round and do up some things that spring's work will give us no time for by-and-by. How about those caterpillars' eggs that we told you about last spring? Have you taken any pains to look for them? Can't find them, eh? Look near the ends of the twigs for little round brackets of eggs, which seem to be glued on, as they actually are. These will bring out a swarm of tent caterpillars that will make bad work of your apple trees early in May. On small trees, in a young orchard, it is less work to look after, and remove them in this form than it is to fight them after they are hatched.

The eggs of the canker-worm, which we also illustrated a year ago, are found near the departure of the smaller branches, in little round patches. They look very similar to those of the caterpillar, but do not extend in brackets around the twig. There is little difficulty in finding and removing them on small trees that are infested with these insects.

A good many of the canker-worms were left in the ground unhatched last fall. It will be time for them to come out of the ground in about ten days, and begin to ascend. If you protected your trees last October and November, it will be necessary to do it again for the last half of March, and we think it will pay.

If you sowed down grass seed last fall, it will be advisable to sow on a little clover seed towards the middle of the month, and it is convenient to sow it on the late, light snows, as it can be sown more evenly. It is very sure to take well sown in this way, both red and Dutch clover, neither of which do very well when sown in the fall along the grasses.

Where manure was got out and dumped in heaps in the fall or winter, and intended for top-dressing, it may now be spread, or as soon as the frost is out, as it will be soon. We prefer to spread directly from the cart, as it saves work, and avoids a multitude of uneven patches in the field, but many tip up in heaps and leave it till spring to spread.

Have your work well planned and laid out, so that everything shall come up to time as nearly as possible. Keep ahead of it. It's a great deal pleasanter to be ready to begin haying in June, than to be compelled to let it drag through July.

We are going to have a muddy spring.—Ploughman.

Prepare a system of spots and reservoirs in your barns and out-houses for the preservation of the liquid voidings of your domestic animals of all kinds.—This is an article of great efficiency in promoting the growth of plants. If allowed to stand until it becomes putrid, the effects are more immediate than that of any other stimulant, not even excepting soap-suds. When applied to plants it tends to preserve them from the attacks of insects and also at the same time, imparts new energy to the circulatory and assimilating system. No article is more desirable for irrigating gardens. It should be saved in large quantities.

SCARCITY OF COWS. The dairymen who have been prospecting for cows for next season's use, report a bare market and high prices. Any little scrub of a heifer coming in in the spring will command $50, while fair cows figure up to $60 and $70 each. Farmers have plenty of feed and great faith in the future of the dairy business.—Ohio Farmer.

Inedotes.

"Does my son William, that's in the army get plenty to eat?" asked an old lady of a recruiting sergeant.
"He gets plenty," was the laconic reply.

"Bless his heart, then, I know he'll have it if he can see it; he always would at home."

A gallant was lately sitting beside his beloved, and being unable to think of anything to say, asked her why she was like a tailor?

"I don't know," said she with a pouting lip, "unless it's because I'm sitting beside a goose."

The way the little 2-40 tow-head got the "domine," was after this fashion—"James, what person is man, in the sentence, 'The man is drunk?'" "Don't know, sir."

"Decline it and see."

"First person I am drunk, second person you are drunk, third person he, or the man is drunk."

"That'll do, but in future I would advise you not to emphasize so strongly on the second person singular, or I might play lives against the side of your head with my finger!"

"Jane, has that surly fellow cleared off the snow from the pavement?" "Yes, Sir." "Did he clear it off with alacrity, Jane?" "No, Sir; with a shovel."

Reports to be sent in on or before the 1st
day of December, 1866, to William L. Bradley, Boston, containing description of soil, mode of cultivation, quantity of Super-Phosphate of Lime used, of whom purchased, and whether with or without bar-yard manure, every report to be certified to by some citizen of integrity of the town where made: these reports
when in, will be referred to a Committee of three competent, disinterested gentlemen,
whose duty it shall be to award said premiums
after examining the reports; the premiums to be paid on the 1st day of January, 1867.

To avoid any possible chemical error in the manufacture of my Fertilizers, I have made arrangements with the highest chemical talent,
to aid me in this important department, and not a single ton of Phosphate or Tobacco Fertilizer will be allowed to go to market until it has been shipped and passed inspection by actual analysis.

THE ABOVE NAMED FERTILIZERS CAN BE PURCHASED FROM RELIABLE DEALERS
THROUGHOUT NEW ENGLAND.

Pamphlets containing testimonials and directions for using Super-Phosphate of Lime
can be had, free of charge, by addressing the manufacturer or dealer; also, Bradley's Manual for growing Tobacco will be sent free to any grower of the weed, by asking for it by mail.

[From Ex-governor Holbrook, of Vermont:]
"Bradley's XL, Nov. 28, 1865.
Wm. L. BRADLEY, Esq.—Dear Sir: For several years past, I have annually used your Super-Phosphate of Lime. In field cultivation, I have used it extensively for corn, and
potatoes; putting a table-spoonful in each hill;
and also, when sowing land to grass, with a grain crop, sowing from 250 to 300 pounds per acre, broadcast.

The healthy growth, and abundant crop
of grain, and the superb catch of grass, in each instance resulting from the broadcast use of the Super-Phosphate, have paid well for its application; when applied in the hill, for corn,
it hastens the crop, giving it a deep green
color and luxuriant growth.

In the garden, I use the Super-Phosphate
with marked success, for peas, beans, beets, and other roots, sweet corn, early potatoes,
cabbages, &c., applying it in the hill or drill,
or broadcast on the garden beds. Its effects are striking and excellent, and particularly valuable on all such vegetables as one may desire
to force along to early maturity.

I should be quite unwilling to dispense with the Super-phosphate, either in the garden or field.

I should state that manure is generally applied broadcast to the land, in addition to the use of the Super-Phosphate, excepting in the case of stocking to grass, when Super-Phosphate is sown broadcast on all such lands as are shy about taking a good catch of grass.

Very truly yours,
FREDERICK HOLBROOK.

WHAT
U. O.

The above enigma should be studied out and practised by all who wish to begin the year aright. That no one may explanation: "Hand over what you owe!"

An exchange truly says that "you may insert a thousand excellent things in a newspaper, and never hear a word of approbation from its readers; but just let a line or two not suited to taste slip in, (though by accident), and you will be sure to hear of it." There is more trouble in keeping a newspaper free from an objectionable thing than filling it twice over.

"How strange it is," said a lady,
"that fashionable parties should be called rouls! Formerly, rout signified the defeat of an army, and when the soldiers were put to flight or to the sword, it was said they were routed." This title has some propriety, too, said a clergyman, "for by these meetings whole families are frequently routed out of house and home."

"The horse is not an affectionate animal; he don't seem to care about his master much. We have seen one attached to a wagon, though.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
LINES

Respectfully addressed to our lately returned veterans, whose influence rightly directed, no government will venture to disregard.

[At the 4th of July Celebration, to which the veteran soldiers of 1812-15 were invited, I noticed several who were or had been, inmates of the almshouse, worthy old gentlemen, nearly, or quite, blind.] In conversation with them, I found that they still hoped to receive a pension from government, but if it is delayed much longer, they will be beyond the reach of their Country's gratitude,
"where the weary are at rest."

Look not to Congress for reward,
Or from their right expect,
You've suffered them to disregard,
And treat with cold neglect,
The men who fifty years ago
In Freedom's battles fought;
Who bravely triumphed o'er your foe,
And patriot lessons taught.

Where are they now, those veterans old,
Whose lives so long are spared?
Where are they? must the tale be told
How these old heroes fared?
Look to your almshouse, and there
Full many you will find:
Old wrecks, bowed down with grief and care;
The deaf, the lame, the blind.

Some toiling with their feeble hands,
To earn their scanty bread,
The relics of those patriot bands,
Who for your vintage bled.

Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled.

Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled.

Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled.

Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled,
Who for your vintage bled,

the top step. Mr. Sumner saw him, and for the only time that day removed his hat. The crowd cheered the act, and turning to Garrison, cheered him long and loudly.

About the 20th of December last, Mr. Garrison placed in type with his own hands, the Proclamation of the Secretary of State, that the amendments to the Constitution, prohibiting slavery, had been ratified by the requisite number of States. The next week Mr. Garrison issued the last number of the Liberator, it being the completion of its thirty-fifth year. The entire set, thirty-five volumes, will be bound and placed in the Library of Harvard College—making a work of great interest, and help to the future historian of the overthrow of slavery in this country. In the last number, Mr. Garrison said, "I began the publication of the Liberator without a subscriber; and end it—gives me unalloyed satisfaction to say—without a farthing as the pecuniary result of the patronage extended to it during thirty-five years of unremitted labor." Although Mr. Garrison was denounced as an infidel by the pro-slavery church, and a fanatic by the people, yet he drew around him some of the choice spirits of the civilized world. George Thompson said, "taking the land of that young man in the streets of London thirty years ago, changed the whole course of my life." John G. Whittier, in a letter to Mr. Garrison in 1863, said, "I cannot be sufficiently thankful to the Divine Providence, which in a great measure through thy instrumentality, turned me so early away from what Roger Williams calls 'the world's great trinity, pleasure, profit and honor,' to take sides with the poor and oppressed." Rev. Samuel J. May, of Syracuse, said the "greatest event in my moral and spiritual life occurred on the evening when I first heard of your friend Mr. Garrison. I was so impressed by his words that a resolution was formed in my soul from that moment to dedicate myself to the cause of the slave." Many other distinguished men have expressed themselves in a similar manner. The lamented Dr. Follen was his early friend and confidant.

The following anecdote, written in 1853, illustrates his faith in God for the final overthrow of slavery:

"Mr. Garrison while travelling the past summer, met, at Niagara Falls, a slaveholder from Florida; an intelligent and gentlemanlike man, who had had a large opportunity from official sources to obtain perfect acquaintance with the game of American politics, as played by its Southern winners, and who was anxious to exchange ideas with him on the great national question of slavery—a subject, for different reasons, very interesting to both. The slaveholder explained, to his own complete satisfaction, the entire hopelessness of the work to which the Northern Abolitionists had addressed themselves. He conclusively showed how successful, thus far, the Southern slavery extension doctrine had been, how it was yet to be acted out in the cases of Mexico and Cuba; how the carrying trade and new markets for her manufactures were quite sufficient to bribe whatever spirit of opposition might yet remain in the North; what were the considerations that should secure the continuance of England; and finished by triumphantly exclaiming, 'You are all bought up in advance.'"

"True!" said Mr. Garrison; "but there is one circumstance you have not taken into account; you forget that there is a God. The gentleman paused for a moment, and then said, good humoredly, for he had not been defending the morality of slavery or any of its sequences, that 'that was certainly very true, but that so few people now-a-days seemed to take cognizance of the same, it was no wonder he had omitted it.'"

I cannot better close his article than by the following selection from an article written by Edmund Quincy, Esq.

"Whenever in the course of events the fulness of time has come when a great change is to take place in the condition of a nation or of the world, that very state of things creates or summons the man who is to initiate the revolution. The revolution is not due to the man. He could not refuse to obey the divine or human necessity which compelled him perhaps reluctantly to his office of leadership. But without him the revolution would have come to pass in another shape and with different concomitants. The Reformation would have occurred had Luther never been born; and our Revolution, if James Otis had died in his cradle. So slavery would have been abolished without Garrison. But in this instance, as in others, Divine Providence, on the omnipotence of events, made, or found, the man for the hour. All the mental and moral qualities of Mr. Garrison were precisely those demanded by the task. A deeply religious nature, without a shade of fanaticism, a clear perception of duty, and a devotion to it which never conceived the possibility of disobedience to its dictates; an enthusiasm that never flagged—tempered by a practical common sense, that next to never made a mistake; a sagacity as to measures that was never at fault; and a penetration into men that was seldom deceived at all—and never long; and above all, an absolute superiority to the consequences of his course, to his safety, his reputation, or his worldly condition. These were among the essential qualities he possessed for his work, and without which he could not have done it."

SATURDAY, MARCH 17, 1866.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

FIRE. An old barn, slaughter house, shed, &c., situated on Granite street and belonging to the estate of the late Solomon Nightingale, was destroyed by fire about twelve o'clock on Sunday night last. There were four tons of English hay in the buildings belonging to George H. Locke, Esq.; also some hay belonging to Jonathan Jameson, Esq., and wagons, posts and farming utensils owned by Mr. Jeremiah Nightingale, which were burnt with the buildings. There was a small insurance on the barn at the Dedham office. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

ROBBERY. We learn that the residence of George Harvey Field in this town, was entered on Wednesday night last, and a gold watch and chain was stolen from his sleeping apartment, while he was enjoying "Nature's sweet restorer." The rogue removed a square of glass and succeeded in opening the window which gave him free ingress.

SCHOOL DISTRICT MEETINGS. Notices have been issued to the citizens of the South and West Districts to appear at the Grammar School Houses in said districts, on Friday evening next, to choose Prudential Committees and such other officers as may properly come before them. Also, Circulars are to be issued to-day calling a meeting in the Centre district on Monday evening, March 26th.

VALUABLE PROPERTY AT AUCTION. Some of the best property in Quincy is advertised for sale on Saturday next, to the highest bidder. The building occupied by many years by Geo. L. Gill, Esq., and others; and the one adjoining occupied by Messrs Lombard & Nightingale. This will give a rare chance for good investment in real estate.

PASTORAL. It was unanimously voted at a recent parish meeting of the members of the Universalist Society in this town, to engage the services of the Rev. Mr. Aldrich as pastor for the ensuing year. Also, to return to the old custom of having two services each Sabbath, after the first of April.

We also learn that it was the unanimous vote of the Unitarian Society, at a parish meeting held on Monday last, to secure the labors of the Rev. J. D. Wells, for the ensuing year.

SPRING HAS at last dawned upon us, and we are now looking forward for pleasant weather and green fields.

Rev. Henry L. Chase of Carver, preaches to-morrow at Hancock Street Church.

CLOTHES WRINGER. We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the Universal Clothes Wringer with cog wheels which will be found advertised in our columns to-day. It was awarded the First Premium over all others as the best Family Wringer at the great Fair held in Boston last Summer by the Mass. Charitable Mechanics' Association and at the American Institute in New York City. Also in the State Fairs of New York, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Iowa, Wisconsin, and at most of the County and Institute Fairs throughout the country. This Wringer is acknowledged, we believe, to be the most desirable article of the kind now in use; and we would advise those about purchasing to call on the Agent and examine.

THE 47TH ANNIVERSARY OF "A REPUBLICAN INSTITUTION" was celebrated on the 3d inst., at the Parker House, Boston.

Business over, dinner was enlivened by speeches and sentiments from most of the gentlemen present; eloquent and touching tributes were paid to several members who had died during the year, by Jeffrey R. Brackett, of this town, Andrew J. Lord, and William Parkman, the former closing with these lines:

THE WREATH, THE SHIELD AND THE ANCHOR.

A Wreath for the past, made of cypress and yew,
Nor blush, if upon it fall sparkles like dew,
For those who have left us, passed onward—
alone—
And laid down their palms by the emerald throne.

For years they have walked at the head of our ranks,
Their duties fulfilling and winning our thanks;
The beds where some sleep are as yet lightly rested.

Just shield the snow that bore some of their rest,
A shield for the present, our race is not run,
With many the conflict is scarcely begun;
Then up with our banner on high let it wave,
For God and our Country where battle the brave.

But not on the tented field, reddening with gore,
The call is for council, for reason and lore;
Where wrongs are forgotten, where statesmen strike hands—
In restoring their States to original bands.

For the future an Anchor, let prejudice cease,
And passions give way to the precepts of peace;
As the waves upon Galilee yielded their will
To the voice of the Master that bade them be still.

That power, whose purpose no mortal can trace,
In the height of the storm put our pilot in place;
For our President then, our glances we'll fill,
And give him our cheers with a hearty good will.

BOSTON CORRESPONDENCE.

THE PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS.

BOSTON, MARCH 15, 1866.

At the present moment, there seems a lull of the antagonisms between the most potent functionaries. If advice from Washington are true, the President remains firm, and we believe honest in his views on Reconstruction; that there is now sufficient evidence of loyalty with the masses in the late seceding States to justify the admission of their Representatives in Congress; and thus, with many of his late supporters, is the head and front of his offending. The President should not be abandoned by the union republican party for difference of opinion on an abstract political principle. In all other things he harmonizes with the union party. He retains the Cabinet of the lamented ex-President Lincoln, and has ratified his appointments to office. He is a friend, and a tried one, of loyalty, freedom, and equal rights to all. Congress, too, has its legitimate rights as to the power and expediency of admitting the present Representatives to that body from the late rebel States. A majority of its members believe that the South is not now prepared for admission to the Union, judging from the disloyal spirit that manifests itself in rapine, carelessness, and disregard to the General Government—that more evidence is necessary of their readiness to repudiate the rebel debt, and a stronger pledge than has yet been offered, to pay their share of the National debt; the disfranchisement of all rebels from office—both in their respective States and to Congress; and above all, the settlement of the right of suffrage that shall be of a uniform nationality. The problem of reconstruction, once thought to be easy, grows more difficult to solve, as the subject is considered. The union of the thirteen original States in 1789, was formed by a spirit of conciliation, else it never would have been formed; and the present proposed re-union must be culminated by the same spirit of patriotism and compromise that inspired the hearts of our fathers. We have faith in the President; we have faith in Congress; that the glorious example of the founders of our Federal Government will be followed in the same sentiment of compromise, resulting if possible, in a more perfect integration than ever existed before. We wish to see no warfare between the President and Congress; both are loyal, and should aim at the great end, the restoration of the States within the folds of perpetual union, on the broad basis of equal and exact justice to all who bear the human form.

FREE LIBRARY IN BRAintree. An offer was made a short time since, by General Sylvanus Thayer, of the sum of ten thousand dollars, to the town of Braintree, the income thereof to be devoted to the purchase of books for a free library for the town, on the conditions that the town would appropriate an equal sum for the erection of a fire-proof library building. The offer was accepted at the town meeting on the 5th inst., and the appropriation made.

COTTON. The Southern Bank Note Reporter published at Mobile predicts a large cotton crop. It estimates the product of the coming season at no less than two million bales, and thinks it will probably exceed that amount.

QUICK AS LIGHTNING. A telegram was sent to Washington from Boston, delivered, and an answer received in just seven minutes, one day last week.

A MONSTER FARM. The farm of M. L. Sullivan of Champaign County Illinois, consisting of 70,000 acres, 23,000 of which are under good fence and in active cultivation; it is said to be the largest farm in the world. Much of the work is done by machinery. He drives his posts by horse power, cultivates his corn by machinery, ditches, sows and plants by machinery, and so on. Mr. S. gives employment to two hundred horses, and a large number of oxen.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Congress is busy; the Reciprocity Bill is defeated. The Indemnity scheme of the Mexican Bonds is in the hands of the Committee on Foreign Relations. It is not worthy of a moment's thought by Congress. The Fenian movement is attracting great attention at Washington. The British Minister and Mr. Seward have considered the subject in relation to the duty in this matter of our Government under the neutrality laws. The Boston Traveller of last evening, has a long article on the "Progress of Fenianism." It argues that it has become now a great power in the world. That the Fraternity contains nearly all of the male population in Ireland, and about all the men of Irish blood in America. But while admitting the great strength and unity of sentiment in the Irish, it relapses into cloud and doubt as to the practicability of Irish independence. But Mr. Traveller we shall see; and beg you will not be frightened. The hearts of good men of all civilized nations are in sympathy with Ireland in her wrongs by Great Britain. God speed the time when the ancient Emerald Isle shall once more take her place among the sisterhood of nations, and the Irishmen look upon the banner of his nation. All proposed Constitutional amendments by the present Congress so far, have been defeated. In Committee of the Whole of the Lower House of Congress on Tuesday, General Banks of Massachusetts, made an able, statesmanlike and original speech in favor of an appropriation by Congress of $100,000 to represent America in Paris Fair of 1867. He was listened to with profound attention, and warmly congratulated at the close of his remarks. Colorado fails by the action of the United States Senate to be admitted for the present as a State.

In the State Legislature on Tuesday, a bill was reported to apportion and readjust the State Tax the year of $3,000,000. This bill assesses on Quincy $1,910; last year, if we remember right, it was $18,659. Now putting the $40,000 Town tax, and on the supposition that the County tax of last year, $2543, and overpayments, $2027 will be the same this year, the whole tax to be assessed will be $56,470, being about $3000 more than last year, and will carry the rate of Quincy tax for 1866 at $14.00 per thousand dollars; last year it being $13.00 on every thousand dollars. These calculations may not be correct. Other matters of importance are before the Senate and House, to which we may refer next week.

THE FENIANS. The meeting that was called by this Order at the Town Hall on Saturday evening last, was largely responded to by the friends and sympathizers of down-trodden and unhappy Ireland. This movement, in her behalf, which was inaugurated scarcely a twelve month since, appears to be daily growing in strength and importance, and commanding the serious attention of the civilized world. The speaker on this occasion, Mr. James McDermott, of New York, was felicitous in his remarks, and when he touched on Ireland's wrongs, the tyranny of her oppressors, and the rising star of her national Independence, it brought out the pent up feelings of the audience, in a manner not to be mistaken. A number of bonds of the Irish Republic were sold, and other measures adopted to raise means to aid this gallant people in the great work in which they are engaged.

DORCHESTER FINANCES. The entire expenditures of the town of Dorchester last year amounted to $416,617 75, leaving a balance in the treasury of $41,656 33, about the same as the previous year. The amount of taxes assessed was $209,924, of which $56,118 was State tax, $6,484 94 County, and $143,080 Town tax. Town debt 1st of Feb. $116,000; reduced during the year from $177,600 00. Expenditure—Schools, $28,39 37; Highways, $11,885 72; Poor, about $7000; Fire department, $3,958 57; Salaries, $3,500; Lighting streets, $3,026 51; Police and Watch, $766 59; incidental expenses, $7,671 82; extraordinary do, $7,055 52; paid families of volunteers, $12,550; instalments and interest, $1,662 40 1/4; recurring expenses, $5,169 27. Cash paid for recurring expenses in 1864 and 1865, $38,054 73; unexpended balance of appropriation, $10,820 10. Value of town property, $186,733 56. Cash on hand and due, $70,886 31.

The town has a valuation of $4,671,900 in personal estate; $3,118,100 real estate, total, $7,790,000. Rate of taxation, $16 per $100; acres of land, 6,812 1/2; dwellings, 1993; population 1st of May, 1865, 20,309. Births, 280; marriages, 101; deaths, 292. Among the deaths in the town for the year, was one, Patrick Ward, 102 years of age; two between 90 and 100.

Summary Intelligence.

The suspension Bridge to be thrown across the Ohio river from Cincinnati to Covington Kentucky, it is said will be the longest in the world. The total length of its span is 3171 feet. This, we believe, is about three times the length of the great bridge over the Niagara river just below the falls, and more than five hundred feet longer than the bridge over Menai Straits in Great Britain.

The Watchman and Reflector says: "The Jews of Boston have a population of about 1800. They have four synagogues, each bearing a distinct name. These are situated in Warren, Pleasant, and Castle streets and Harrison Avenue. The largest congregation is that in Warren street."

The colleges of New England, fourteen in number, contain in this year about 2500 under graduates, of whom from one third to one half are professors of religion of different denominations. This is an increase of some 250 over last year, but less by some 200 or more than in the years just preceding the war.

Some ladies were talking about the size and style of clothing to be forwarded for a fair. One said: Now I think we ought to make a pretty lot of baby clothes, for you know there's no danger of their getting out of use.

The value of the presents received by Gen. Grant, consisting of houses, cash, books, swords and equipments, and horses amounts to $170,000.

A joint stock Company, with $50,000 capital is being formed in Buffalo, to establish an institution to treat diseases by compressed air. The theory is that the air being compressed to one half its volume, the patient inhales double the amounts of oxygen, by means of which a cure of the disease is effected.

Chamber Furniture.

WE are prepared to offer to dealers and

others in want of Painted Chamber

Furniture an entirely new and novel article in that line. Our work is done by a Patent Machine-grained process, the actual veins

and fibres of the natural grains are molded

from the real wood, from which is impressed

a perfect fac-simile of the original, thus repro-

ducing upon any painted or bare wood surface

a greater variety of grains, with more rapidity

and with natural and more artistic beauty, than

can possibly be created by the most skillful

hand in any of the old modes known. It copies nature exactly. It grains in oil, thereby giving an extra body of paint, which is not gained in the old method of graining. By this mode we are enabled to sell a handsome and more durable set of Furniture, and at less a price as can be bought in the city. Our Machine-grained Furniture, in spite of all opposition, is being rapidly introduced into all the States. Those in want would do well to call

SUNSHINE.

There are times of deepest sorrow,
When the heart feels lone and sad;
Times when memory's spell of magic
Have in gloom the spirit laid,
Wouldst thou have a world all potent
To illumine life's darkest night;
Thou the thought that e'er in nature
Darkest hours precede the light.

When the world, cold, dark and selfish,
Frowns upon the feeble flame,
Lighted from the torch of genius,
When his kindled round thy name;
When thy fondest hopes are blighted,
And thy dearest prospects fade,
Think on lone one sacred and bright,
Sunshine ever follows shade.

Farmers' Department.

RAISING VEGETABLES.

From a long editorial article on this subject in the New England Farmer, an excellent Agricultural paper, published at No. 34 Merchants Row, Boston, we extract the following:—

"Having been repeatedly asked for information in regard to the management of the farms or gardens near Boston, on which vegetables are grown for market, we propose to devote the present article to this subject; but with little expectation that we shall be able to 'let the cat out of the bag' to the entire satisfaction of those for whom we write.

"The raising and marketing of 'garden truck,' as it is called in some sections, is a business or trade that, like all other professions and handicrafts, must be learned by practical experience or apprenticeship—a good old word that we are afraid is going out of fashion with us.

"We learn from those now engaged in raising vegetables, that in entering upon this business one of the first items of expense to be incurred in addition to the usual equipments of the farm, is for 'glass,' for hot beds; and one of the first trades to learn is their proper management. One, who is now out of the business, said that, if he were to engage in it again, he should expend at least $1000 for glass, to begin with, as the demand for vegetables grown in this way is increasing. Another farmer said a person might begin, in a small way, with fifty sashes, costing $5 per sash, or $250.—Tomatoes, lettuce, early cabbages, &c. must be started in hot beds. For tomatoes, they 'make up the bed,' about Feb. 20th, for lettuce and early cabbages, the first of March will answer.

"An intelligent farmer tells us that the great thing is manure—the land must be full of it—the whole farm a hot bed. The more manure the more profit.

"Taking this individual farmer for a guide, we will go over a very common process of preparing a field or 'patch' for the growth of vegetables.

"We will suppose a piece of mowing ground of suitable soil—these market gardeners have a keen eye for the rich spots—which is so far run out as not to produce a profitable crop of hay. As early in the fall as convenient, let it be 'broken up' and let the plow run as deep as previous cultivation and the size of your manure heap will allow. The freezings and thawings of the winter season will do their part in the desired operation. In the spring cross-plow and harrow thoroughly. That word 'thoroughly' applied to these operations, common upon the farm, has a new meaning in market gardening, which is a part of the trade. This done, spread on your manure liberally—go it blind, without regard to cost—not less, certainly than ten cords from the horse stable, and ten loads of night soil to an acre.

"What, $170 worth?"

"We told you not to count the cost. Now go to work, and spread, plow, cultivate and harrow it in—and, remember, do it thoroughly."

"Here we will grow cabbages the first year. By turning two furrows against each other we will form ridges from two to three and a half feet apart, upon which after being raked off, the seed is to be planted, some dozen or more in a hill, two and a half feet apart. The ground must be kept clean of weeds and the plants thinned out. After harvesting the land should be plowed in the fall.

"Next year the crop will be squashes. Not less than six cords of manure must be applied—more, if it can be obtained. The land to be plowed and harrowed in the spring, the same as was done the previous year. Two-thirds of the manure to be spread broadcast, and worked into the soil, the other third to be reserved for the hill. Rows eight feet apart, and hills six feet asunder, plenty of seed in each.

"Fight the bugs with plaster, and the weeds with the hoe or in some other, or any other way, so that the bugs shall not eat up the squashes, nor the weeds take the strength of the manure.

"Our field is now in fair—not high—only fair condition for growing vegetables. Experienced men know of no better or quicker way to do it.

"But we have been so wordy in our account of the process, that we must postpone to next week our directions for their cultivation."

Anecdotes.

"Why, good morning, Mrs. Hogg, and how are all the little piggies?"

"Quite well, I thank you, Mr. Colt, but how is the old mare?"

"I, Mr. Jones in?" asked an Irishman of the porter in a hotel.

"No," was the reply, "will you leave your name?"

"Oh, another, do you think I'd be after going home without a name?"

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

APPOINTMENTS. At a meeting of the Selectmen held on the 15th inst., the following appointments were made:—
Police Officers.—E. W. Underwood, John Ring, James O'Neil, 2d, Eliab Ramsdell, Charles Cook, Ralph Lowe, Jas. M. Beckford, Frank Willey, Joseph W. Moore, Neal McRen, Edward Bruckett.

Superintendent of Town Hall.—Jacob Flint.

Funeral Undertaker.—John Hall.

Care of Town Bell.—John Hall.

Care of Town Clock.—John O. Holden.

Care of Lock-Up.—W. M. French.

WEYMOUTH. At the annual Town Meeting held on Monday last, the following gentlemen were elected officers for the year ensuing:

Town Clerk.—Francis Ambler.

Treasurer.—Elias Richards.

Selectmen.—James Humphrey, Z. L. Bicknell, Oliver Loud.

Assessors.—Elias Richards, William W. Raymond, Quincy L. Reed.

Overseers of the Poor.—James Humphrey, Z. L. Bicknell, Oliver Loud.

School Committee, for three years.—Josiah H. Pratt, William H. Bond, James P. Terry, William D. Farren. For two years—J. Murray Whitcomb, George M. Reed.

Constables.—George W. White, Jr., William Stoddard, Wilmot Cleverly, Andrew J. Garey, Jacob N. Bates, Isaac N. Tirrell, Dan W. Barrows, B. H. Everett.

Also, voted to raise for Schools, $12,000; for Highways, $3,000; for Poor and other necessary charges, $33,000.

A WORTHY APPOINTMENT. We are pleased to learn that our young townsman, James G. Shannon, Hospital Steward in the 10th Regiment of the Regular Army, has been promoted to 2d Lieutenant for meritorious conduct. We believe this to be a worthy appointment, as we learn that Mr. Shannon received it without any asking on his part, and in fact the appointment took him entirely by surprise.

CONCERT THIS EVENING. The Ashburton's Metropolitan Star Minstrels, advertise a performance at the Town Hall, this evening. Their Concerts have been spoken of quite highly in other places, and we have no doubt but that they will be present, will undoubtedly have a chance to shake their sides with laughter. See notice.

CORRECTION. We were misinformed with regard to the action of the Unitarian Society, at their recent parish meeting. They are not accustomed to make yearly contracts with their ministers, but a contract once made, holds during the minister's life, unless dissolved by him, or by the parish, upon six months' notice previously given.

AMATEUR CULTIVATOR'S GUIDE.—We have received from Washburn & Co., 100 Tremont st., Boston, their spring Catalogue of flower and vegetable seeds. It is profusely illustrated with colored and other fine engravings, and contains the name and prices of all the different kinds of seeds. Those in want of flowers, fruits or seeds should visit their splendid store, in Horticultural Hall. See advertisements.

MARCH. This month up to this date has been very cold and disagreeable. The ground freezes nearly every night, and little or nothing has been done in this vicinity towards early garden vegetables. On Tuesday night snow fell to the depth of two or three inches and it has not entirely disappeared as yet.

NEW "TRY OUT." We noticed in our streets one day the present week a new team, and on examining the lettering on the side we found the following: "WHITNEY & NASH, Grocers." It is a splendid wagon built in the most thorough manner by Tirrell & Sons of this place, and we do not but that the molasses delivered in it will be as sweet as sugar.

A GOOD JOKE. One of our citizens who had occasion to visit the Insane Asylum at South Boston, one day last week, had a pretty good joke played upon him by an insane woman. Having been shown into the hall where many of the patients were, and as the one he wished to see, was engaged in singing, he thought he would take a seat and watch her movements for a few moments. While thus seated, one of the ladies stepped up and looking him in the face, said:—

Excuse me sir, what have you on your face?

He commenced brushing his cheek, and after he had continued the operation some little time, she said smilingly:—

O! I beg your pardon, its nothing but your nose.

BOSTON CORRESPONDENCE.

BOSTON, MARCH 21, 1866.

LOCALS.—FINANCE.

Since my last matters have been quiet in Boston. St. Patrick's Day passed off pleasantly, and the well arranged procession through the streets attracted general attention. The city is healthy for March, and much preparation is making to improve its sanitary condition; this, however, with some unpleasant anticipations that the cholera may visit us the ensuing summer. It seems to be the opinion of the medical fraternity that the Asiatic cholera will become epidemic in the United States during the present year; on what hypothesis is not clearly stated. The adage "of dull times" can be repeated with some reason the present week. There is a marked depression in many branches of business, and the day is gone by for the acquisition of sudden fortunes by speculation. Money affairs are quite easy for borrowers—being obtained on Governments at 6 per cent. In New York there is abundance of money; it being found difficult to employ balances at 5 per cent. on call. Gold on Tuesday touched 128½, and is a sliding scale at that.

Many projects of a national financial character are before Congress this week. The main point to reach in legislation is the gradual reduction of paper currency, and a return to specie payments. Well has it been said, that there is no measure before Congress, not even that of reconstruction, in which the people at large feel more interest than they do in the establishment of some settled financial policy by the Government. This is the business pivot. The method of returning to specie payments should be sure and gradual. The country is in a favorable condition for such policy. With this expectation that gold would become at par within one year, our business men are preparing for the crisis. A too sudden contraction of the circulation of "Greenbacks" and fractional currency, would tip over half the business enterprise of the country. What is the right path to a return to specie payments is now the great question—not a political one—before Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury has his views. Messrs. Hooper and Boutwell, among the ablest financiers of the nation, also have their theories. All admit, indeed, the Federal Constitution prescribes, that the only safe monetary standard is gold and silver. We dwell on this subject, because the material prosperity of all kinds of business enterprise, will be mainly influenced by a sound national currency. That Congress will settle upon a wise financial policy, before the close of the present session, is the earnest hope of the sovereign people, their constituents.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

This Honorable body is in the full tide of business; many looking to the prospect of a close of its session in April. Numerous petitions come in daily and are referred to the appropriate Committees. One was presented to the House, for a ten hour labor law. On Monday there were only five matters before the House in the order of the day which were promptly disposed of. A bill has been reported, providing that the liability of State banks shall cease at the end of three years from the time when they cease to issue bills. This is a just protection to the bill holders of the old State banks.

The subject of a license law for the sale of spirituous liquors has attracted much attention the present session, and the Committee to whom this matter is referred have been very patient in hearing all parties for and against licensing. There is no evidence however that the prohibition law will be essentially changed, unless made more stringent. The liquor dealers here are looking with much anxiety for the decision of the Supreme Court at Washington. The matter is under advisement by the Judges. The Federal law licenses liquor dealers; the State law of Massachusetts is prohibitory; and here is the seeming collision. The gist of the whole matter is whether the prohibitory law of this State is Constitutional. If thus affirmed by the highest legal tribunal of the land, the Government licenses become null and void. There is a prospect that a decision will soon be made one way or the other.

CONGRESS.

Both Houses of Congress are said to be earnestly at work. The Appropriation bills are making rapid advances. The Reciprocity bill having been killed, up will come the tax and tariff bills. There are hopes that some portions, at least, of the Revenue law may be reduced in the tariff. The question of taxing Savings Banks, meets with strong opposition.—X.

INSTRUCTIONS ON THE PIANO. It gives us pleasure to call the attention of parents and others, who may have young masters and misses in their charge, whom they wish to receive thorough instructions, on the Piano Forte, to the card of Mr. H. M. Smith in our columns. Mr. Smith has given instructions in this place, for several months in some of the first families, and is spoken of very highly as a gentlemanly and competent teacher.

PRICES OF COAL. There is at present quite a stagnation in the coal trade, and prices have, again receded. Coal by the cargo, at this place, can now be had at $3 to $3 75 per ton. The wages of the miners have of course gone down in proportion. Ninety cents per car is now paid for mining in the Shamokin region, instead of $2 paid about a year since. By the week $8 to $10, instead of $18 to $20. It is said the miners in Schuylkill and in the Lackawanna region are preparing to strike for higher wages as soon as the season is fairly opened.—Savbury (Pa.) American.

PHOTOGRAPHIC MINIATURES.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, MARCH 21, 1866.

During our career as public caterers, we have occasionally been the recipient of anonymous "letters missive," but never remember to have drawn a keener Damascus blade—or more "over the left,"—complimentary prize,—than "the soul-inspiring liltedonor" which we subjoin.

WALPOLE, MARCH 5th, 1866.

"Mr. Keokuck: we verily supposed you long since had 'gone up.' Why 'tis quite a score of years, since you apparently doffed your 'La Ponkapug' non de plume; you did, indeed, Monsieur, turn up 'Richard himself' again," last fall, but evidently more stingy in your ideas, contracted and local in your field of operations. Some two or three "vintages" down to tide water, evidently, for the few past months have gobbled up your "Pictorial Gallery," forcing the inference that you are not a "progressive," or, that you design working up old Tiedon-lou-roux Weymouth into a ponderous swell, with peccadillo Brantree as a kind of frontispiece adjunct, maneuvering for more social and political prestige than is attached to Dorchester, Roxbury, Dedham, Stoughton, and the residue of the 23 municipalities which constitute Norfolk County. One would guess after perusing your touch at the "Day of Naples,"—dash at the Highlands of the Hudson, and "Towering altitude" in proximity to Blue Hills, Milton, that you were not too gaily to travel, but enjoyed rapid transit, varied scenery, and a smack of old-Hock. Why not, then, occasionally hoist your descriptive boots, make a draft on your friend of the Hancock House Livery Stables, Quincy, for a tip-top family turn-out, and haul up on the western slope of the County. Cast your practised, classical peepers at our churches, manufacturing establishments, educational halls, and pretty, modest school marmas. In the matter of "photographs" you are an old stager enough to know, that exact duplicates are not the articles which command the best price, in many cases; they sell better bathed in rose water—superadded to a kind of rain-hood parenthesis. For the novelty of the thing, we are constrained to exclaim, "Come over into Macedonia and help us," to a few "GALLERY SITTINGS;" then wait a rush would ensue to the Post Office, Saturday, after the Quincy Patriot.

Estelle, Pucette, &c.

OPINATEUR.

The Prince de Talleyrand, Premier of France, from the time of the Consulate, during Napoleon's reign, and up to Louis Philippe's fall, was generally conceded the boldest manager and the ablest diplomatist of all Europe. No statesman of his generation could fathom his skill in administering sugar-coated pills to Ministers Plenipotentiary and Envoys Extraordinary, at the Court of St. Cloud; conceal, in a kind of bon Constructeur veil. Possibly this Walpole note, may be "a balm of a thousand flowers," chemically prepared in the laboratory of the French "diplomat," as they style him, which if gulped down as designed, would toss us upon beam ends, quicker than Danton, the old reign of terror-monster, at Paris, could cry Par fournie!

But we opine no evil; but conclude the pert chap, hailing infant, with somewhat of a French accent, is our friend—an honest, satirical epistle, we deem most commendable a detour around Walpole. To be brief—we are not amused at the architecture developed in buildings, or much charmed at the landscape scenery hereabouts; but in the matter of master minds, we seem instinctively to commune with one who seems to over-top all others in this region, by depth of research, regal culture, progressive ideas, generous impulses, indomitable will, and that—"needle to the pole"—tenacity for certain eternal truths, touching the status of man and the chains of the down trodden. Who by majorities ample enough to gorge the aspirations of any public man, has repeatedly been returned to the House and the State Senate; who was member of the Executive Council, when Daniel Webster expired at Marshall; also, when rebel insolence unmasked the first gun at Fort Sumter, and during the four years continuance of the war; evincing fraternal solicitude for volunteers, and tender regard for their families; whose friendly words and beneficent hands so often encouraged and cheered Readville's loyal battalions—on—ward; whose considerate instrumentality caused the purchase, in Dedham's beautiful cemetery, a lovely plot of ground for the interment of Camp Meigs' lamented dead,—we most respectfully announce

HON. FRANCIS W. BIRD, of Walpole.

In stature, our friend stands over six feet; about the same height as Judge Ezra Wilkinson; in person somewhat spare; with a preponderance of muscle, reminding one of Governor Bronlow, of Tennessee; in grasp of intellect and in powers of physical endurance, would not suffer in comparison with the late Hon. Jeremiah Mason, of Boston. Socially, as a friend and citizen, Mr. B. secures troops of admirers—by his frankness of demeanor, companionable vivacity, and blandness of address; but if any upstart undertakes the job of catechising him in science, morals, or politics, ten to one they would get a noise booting than did Jeff Davis by Uncle Sam. Mr. Bird has a liberal education, is reputed to possess an ample fortune, and apparently not over forty-five years of age.

For complimentary words by your learned and interesting Boston Correspondent, we most respectfully doff our Chapeau.

Our Photographs will continue.

KEOKUCK.

A Lynn paper says that one firm in that city cut up last year thirty thousand two hundred and fifty sides of leather producing not far from one million six hundred thousand pairs of soles of various sizes and qualities.

THE GREAT SCARE.

OGDENBURG, (N. Y.) March 17, '66.

Thinking that the readers of your valuable paper would like to hear of the "Great Fenian Scare," by an eye witness, I will try and relate the circumstances as I saw them.

Last night, at about half past eleven o'clock some of the returned soldiers of Ogdenburg, for a bit of diverting, thought they would make a reconnaissance as a surprise for their Canadian neighbors—so they provided themselves with two dozen rockets, of the largest calibre, and a six pound cannon, which they stationed on a hill on the right side of the city, while scouts were sent out two miles on its left, and at a given signal from the cannon, sent up their blue lights far into the pitchy darkness of midnight.

The trick took admirably! The citizens of Prescott, a Canadian settlement, on the opposite side of the Lake, of about fifteen thousand inhabitants,—for whom the entertainment was intended, became greatly alarmed; their worst fears, they were sure were about to be realized; the Fenians were upon them—with Shillalahs, to knock out their brains, in retaliation for Ireland's wrongs, and no time was to be lost. With such an unwelcome summons, the citizens were hurried from their beds—shaking with cold and fear at the threatened calamity; the guns of the Fort were fired; the bells rung, and I could distinctly hear, from my quarters, Ogdenburg, the officers giving their orders; the bugle for the cavalry, and long roll was beat; the women and children, were seen running for dear life, in their night clothes, to the Fort; but every thing of the male gender, that could bear arms was pressed into the ranks; amidst this confusion and uproar all lights in the doomed city—for this appeared to be the settled conviction—were extinguished, and lost to view.

Thus passed the night. The Fenians didn't come, and the next morning your humble servant went over to see the battle-field—take a list of the killed, wounded and missing; and such a scene as presented itself, your imagination cannot picture; the streets barricaded with boxes and barrels; all business suspended, the populace seeking safety, either in their own houses or the quarters of the officers—eager to learn whether reinforcements had arrived, as had been promised—still in the dark at the game that had been played there, their assailants might expect a warmer reception at their next visit. The Ogdenburg boys relish it much, and think it a good set off to the St. Alban's "Scare;" of the two, we think they were the most frightened.

I shall leave here for Rouses Point; where a similar excitement prevails, and from as groundless a cause—if a grand battle comes off there, I will endeavor to be on the field, and furnish you with the full particulars. Yours with respect, B.

VEAZIE'S DRUG STORE. Those of our readers who wish to procure the best toilet and fancy articles in the market, should call at Mr. Vezie's. He keeps constantly on hand, the best of perfumery, brushes, soaps, powders, washes, &c., in the market. Also, pure drugs, medicines and chemicals, such as he can warrant to the public. He has had many years' experience in the business and knows how to please his customers. Those who have not visited his shop we advise to do so when an opportunity offers.

Francis Ambler, Esq., town clerk of Weymouth has our thanks for a copy of the town report, also for the vote for town officers on Monday last.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 15th inst., Hugh James, son of James and Agnes Kerrigan aged 1 year and 3 months.

In Chelsea, on the 10th inst., Mrs. Alice, wife of Mr. Marshall Johnson, aged 69 years.

On the 17th inst., Mr. Marshall Johnson, aged 83 years, formerly of Dedham, and parents of Mr. C. C. Johnson of this town.

In Eaton, Canada East, on the 28th of February, Mr. Richard Fisher formerly of this town, aged 68 years.

ONCE MORE IN THE FIELD.

ASHBURN'S METROPOLITAN

STAR MINSTRELS, Compacting ten in number, will give an entertainment in Town Hall, Quincy, on SATURDAY EVE., March 24th, 1866.

Among the talent that will appear is D. J. SPR

Summary Intelligence.

The New York papers state that "trichinosis has made its appearance in several pork-packing establishments in that city, that eight pork butchers have consequently left the business, and that pork has decreased in price four cents a pound within the last week.

There is a young man in Bohemia, twenty-three years of age, who speaks thirty different languages, including those of China and Japan.

In the month of January, 1866, a remarkable tree was conveyed to New York from a Western State, which is considered by the best judges to be worth $24,000. This was a black walnut tree, seventy feet long, board or inch measure, 4,500, but when cut into veneers it would be thirty times that, making 135,000 feet, which, at twenty cents, would be $27,000. The cost of cutting, carting, and placing in store for sale would be about $700.

Discoveries of inexhaustible gold deposits, richer than California, are reported in Michigan.

There is a man confined in Springfield jail who has been sent to the House of Correction eighty different times during the last fifteen years, for intemperance.

John L. Flagg, just chosen to the Mayorship of Troy, is the youngest incumbent of that office in the United States, being little more than twenty-four years of age. Mayor Flagg is a graduate of Harvard College of the class of 1857, ranking high among the baccalaureates of that year.

Broadway is full of little flower girls, selling bunches of violets and other early flowers at five cents each.

READ THE ADVERTISEMENTS. We would call particular attention of farmers, gardeners and others to our advertising columns. They contain cards from all the popular agricultural warehouses, seed stores, &c., in the city. You will find advertised all the articles you require on the farm or in the garden; all kinds of seeds from the tiny flower to the massive pumpkin.

NEW MUSIC. We have received from the publishers, Adams & Co., 21 Bromfield street, Boston, the following pieces of new and popular sheet music, composed and arranged for the Piano Forte by L. H. Gurney, "Lost Marguerite," and "Love Never Sleeps"; and also, a new humorous song by Philander Jones, music by F. Krupper, "There's no such girl as Sally." These pieces need no commendation from us, and will be sent free of postage on receipt of price, which is only 30 cents each.

THE KNEELAND TROUPE. This favorite troupe gave an entertainment at the Town Hall on Thursday evening. The audience was small, probably in part from want of a sufficient notice. Those that were present spoke very highly of the dancing and singing. We learn that this troupe intends soon to visit this place again.

Parker's Pectoral Pastilles give immediate relief in all cases of Cough, Cold and Affections of the chest and lungs, and restores to Singers and Speakers, clearness of voice. They contain no opium nor any other deleterious, and are wonderful in the efficacy with which they effect the cure of all diseases of the throat. For sale by all Druggists. Price 25 cents a box. PACIFIC GUANO.
GENERAL AGENCY FOR THE AMMONIATED
PACIFIC GUANO.
THE AMMONIATED PACIFIC GUANO resembles Ammoniated Peruvian Guano in appearance and composition, and contains all the elements of fertility. That which renders the Pacific Guano superior to Peruvian is, that while it possesses sufficient animal matter and ammonia for all immediate stimulus, it also contains nearly double the amount of soluble and dense phosphate, which affords the crops ample nourishment, and leaves the soil enriched by the same for successive crops, which is not the case with the Peruvian Guano.
We can assure the public that the Pacific Guano is a superior kind of actual value and economy to other Peruvian Guano or Superphosphate of Lime, and commend it confidently as the best and cheapest fertilizer now offered to Farmers and Gardeners, containing more Ammonia, Soluble Phosphate, and Bone Phosphate or Lime than any other.

PACIFIC GUANO.
GENERAL AGENCY FOR THE AMMONIATED
PACIFIC GUANO.
THE AMMONIATED PACIFIC GUANO resembles Ammoniated Peruvian Guano in appearance and composition, and contains all the elements of fertility. That which renders the Pacific Guano superior to Peruvian is, that while it possesses sufficient animal matter and ammonia for all immediate stimulus, it also contains nearly double the amount of soluble and dense phosphate, which affords the crops ample nourishment, and leaves the soil enriched by the same for successive crops, which is not the case with the Peruvian Guano.
We can assure the public that the Pacific Guano is a superior kind of actual value and economy to other Peruvian Guano or Superphosphate of Lime, and commend it confidently as the best and cheapest fertilizer now offered to Farmers and Gardeners, containing more Ammonia, Soluble Phosphate, and Bone Phosphate or Lime than any other.

Reports to be sent in on or before the 1st
day of December, 1866, to William L. Bradley, Boston, containing description of soil, mode of cultivation, quantity of Super-Phosphate of Lime used, of manure purchased, and whether with or without satisfactory results, every report to be certified to by some citizen of integrity of the town where made: these reports
when in, will be referred to a Committee of three competent disinterested gentlemen,
whose duty it shall be to award said premiums
after examining the reports; the premiums to be paid on the 1st day of January, 1867.

To avoid any possible chemical error in the manufacture of my Fertilizers, I have made arrangements with the highest chemical talent,
to aid me in this important department, and
not a single ton of Phosphate or Tobacco Fertilizer will be allowed to go to market until it has been sampled and passed inspection by actual analysis.

THE ABOVE NAMED FERTILIZERS CAN BE PURCHASED FROM RELIABLE DEALERS
THROUGHOUT NEW ENGLAND.

Pamphlets containing testimonials and directions for using Super-Phosphate of Lime
can be had, free of charge, by addressing the manufacturer or dealer; also, Bradley's Manual for growing Tobacco will be sent free to any grower of the weed, by asking for it by mail.

24 BROAD STREET, BOSTON.

[From Ex-governor Holbrook, of Vermont:]
Brattleboro', Vt., Nov. 28, 1865.
WM. L. BRADLEY, Esq., Dear Sir: For several years past, I have annually used your Super-Phosphate of Lime. In field cultivation, I have used it extensively for corn, and
potatoes, putting a table-spoonful in each hill;
and also, when sowing land to grass, with a grain crop, sowing from 250 to 300 pounds per acre, broadcast.

The healthy growth, and abundant crop
of grain, and the superb catch of grass, in each instance resulting from the broadcast use of
the Super-Phosphate, have paid well for its application; when applied in the hill, for corn,
it hastens the crop, giving it a deep green
color and luxuriant growth.

In the garden, I use the Super-Phosphate
with marked success, for peas, beans, lettuce, and other roots, sweet corn, early potatoes,
cabbages, &c., applying it in the hill or drill,
or broadcast on the garden beds. Its effects are striking and excellent, and particularly valuable on all such vegetables as one may desire
to force along to early maturity.

I should be quite unwilling to dispense with
the Super-Phosphate, either in the garden or field.

I should state that manure is generally applied broadcast to the land, in addition to the use of the Super-Phosphate, excepting in the case of sowing to grass, when Super-Phosphate is sown broadcast on all such lands as are sly about taking a good catch of grass.

Very truly yours,
FRIDERIC HOLBROOK

NATURE'S VOICE.

Lines addressed to Miss C. A. M.

Go walk abroad on earth, this blessed earth;
Ascend the breezy mountain, and with eye
Upturned in reverent gaze, behold the heavens,
Day's glorious king fulfilling God's behest,
The fleecy clouds and the ethereal blue—
Go down the sunny slope, into the vale,
And watch the flashes of the dancing rill;
List the sweet melody of summer birds,
And the low music of the insect's hum;
Seek the deep shadows of the hoary wood,
And wander through its dim and solemn aisles,
Where nature's cadence is a whisper low;
Or watch the ocean murmur, as it comes Tossing the crested wave upon the shore,
And what is nature's voice? full many a word
Of gentle teaching, and sweet, precious lore
Has she for the appreciating soul:
All speaks of life, of active, earnest life;
In praise of God, and the common weal.
There are no drones in nature's busy hive,
We will be active, then, and earnest, too,
And spend our youth, life's happy, lovely spring.

Not in day-dreams and indolent delights,
But, with a ready heart and cheerful zeal,
Improve each passing hour as it flies,
Sowing rich seeds by kindly deeds of love,
And sympathy with earth's sad, weary ones;
So shall our summer glow with heavenly light,
And autumn's harvest bring a pure delight.

APPLE SNOW. Put twelve very tart apples in cold water over a slow fire—
When soft, take away the skin and cores, and mix a pint of sifted white sugar; beat the whites of twelve eggs to a stiff froth, and then add them to the apples and sug-

A CHECK FOR A CARPET.

"And how about the carpet?"

Pretty little Mrs. Lane spoke coaxingly, with her hands clasped on her husband's arm. He looked down at her a moment before he answered. She had been his wife for five years, but her face was as sunny and as girlish as when he first wooed her.
Her blue eyes had scarcely shed a tear in all those years, except the lazy, luxurious tears such happy little souls weep over the ideal woes of story-book heroines. Her monthly rose in the French window was not pinker than her cheeks—her scarlet geranium was no brighter or redder than her lips—and the pet canary chirping above the blossoms was no gayer or merrier than the little bird-like woman who waited for John Lane's answer. He smiled as he looked at her, and brushed back her soft, brown hair, with an unconscious tenderness.

"Yes, about the carpet, Annie. If I thought we needed it, I would get it, of course. But we use the drawing-room so little. The carpet that is on it now is almost as bright as it was the day we chose it, and you know how pretty we both thought it then."

The girlish young wife pouted her dainty lip—

"Well, John, but it has been down five years, and it is only because I've taken such nice care of it. If I'd been careless and let it get spoiled, you'd have got another without grumbling, you know you would. It's too bad, if I've got to see things round forever, just because I'm careful of them. Don't you get tired of seeing the same things, always, John?"

"Not easily, so long as they are the same, fresh and bright as ever. I am not tired of you yet!"

She laughed, and her pink cheeks flushed a little.

"But I'm not a carpet. Ours is only a Brussels, you know, and I did so want a Wilton, like Mrs. Mayne's."

"So Mrs. Mayne is the serpent in our Eden? Well, Annie, give me till to-night to think of it, and he bent toward her for his good-bye.

After he had gone, she went into the drawing room, and took a survey of her possessions. The carpet was that soft, many-shaded moss-like green, on which every thing looks so well. She confessed to herself that it had a more refined air than Mrs. Mayne's large figure Wilton, which held her gaze like the eye of the ancient mariner, from the moment you entered the room. But then she thought, she needn't buy a great gaudy thing; and a Wilton was really so much more elegant, so much more in keeping with her rosewood and brocade. Then she began dusting some of her books and ornaments.

While she stood there she heard the bell ring, and a short parley at the door—
a child's voice, apparently asking for food, and the cook's answer, that to-day there was nothing to spare. A sound in the young, sad voice, a sort of uncomplaining helplessness, struck her, and she stepped down stairs just as Bridget was about to shut the door.

"Come back a moment, little girl," she said, in those gentle tones that John Lane liked so well to hear.

The child turned, an eager light coming into her face for a moment, and then going out. Mrs. Lane was acting on impulse—she almost always did; it was a good thing, therefore that most of her impulses were sweet and gentle and true.

"Are you hungry?" she asked, tryingly.

"It doesn't matter so much about me, ma'am, I could bear to be hungry, but I do not know what to do for my mother.
I have tried to find a place to work, but no one will take me. They say a child ten years old is more plague than profit.
Mother had to work so hard to keep us, and now she has been sick a while, and she can't work, and so we have eaten up every thing. So I came out to see if anybody would give me something for mother, and I've asked at every house in the street, and every where they said just the same, and that they had nothing to do."

"Where do you live—is it far?" Mrs.
Lane asked.

"Only a few steps, ma'am—three streets off."

"Well, then, I'll go home with you, and see your mother. Come into the house, while I put on my bonnet, and Bridget will give you some bread and butter and cold meat."

Mrs. Lane's sweet young face was full of pity, as she hurriedly packed a basket with bread and tea and sugar for the sick mother. Then she ran up stairs and tied on her pretty summer hat, and down again while the hungry girl was finishing her breakfast.

"Come, little girl," she said, "what is your name?"

"Ellen Stanton; but my father always called me Nelly, and so does mother."

"And is your father dead?"

"Oh, yes; that's the way our trouble began. Father died, and mother wasn't used to hard work, and she had to work so hard to keep the baby and me."

"Mrs. Lane asked no more questions just then. She was thinking more seriously than she had ever thought in her life, remembering how she had been born to ease and luxury, shielded all her days from care—how her deepest discontent had been when some other person's carpet was hand-somer, or their India shawl had a deeper border. And now she was going where hunger and sorrow were tenants. Had she been living all this time for herself? She questioned with a sudden pang of terror and self-reproach, whether ever in her life she had done really one unselfish act—whether, if the great harvest day were come, she would have one sheaf to show to the Master.

She had given of her abundance now and then, of course when charitable subscriptions had been presented to her; but she had thought it a bore and a burden, not a privilege. Of her own accord, what good had she ever done—what man, woman or child was there to rise up and call her blessed?

"Here we are ma'am," said the child,
breaking the silence.

It was a two-story, wooden house before which they had stopped. They went up stairs and the little girl opened the door.

"Mother," she said, "a lady has come home with me to see you—a kind lady, who has given me my breakfast, and brought you yours."

Mrs. Lane stood a moment on the threshold of the room, and took in such a picture as in her young happy life she had never seen before. The apartment was almost bare of furniture—no carpet was on the floor—there was only the bed, three chairs and a table. But every thing was as neat as hands could make it;
against the wall, at the foot of the bed,
hung a framed photograph—the portrait of a man with kind, honest eyes, the features of which the child Ellen's were almost a copy.

"I have come," Mrs. Lane said, with the sweet grace which had made her a welcome guest in far different scenes, "to see if I could arrange something for your comfort; but, first of all, you must have some toast and tea," and giving her little guide some money, she sent her out to procure fuel, and sat down herself, in the meantime, beside the bed where the sick woman lay, with her baby asleep upon her arm. The wan, pale face upon the pillows was not beautiful—Annie Lane could not be sentimental or romancing about this woman—could by no means idealize her into a heroine. Yet there was something good and true in her expression, and when she turned to place the baby more comfortably, a light and glow of mother-love illumined her features until they were better than pretty. Mrs. Lane was not long in learning her history.

She had been used all her days to self-dependence. Before she was married she had worked on a sewing machine in a shop, and she understood the business thoroughly. But when James Stanton married her had given it up. He was a good mechanic, a carpenter, and his wages kept them comfortably. They had not laid up much, however, for during the eleven years of their marriage three children besides the two she had left now had come and gone—poor, feeble little things that cost a great deal for doctors and medicine. Then, just before this last baby came, a scaffolding had given way where her husband was at work—he had fallen from the fourth story of a house and had been brought home to her dead.
She had sold almost all her furniture, and got along by that means until she was able to be about, and then she had left baby with Ellen, and gone out to day's work of washing and cleaning. It was labor for which she was not strong enough, but it was the only occupation she could get, and after awhile she had taken a severe cold, and grown so ill that she could not go out at all. They had eaten up every thing they had; and this morning for the first time, she had sent Ellen out to try to get something, somewhere, to keep them alive until she could work again. "And it must have been God, ma'am, that sent her to you," she concluded.

Mrs. Lane, helpless, pretty little thing, scarcely knew what to say. Her heart beat with tumultuous throbs of pity—her eyes were full of tears; in all her sunny life she had never been brought in contact with actual, gaunt misery and destitution.
At last a thought occurred to her, and she uttered it eagerly—

"If you only had a sewing machine now, you could take work home when you get better, couldn't you, and support yourself and the children so very nicely?"

The woman sighed a deep, unconscious sigh of heartfelt longing.

"Yes, ma'am, I could, but you know that that's impossible. I can never get well enough to go out again by the day. If I don't, I don't know what will become of the children."

"But God knows," whispered Mrs.
Lane, softly. "He pities us, you know,
as a father pities his children."

Then came Ellen with coal and kindlings, and the subject was not alluded to again.

When their five o'clock dinner was over, that afternoon, John Lane went gaily into the sitting room with his wife.
He had a pleasant surprise for her, and he laid it in her lap, in the shape of a check for two hundred dollars.

"There, humming-bird," he said, lightly,
"there's for your carpet. Business has prospered this year, and what is it good for but to make me pleasant, and wife happy?"

She turned her face and touched her lips silently to the kind hand resting on her shoulder. Perhaps John was disappointed that she expressed her pleasure

so quietly. He had anticipated her gay laugh of merry exultation, her delighted chat about colors and patterns. Her new mood surprised him. He sat down beside her gravely, and waited for her to speak.

She told him the story of her day, leaving out nothing. He could see how deeply she had been moved, by the color which came and went on her cheeks, the tears which gathered untheeded in her eyes.

FAST DAY EXERCISES. The Hancock Glee Club, impressed with a devotion to the observance of the day, a desire to please the public, will give one of their choicest, musical and dramatic entertainments at the Town Hall, on Fast Day evening, April 5th. It is hoped the people on this occasion, will lay aside all secular duties, or other engagements, and direct their steps thither, to pay a parting tribute of respect to this worthy corps of vocalists, on this, their last exhibition for the season, and unite with them in song, dramatic representations, seasoned with mirth, and other ceremonies, appropriate to the closing exercises of the day.

The entertainments for the evening are a combination of excellencies. The Glee Club will tune their vocal powers to the performance of some of their best pieces—assisted by our own favorite corps of musicians—The Quincy Brass Band, whose appearance always receives a hearty welcome, and is sure to draw a crowd.

During the evening a beautiful Drama, of historic interest, entitled the "Wept of the Wish-ton-Wish,"—dramatized from the work bearing that title, by the great American novelist, J. Fenimore Cooper, will be introduced, with a strong cast; and other attractions, which cannot fail to please.

Mr. Galen Bowditch, Jr., will also be present, and entertain the audience with one of his admirable songs. This is positively his last appearance this season, as other claims on his professional services demand his attention. The Glee Club, ever attentive to the pleasure and accommodation of all classes of the community, have very considerably arranged for a Grand Matinee, on the afternoon of Fast Day, for the convenience of children, and those who cannot attend the evening exhibition. Eminent artists from abroad will take part in the performances, and the whole arrangements are on such a scale as to promise one of the most brilliant fetes of the season. See advertisement.

FIRE. A small shoemaker's shop, on Phillips street, near Liberty street, was destroyed by fire, about four o'clock on Wednesday morning last. The building belonged to Daniel Baxter, Esq., and was uninsured. It was valued about $400. Other persons loss in boots, tools, machinery &c., some two or three hundred dollars. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

THE TOWN CLOCK. We understand that Mr. John O. Holden who was appointed Superintendent of the Town Clock, declines the appointment.

THE NASH PLACE. The estate of the late Nathaniel Nash at Quincy Neck, was sold at public auction on Monday last, to Mr. David Warren, of Boston, for $1500.

The property in the square advertised in our last was purchased by J. Q. Adams, Esq., for $7250.

Rumor has it that the old buildings are to be taken down to make room for a new block, the basement to be occupied as meat, fish and vegetable markets; the first floor as Stores, Bank, Insurance and other offices, and the upper part to contain an elegant hall suitable for concerts, assembly rooms and lectures.

Such a building will be of great advantage to the town, and cannot fail to be highly remunerative to the proprietor.

RESIGNATION.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.

I am sorry to learn that Mr. W. E. Eaton, the accomplished and successful Principal of the Coddington school, has tendered his resignation, that he may accept an invitation of the School Committee of Charlestown. Mr. Eaton had received and accepted the invitation, and tendered his resignation some little time before the "District meeting" was held, where the whole matter of appointing a "Prudential Committee" was so suddenly squelched, that its advocates could hardly realize whether they were in the body or out; as an evidence of which, a motion was offered that one of their number be requested to remain in the Coddington School House, the length of time not being stated. The above meeting, it should be added, was largely attended, and was almost unanimous in declaring that the Centre District at least, should not take a step backward in the great cause of education.

BOSTON CORRESPONDENCE.

BOSTON, MARCH 29, 1866.

EXCITEMENT AT WASHINGTON.

The President's veto of the Civil Rights Bill passed by Congress, is making quite a commotion at Washington. One objection is, that it confers the right of citizenship upon the colored race, Indians, and Chinese residents. He doubts the justice of establishing the rights of citizenship, while eleven States are left unrepresented in Congress—the rights of the negro to vote, to hold office and to set on jury. He objects to the second section of the bill, which provides for the punishment of State Legislators who pass laws contrary to the spirit of this law; and also to judges and officers who attempt to carry out such laws—regarding this section as unconstitutional. He believes the whole bill a stride towards the centralization of power in the General Government, and that it will have a tendency to resuscitate the spirit of rebellion and arrest the progress of peaceful influences. The Evening Traveller says, that "The discussion which will arise on this bill, will we fear, still further impair the harmony which ought to exist between the President and Congress."

Another source of excitement now at the Capital, is the unsetting of Senator Stockton of New Jersey. The National Intelligencer is down upon the Senate by its vote on the Stockton case. It calls in question the integrity of many Senators—and goes into Mr. Sumner with foul language. All this adds fuel to the fire, as the Intelligencer is the organ of the President. The press throughout the country sustains the veto, who approve of the President's course on the Freedman's Bureau Bill. On the other hand, no small portion of the Republican papers are taking issue against the policy of Mr. Johnson and are fast drifting away from him. This is wrong. The union Republican party by their fidelity to the general government through the rebellion, saved the country. President Johnson was and is identified with that party—foremost in its ranks. However he may differ with the majority of both Houses of Congress on the details for reconstruction, he is a union man to the core. The Government should be sustained as firm now, as in the darkest days of the rebellion. The President is at the head of that Government and commands the support of every union man. Be it remembered that both of his vetoes give no evidence of a want of loyalty, or desire to break up the great party of the union. He differs with a majority of Congress on some of the proposed measures of that body, and that is all.

STATE HOUSE MATTERS. Some important subjects are now under consideration by the Legislative Committees. The Usury Law is one of them. One view of the matter was, to raise the legal rate of interest in this State permanently to seven per cent. Again, strong arguments were presented at the hearing of the Committee for the repeal of all laws regulating interest money. Nothing was gained by usury laws, and that a monopoly of money was impossible—there being nothing morally wrong in a man's charging a market rate of interest for what he sells in the shape of money. Men will get the value of their money, and hence the law is continually violated. Men must sell or lend their money like any other merchandise to reap the benefit of it; and the laws of supply and demand must regulate the price.

The Hours of Labor System is still under investigation. Many petitions now ask for a ten hours' enactment instead of eight hours. There is a wide difference of opinion with witnesses before the Committee on how many hours should constitute a day's labor.

A gentleman informed me to-day that he never knew business of all kinds so dull as at the present time in Boston. The loan market is represented as quiet; money easy of interest, and the supply of capital seeking investment large, because the usual outlets for its employment are many of them closed, in consequence of the apathy of business.

Summary Intelligence. A field of wheat buried under an avalanche in Switzerland for twenty-five years, proceeded on its growth as soon as the snow had melted.

The city government of Boston is taking measures to provide free bathing places for the people of that city.

During the last two years the government has realized from sales of confiscated and abandoned cotton, sugar, etc., in the State of Mississippi, over six million dollars.

The grand total of liquor dealers in the State reported to the 1st inst., is 4573.

There are now, in the vaults of the Treasury at Washington about $140,000,000 in notes and coin, which is the largest sum they have ever before contained.

During the past year the courts of Chicago granted 275 divorces, of which 177 were applied for by wives, and 99 by husbands.

Boston sells its house offal under a contract for $5500 per annum, the ashes collected by the city at $3000, and the street dirt and sweeping for $2000.

General and Prudential Committees.

A clear definition of the comparative powers and duties of the General School Committee, and of the Prudential Committees respectively, will be timely at the present.

"The Prudential Committee," say the General Statutes of Massachusetts, "shall keep the school house in good order at the expense of the District, and if there is no school house, shall provide a suitable place for the school of the District at the expense thereof; shall provide fuel and all things necessary for the comfort of the scholars therein; give information and assistance to the School Committee of the town to aid them in the discharge of the duties required of them; and, when the town so determines, shall select and contract with an instructor for each school in the District."

On the other hand, whether the School District System be in force or not, "Every town shall, at the annual meeting, choose by written ballot, a Board of School Committee, which shall have the general charge and superintendence of all the public schools in town." And the Supreme Court has decided that under this law the General Committee shall decide how the school shall be organized, how many shall be kept, and what shall be the qualifications, as to age and attainments, for admission.

"The law vests a plenary authority in the Committee to arrange, classify and distribute pupils as they think best adapted to their general proficiency and welfare."

The powers of the General Committee are further enlarged, and the authority of the Prudential Committee proportionally diminished, in two particulars, viz:

1st. "The School Committee have the whole power to examine teachers, and no one can legally be a teacher in any public school, until he has received from the School Committee a written certificate of his qualifications." [See Gen. Statutes, ch. 38—Sec. 24. Also, 4 Ch. 601.]

2d. "The School Committee may dismiss from employment any teacher whenever they think proper, and such teacher shall receive no compensation for services rendered after such dismissal." [Gen. Statutes, ch. 38—Sec. 25.]

The following provision is also worthy of notice here:

"If a School District neglects or refuses to establish a school and employ a teacher for the same, the School Committee may establish such school, and employ a teacher therefor, as the Prudential Committee might have done."

To sum up, then: The Prudential Committee is authorized to select and contract with teachers, subject to the approval of the General Committee; to take care of the school houses, and to advise with and assist the General Committee. While the government and classification of the schools, the arrangement of studies, the choice of text-books, the furnishing of school apparatus, the regulations with regard to the length of school terms and daily sessions, the giving of holidays, the removal of teachers, without cause assigned, and all other matters relating to the management of the schools are entrusted to the charge of the General Committee.

It would appear also, from [Gen. Stat. ch. 38—Sec. 19] that when the school houses are owned by the town, and not by districts, the General Committee, and not the Prudential Committee, has charge of them. On this point, however, I am not certain, and ask for information through your columns.

WEST DISTRICT MEETING. WEST QUINCY, MARCH 26, 1866.

As it may prove of interest to some who are watching the manifestations of popular opinion upon our School District System, I have thought it well to send you the following report of our DISTRICT MEETING. Friday evening, March 24th, a large number of our citizens in obedience to a summons issued a week previously, convened in the Grammar Room of the Willard school, and were called to order, by Columbus Leary, Esq., who read the warrant authorizing the meeting.

The meeting was organized by the choice of Mr. George H. Arnold for Moderator, and Mr. J. H. Vogel for Clerk.

It was unanimously voted to choose a Prudential Committee.

Mr. Columbus Leary was then chosen for that office.

It was voted that all future meetings of the District be called by the Clerk, posting a notice of the same, at the school house, and one at each of the two stores in the village, at least seven days previous to the meetings.

A Committee of three, consisting of G. H. Arnold, S. B. Corliss, and J. W. Robertson, were chosen to confer with the General Committee, and ascertain what steps had been taken by them towards re-establishing the Primary School in the western part of the District.

A collection was taken up to defray the expenses which had been incurred.

Voted, To adjourn. O. C. C. C.

Marriages. In this town, on the 22d inst., by Seth Adams, Esq., Mr. Barney Munday to Miss Ellen Connor.

In East Weymouth, on the 22d inst., by Rev. Mr. Cole, Mr. George D. Hayward of Braintree, to Miss Lydia F. Denton of East Weymouth.

Deaths. In this town, on the 27th inst., John son of Mr. Daniel and Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, aged 19 years.

At the Insane Hospital, Taunton, Mass., on the 17th inst., Mr. John Keating of this town, aged 53 years.

At Ivy Mills, Penn., on the 21st inst., Mrs. Mary B., wife of the late James M. Wilcox, Esq., and daughter of the late Capt. James Brackett of this town, aged 70 years.

A PROCLAMATION FOR A DAY OF FASTING, HUMILIATION AND PRAYER.

By and with the advice and consent of the Council, I do hereby appoint THURSDAY, the 5th day of April next, to be observed throughout this Commonwealth as a day of Humiliation, Fasting, and Prayer.

I entreat all the people of the Commonwealth that they observe the day in the spirit of their pious ancestors, and that they hallow it apart from the uses of business and amusement; and, accordingly that they assemble in their respective places of public worship, and supplicate the mercy of Almighty God for the manifold sins for which, as a distinct community, they are held to account.

It becomes us to be humble and penitent in view of the recent national trials, and in contemplation of those which remain; because, after the issue of battle, our hearts have not been properly moved by the wonderful providence that hath given us the victory; because, in our exaltation and prosperity, we are easy to forget that the practice of justice to all men is the only enduring basis of an enlightened and Christian government; and because our pride, selfishness, and ambition yet stand in the way of the perfect fulfillment of the mission to which we have been appointed, and which the God of nations hath proved himself willing to aid us in completing, to the happiness of his whole people, and to the glory of His name.

Let us, therefore, implore the Divine favor, upon our rulers, that, without hardness of heart and without perversity, but thoughtfully, religiously, and firmly, they may consummate the work of peace to this country and of equal rights to all persons in it, since to the work this nation has been consecrated by the sufferings and blood of its sons, and of its martyred Chief-Magistrate; and let the descendants of Puritans, on this day of Fasting and Prayer, renew their allegiance to patriotism and humanity, as a religious duty.

It becomes us, also, and especially, to offer earnest and penitential prayers for our own Commonwealth.

That the Creator and Preserver of States may inspire our hearts with a just sense of the obligation, imposed on us by the framers of this government, to practice the principles of humanity and general benevolence, morality, and temperance, public and private charity, industry and frugality, honesty and punctuality, sincerity and good humor, and all social affections, and all generous sentiments:

That He may dispose and enable our citizens to preserve and enlarge the institutions of religion and education:

That He may give to all our officers and magistrates grace to execute justice and to maintain truth, and, equally, to our people, the disposition to obey the laws:

That He may spare all the residents within our borders from the ravages of the pestilence which has recently afflicted other parts of the world, the advent of which to our shores is now so greatly apprehended:

That He may cause the seasons to smile upon the earth and upon the husbandman, to the end that all the inhabitants may enjoy the kindly fruits of labor.

That He may incline the hearts of all who are blessed in health and in store, to relieve the unfortunate, and especially to deal tenderly and generously with those who, in the late war, have become disabled or bereaved:

And that in every relation, whether of ordinary life or of public duty, He may grant to this people heart and strength in the cultivation of all the virtues and all the resources which are essential to a manly and Christian Commonwealth:

In the devout hope and faith that these prayers in humiliation may be graciously received, and answered by our fathers' God, in the name of His Son, our most blessed Lord and Saviour.

THE MASSACHUSETTS LIQUOR CASES.

The following is the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, against John Maguire, of Salem, for selling liquor contrary to the laws of this State. The decision was given by Judge Wayne, and is as follows:

This is a writ of error to the Superior Court of Massachusetts. The plaintiff in error, the defendant below, was indicted for the sale and keeping of intoxicating liquors against a statute of the State. The defendant pleaded not guilty. On the trial it was proved that the defendant kept a house for the sale and for the drinking of intoxicating liquors, which acts were admitted to be illegal and in violation of the law of the State unless the defendant was authorized to keep and sell intoxicating liquors by virtue of the provisions of the act of Congress. The license is granted to Maguire & Co., of the city of Salem, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts, to carry on the business or occupation of a wholesale dealer in liquors at No. 6 Derby Square, in the aforementioned city, county and State, having paid the tax of $100 therefor, conformably to the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide internal revenue to support the government and to pay interest on the public debt, approved July 1, 1862."

The court below decided that this license gave to the defendant no right to keep or sell intoxicating liquors in violation of the State law. Whatever might be the effect of this license as to the rights claimed in the absence of other provisions of the act of Congress, a question not involved in the case and therefore not material, it is quite clear that it conferred no right or authority on the defendant below, and hence furnished no defence to the indictment under the law of the State. The sixty-seventh section of the act of Congress enacts that no license hereinbefore provided for, if granted, shall be construed to authorize the commencement or continuation of any trade, business, occupation or employment therein mentioned within any State or Territory of the United States in which it is or shall be specially prohibited by the laws thereof, or in violation of the laws of any State or Territory. In view of this provision, it is in vain to attempt to give force or effect to the license against the State law, and hence the authority derived from it upon which the defendant relied for his defence in the court below fails. The decision was against the authority set up under an act of Congress, and the case is therefore rightfully here under the 25th section of the judiciary act, but as we are of opinion that the decision of the court below was right, the judgment must be affirmed.

Valuable Real Estate — AT — AUCTION! WILL be sold at Public Auction, on THURSDAY, April 19th, at 3 o'clock P. M., on the premises, the homestead of the late ALPHRETS SPEAR, situate on Ser Street, in Quincy, about a quarter of a mile from Churches, Schools, Stores, Rail Road Depot, &c.

It consists of thirteen acres of excellent tillage land, with a two-story House suitable for two families, two wells of water, Barn, 30 by 40 feet, with cellar under the same.

Also—About three acres of land within a few rods of the first named. About one acre is Salt Marsh and the remainder is good tillage land. There is a pond of never-failing water on the same.

This property would make an excellent sauce farm, as the land is superior for raising early vegetables, or the land might easily be cut into House Lots, as it is nearly surrounded by streets.

Conditions easy, and made known at the sale.

— OF THE —

NEUFCHATEL WATCH CO.

Owing to the failure and sudden close of the works and business of the

Neufchâtel Watch Co.,

a large number of Fine Watches, manufactured especially for the United States, being heavy, first-class time-keepers, intended to stand hard usage and sudden change of temperature, are left in our hands for immediate sale. As agents of this Company, we are obliged to dispose of this stock for cash, in the shortest possible time. We have, therefore, decided on the plan annexed, as the one that will be productive of the desired result. This plan gives every one an opportunity of obtaining first-class time-keepers at a price that all can command. As every Certificate represents a Watch, there are no blanks, and every one who invests in this sale must get a Watch at the retail price at least; and, at all times, one to wear with pride through life. Remittances may be made at our risk, in Registered Letters or by express, or Post-Office Orders and Drafts payable to our order. We guarantee a safe return to every patron. We warrant every Watch as represented, and satisfaction is guaranteed in every instance. Knowing the worth of the stock, we can give a guarantee to every purchaser. The price has been placed at the very low figure in order to secure immediate sale; and all who desire to improve the opportunity should make early application.

Selected Poetry.

LOVE OF COUNTRY AND OF HOME.

BY MONTGOMERY.

There is a land, of every land the pride,
Beloved by Heaven o'er all the world beside;
Where brighter suns dispense serene light,
And milder moons impart the night—
A land of beauty, virtue, valor, truth,
Time-lured age, and love-exalted youth.
The wandering minstrel, whose eye explores
The world's wide scenes, the most enchanting shores,
Views not a realm so beautiful and fair,
Nor breathes the spirit of a purer air;
In every clime the magnet of his soul,
Touched by remembrance, trembles to that pole.

For, in this land of Heaven's peculiar grace,
The heritage of nature's noblest race,
There is a spot of earth supremely blest,
A dearer, sweeter spot than all the rest,
Where man, creation's tyrant, casts aside
His sword and scepter, pangs and pride,
While in his softened looks benignly blend
The sire, the son, the husband, brother, friend,
Here woman reigns; the mother, daughter, wife,
Strews with fresh flowers the narrow way of life;
An angel guard of loves and graces lies,
Around her knees domestic duties meet,
And fireside pleasures gambol at her feet.
"Where shall that land, that spot of earth be found?"

Oh! thou man, a patriot?—look around;
Art thou shall find how'er thy footsteps roam
That land thy country, and that spot thy home.

Farmers' Department.

IMPORTANCE OF AGRICULTURE.

BY DANIEL WEBSTER.

I regard Agriculture as the leading interest of society; and as having, in all its relations, a direct and intimate bearing upon human comfort and national prosperity. . . . [The extraordinary discoveries and advances in chemical science are likely to operate greatly to the advantage of agriculture.] . . . Agriculture feeds us; to a great degree it clothes us; without it we could not have manufactures, and we should not have commerce. These all stand together, but they stand together like pillars in a cluster, the largest in the centre, and that largest is agriculture. . . . Let us remember that we live in a country where men grow not only their subsistence, but also their spirit of independence and manly freedom, from the ground they plough. . . . And whatever else may be understood, or overlooked, let us never forget that the cultivation of the earth, is the most important labor of man.

LIGHT IN STABLES.

It is a great mistake to construct stables without light. It is necessary both for health and comfort. Repeated experiments show that disease is much more frequent in dark, than in well lighted apartments. One who was long at the head of the medical staff in the Russian army, states that cases of disease on the dark side of an extensive barracks, was uniformly, for many years, in the proportion of three to one, to those on the side exposed to strong and uniform light. Humboldt has also remarked, that the residents of South America, who wear light clothing—thus allow a free ray of light to the skin—enjoyed immunity from various diseases, which prevailed extensively among the inhabitants of dark rooms, and underground locations. "Light, therefore, is a condition of vital activity, and in view of preserving the sight of a horse it is necessary that he have free access to the sun's rays while he is the inhabitant of the stable."

Oxen. In a good working ox we want to see the following qualities—Let him have large nostrils, a long face, a bright hazel eye; which will indicate docility and intelligence; a hoof rather long and not turned outward much, a straight back, a broad breast, wide gambrel, small tail and horns of medium size. When you find such an ox as that, he will be a good worker.—Exchange.

Inednotes.

"Will you keep an eye on my horse, my son, while I step in and get a drink?"
"Yes, sir."
Stranger goes in and gets his drink; comes out and finds his horse is missing.
"Where is my horse, boy?"
"He runned away, sir."
"Didn't I tell you to take care of him, you young scamp?"
"No sir; you told me to keep an eye on him, and so I did till he got clear out of sight."

At a hotel a short time since, a girl inquired of a gentleman at the table if his cup was not out.
"No," said he, "but my coffee is."
The poor girl was considerably confused, but determined to pay him in his own coin. While at dinner the stage drove up, and several coming in, the gentleman asked:
"Does the stage drive here?"
"No, sir," replied the girl in a sarcastic tone, "but the passengers do."

A lawyer once jeeringly asked a Quaker if he could tell him the difference between also and likewise.
"O, yes," said the Quaker, "Erskine is a great lawyer; his talents are admitted by almost every one. You are a lawyer, also, but not like wise!"

"What is it that sticks closer than a brother?" said a teacher to one of his class. "A postage stamp, by gum," said a young incorrigible.
